

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

THE GIFT OF
THE FORD FOUNDATION

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

Cl. No. 0:1M12:13

67;1

Ac. No. 285105

Date of release for loan

This book should be returned on or before the 24 date last stamped below. An overdue charge of 5 Paise will be collected for each day the book is kept overtime.

[illegible]

Oxford University Press, Ely House, London W. 1

GLASGOW NEW YORK TORONTO MELBOURNE WELLINGTON
CAPE TOWN SALISBURY IBADAN NAIROBI LUSAKA ADDIS ABABA
BOMBAY CALCUTTA MADRAS KARACHI LAHORE DACCA
KUALA LUMPUR HONG KONG

BROWNING'S
MEN AND WOMEN
1855

EDITED BY
G. E. HADOW

OXFORD
AT THE CLARENDON PRESS

FIRST PUBLISHED 1911
REPRINTED 1920, 1927, 1928, 1931, 1933
1937, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1949, 1951, 1961
1965, 1966

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

CONTENTS

	PAGE
NOTE ON THE TEXT	iv
INTRODUCTION	v
CONTENTS OF VOL. I.	3
TEXT OF VOL. I	5
CONTENTS OF VOL. II	165
TEXT OF VOL. II	167
INDEX OF FIRST LINES	316
INDEX OF TITLES	318
NOTES	319

NOTE.

THIS edition of Men and Women is a verbatim reprint of the original edition of 1855. The poems which it contains were subsequently rearranged by Browning, and in recent editions they will be found, together with others, under the heads Dramatic Lyrics, Dramatic Romances, Men and Women, and In a Balcony. Indexes of titles and of first lines have been appended, and to facilitate reference the lines of some of the poems have been numbered.

The following slight corrections have been made :

P. 154, l. 787, Halfway (Half way 1855, but cf. l. 789).

P. 159, l. 963, " The ("The 1855).

P. 226, l. 816, 'Tis (Tis 1855).

In Andrea del Sarto, p. 172, l. 157, ' You painting ' appears to have been a slip ; later editions correct to ' I painting '.

In Saul, p. 249, 18, l. 6, ' and why am I loth ' can hardly have been intentional ; later editions correct to ' why am I not loth ', which the sense requires.

INTRODUCTION

ROBERT BROWNING is so essentially a modern, so closely in touch with the thought and feeling of our own day, that it is with something of a shock that we realize that he is by birth not Early Victorian, but pre-Victorian, that he was contemporary with Godwin and Leigh Hunt, with Crabbe and Jane Austen, as well as with Matthew Arnold and Swinburne, that in his young days even educated and cultured people knew nothing of Shelley and Keats, and that his earliest poems were written in 1824, the year in which Byron died and the year before Huxley was born. It is true that the poet was only twelve years old when his proud father tried to find a publisher for Incondita; but the date is worth remembering, since Browning more than any other writer bridges the gulf which separates the early nineteenth century from the later. People often speak of the early Victorians with some contempt, and mention the years between 1837 and 1850—years when Dickens and Thackeray, Carlyle and Newman, Charlotte Brontë and Elizabeth Barrett, Browning and Tennyson, were all at work—as if they marked a period of dull respectability, when art and literature were at a low ebb, and solid mahogany furniture and black horsehair were the outward and visible signs of an entire absence of the finer shades of feeling. Not only is this untrue in itself—the names already quoted are a sufficient refutation—but the conception upon which it is based, that art and bohemianism are necessarily allied, is fundamentally false. No man can be entirely independent of his surroundings, but no man is dependent on them. The poet whom uncongenial circumstances reduce to silence is no 'mute inglorious Milton', but merely 'the little singer of a day'. Greatness shows itself in conquest, not in following the line of least resistance: Burns is a poet and a ploughman; Milton spent the best years of his life in writing state documents. A poet may run counter to all convention, as Shelley and Byron did, or he may be a worthy and respectable citizen like Chaucer and Shakespeare; but the greatest artists have not been those who ignored or resented material things, who looked upon the body merely as an irritating encumbrance, and put the world and the flesh into the same category as the devil, but those who were not afraid to face life, as it is, and to declare that the world is very good; those, in short, who were not ashamed of being human.

How good is man's life, the mere living! how fit to employ

All the heart and the soul and the senses for ever in joy.

Poetry has been defined¹ as 'the power of seeing the whole in the part', and the more carefully and reverently the part is studied the clearer becomes the vision of the whole. Contempt and condemnation may make a man a first-rate satirist, but never a first-rate poet, and helpless beating against circumstances is the mark not of poetic genius but of 'a second-rate sensitive mind'.

The early Victorians were largely under the influence of Byron—it was fashionable to be misunderstood and misappreciated, to have a mysterious past and a grief too deep for tears. Macaulay, in his essay on Moore's Life of Byron has drawn an amusing picture of the effects of Byronism on the rank and file of the young men of the day, and Tennyson's early poems show the same influence. The late nineteenth century had a no less morbid tendency to insist on the overpowering effects of sordid or commonplace surroundings. The hero of 1830 yearned for the infinite, and had a soul too great to be shackled by law or convention: the hero of 1890 lived in a slum tenement, or spent his life as a draper's assistant. Browning's earliest poem—if we except the childish efforts of 1824—Pauline, shows faint traces of the influence of Byron, but the prevailing note of his work is one of cheerfulness, not of regret. He can understand the terrible force of surroundings—we see that in The Flight of the Duchess—he softens down no sordid detail in the life of Mr. Sludge the Medium, but all the while his thoughts are set on conquest, not on defeat.

¹ By the late Dr. Caird of Balliol.

He was born in 1812 in typically respectable, middle-class surroundings. His father was a clerk in the Bank of England, and since he was a nonconformist the code of those days cut his son off from all possibility of public school or university education. Robert studied under a tutor at home and later worked for a short time at University College, London. But, while he lost something that the ordinary boy gains, this home training was not without its advantages. The elder Browning was interested in mediaeval literature, and Robert early absorbed a great deal of very out-of-the-way information without in the least realizing that the subjects in which he was interested were at all unusual. In later life we find him able to give technical instruction to a mediaeval organist, or to discuss the properties of snake-stone or gum-tragacanth with an Arab physician; his poems are crowded with allusions to men and books, to places and pictures and music, and yet all this wealth of detail is never obtrusive, for he has the poet's gift of transmuting information into knowledge. He makes an allusion because he sees some vital connexion between its subject and the matter that he is discussing, because it drives home some particular point, not because he wishes to display his learning, and the result is that we never think of it as 'learning' at all. He is at once scholar, idealist, and man of the world.

In the present day there is much talk about 'realism' and 'idealism', and the inference usually seems to be that the two are antagonistic, that 'realism' depicts facts, and that facts are necessarily sordid and ugly, while 'idealism' carries us to a world of beauty and delight which has no counterpart in real life. The poetry of Robert Browning directly contradicts this inference. There never was a more observant and conscientious realist than the poet who found Camberwell full of romance, who worshipped Shelley and Keats, and wandered across country, following the track of gipsy caravans. Not a detail escapes his eye, from the cut of a fur coat:—

Like a reindeer's yoke
Falls the lappet along the breast:
Sleeves for her arms to rest
Or to hang as my Love likes best:

to the way in which the small ferns fit .

Their teeth to the polished block:

The Heretic's Tragedy brings the whole scene before us as grimly and vividly as any similar description in Foxe's Book of Martyrs; but Browning's power of observation is something infinitely greater than merely an eye for minute detail. He makes no attempt to ignore or to soften down facts, he is not afraid to take life as it is, but he sees through the outward form into the reality which it clothes. 'Facts may become trivial by being merely true,' wrote Oliver Goldsmith, but the triviality is due not to the fact itself, but to the mind which sees in it only an isolated phenomenon. The very directions to the musicians in the Heretic's Tragedy are of dramatic value, they serve to intensify the horror and at the same time to make it bearable by making it more remote. Browning dares to write such lines as

Higgledy piggledy, packed we lie
Rats in a hamper, swine in a sty,

in a poem dealing with such a subject as that of Holy Cross Day. His sympathy with the Jews does not blind him to the sordid vulgarity of 'Aaron' and 'Solomon' and 'Micah' and the rest, he sees clearly enough that the results of persecution are by no means invariably ennobling; but to him the coarse and the sordid and the vulgar are human beings, and consequently it is worth while getting at their point of view. Holy Cross Day can find room for the meanness and ugliness engendered by persecution, and also for the faith which no persecution can kill:—

Thou art the Judge. We are bruised thus,
But the judgement over, join sides with us!
Thine too is the cause! and not more thine
Than ours, is the work of these dogs and swine
Whose life laughs through and spits at their creed
Who maintain thee in word, and defy thee in deed.

It is not difficult to arouse sympathy with an ideal character, but only a genius can lay bare 'the soul of goodness in things evil', and make us realize the point of view of the commonplace man or the criminal without unduly exalting trivialities or condoning crime. Scarcely any poet except Shakespeare has treated such widely different types of character, or has shown equal power of understanding base and degraded natures without for one moment lowering his own ideal. Browning can sympathize with the cynical worldly wisdom of Bishop Blougram, and the weakness of Andrea del Sarto, as well as with the sweetness and purity of the boy David,

God's child with his dew

On thy gracious gold hair, and those lilies still living and blue

Just broken to twine round thy harp-strings, the untamed genius of Fra Lippo Lippi, or the calm serenity of the poet of Valladolid. One thing, and one alone, rouses his scorn and contempt; he has no patience with those feeble souls who let 'I dare not wait upon I would'. The Statue and the Bust does not condone immorality, but shows us, as pitilessly as Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, the ineffectiveness of that so-called virtue which consists in the non-committal of actual crime. Duke Ferdinand and the lady have sinned in will and in thought; it is no moral scruple that restrains them, but mere lack of courage and energy, the same weakness that keeps asunder Chaucer's Troilus and Cressida; wherefore—

Surely they see not God, I know

Nor all that chivalry of His,

The soldier-saints who, row on row

Burn upward each to his point of blue—
 Since the end of life being manifest,
 He had cut his way thro' the world to this.

Courage, in Browning's eyes, is a quality which does not know defeat :—

—what if I fail of my purpose here ?
 It is but to keep the nerves at a strain,
 To dry one's eyes and laugh at a fall,
 And baffled get up and begin again,—
 So the chace takes up one's life, that's all.

Again and again we are reminded of Shelley's saying :
 'I always go on till I am stopped ; and I am never stopped.' Browning has the same dauntless confidence, the same unquenchable enthusiasm. With Shelley and Carlyle, he believes that truth must be victoribus, and he shares the poet's joyous creed :—

For love and beauty and delight
 There is no death nor change.

Carlyle had taught his generation to face life with grim courage, to work without seeking to be paid for it by happiness. Browning—who inherited much of Carlyle's influence—taught an even greater and more inspiring doctrine :—

All we have willed or hoped or dreamed of good, shall exist ;
 Not its semblance, but itself ; no beauty, nor good,
 nor power
 Whose voice has gone forth, but each survives for the melodist,
 When eternity confirms the conception of an hour ;¹

¹ Abt Vogler.

though at the same time this belief in a future development never led him to underestimate the value of present effort.

O lover of my soul, O soldier saint
No work begun shall ever pause for death, cries Pompilia ; but the work must be begun here and now, there is no place in any world for the shirker and coward.

When it was finally decided that Browning was to take up literature as a career, he proceeded to prepare himself by carefully mastering the contents of Johnson's dictionary, and the action was eminently characteristic in its practical energy and in the witness it bore to the fact that from the very outset he realized that poetry must be based on knowledge as well as on imagination. The poet is born and not made, but something more than the mere accident of birth is required of him. Many otherwise intelligent persons speak as if poetry were a matter of divine inspiration and nothing else, as if training and technique were hindrances rather than helps. It would be as sensible to say that the study of harmony would be likely to hinder the development of a composer, or attention to drawing hamper the genius of an artist. Browning, young as he was, knew that hard work is essential to success, and he flung himself into the task of preparation with characteristic vehemence. Years later Dr. Jowett said that until he met Browning he 'had no idea that there was a perfectly sensible poet in the world'; and few things are more striking than the combination of enthusiasm and sanity evident both in his life and his work.

In 1845 Browning first made acquaintance with Elizabeth Barrett. They had been interested in each others poems and had corresponded, but Miss Barrett's health had prevented them from meeting. She was suffering from the effects of a fall from her horse, and still more from the régime of her father, a morbidly religious man who ruled his household with pious severity. Mr. Barrett had made up his mind that his daughter was dying, and insisted on treating her as if she stood already at the gates of death. Browning almost forced his way into the sick-room, and his breezy cheerfulness brought a breath of wholesome air to the invalid. They fell in love with each other at once, but it was only after long and severe struggles that Browning, knowing all hope of obtaining her father's consent to be out of the question, persuaded her to slip quietly out of the house and marry him without the knowledge of her family. She returned home after the ceremony, and it was characteristic of Browning that during the time that elapsed between their marriage and the day that she finally left her father's house and joined him, he never called on her. He would have been forced to ask for 'Miss Barrett', and he could not bring himself to lie to the servant-girl.

Browning's love for his wife was one of those great passions which sweep through a life, dominating every thought and feeling. His was the stronger character of the two, and he was far too independent a being ever to merge his personality in another; but he loved her as a man might well love the woman whom he had saved from death, and he revered her as a greater poet than himself. He is the least subjective of love-poets, and it is only occasionally that he gives us a glimpse of his own life. In By the Fireside, in One Word More, in the wonderful death song of Prospice, the veil of reticence is lifted for one moment, and we see, not the poet revealing love, but the man holding out his hands to the woman whom he worships; but

God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures
Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,
One to show a woman when he loves her ;

and, as a rule, he keeps the second for her alone. All that he does is hers, and he is impatient of the limitations which will not let him :—

Paint you pictures, no, nor carve you statues ;
Make you music that should all-express me ;

but since in this life,

Verse and nothing else have I to give you,

all his verse is hers :—

Other heights in other lives, God willing—
All the gifts from all the heights, your own, Love.

But if Browning writes few poems directly addressed to his wife or dealing with his own love story, he never tires of treating of the theme of love. To him it is the one thing that makes life worth living. The whole meaning of Love Among the Ruins is summed up in the final line—and the same note sounds in A Lover's Quarrel, in Life in a Love, in Evelyn Hope. In Andrea del Sarto we see the weak man strangled by a passion that is too great for him ; In a Balcony shows us the momentary glory love can lend to a woman neither beautiful nor young :—

Love is best,

Now I would face the world with my new life,
With my new crown. I'll walk around the rooms
And then come back and tell you how it feels.
How soon a smile of God can change the world !
How we are all made for happiness—how work
Grows play, adversity a winning fight.

He does not give us a sermon on the immorality of a loveless marriage, as Tennyson does in Locksley Hall ; but in The Flight of the Duchess he shows its effect on a noble spirit, and in The Statue and the Bust he lays bare the pettiness of two souls who do not know what passion means. He offers no solution of the problem presented by Any Wife to Any Husband, when love lies between two beings on a different plane of character, or of the tragedy of unrequited love, but he has no doubt as to the purpose of his own life :

I am named and known by that hour's feat,
There took my station and degree.
So grew my own small life complete
As nature obtained her best of me—
One born to love you, sweet !

This is something as different from the sensuous passion of Rossetti or Swinburne as it is from the conventional and contemptuous compliment of Congreve's lyrics to Amoret or Selina. Mrs. Browning's Sonnets from the Portuguese, Christina Rossetti's Monna Innominata, beautiful as they are, have a tinge of morbidity when placed beside the frank manly exaltation of Browning's love poetry. We must go back to such lyrics as 'Hark, hark the Lark', such love scenes as those between Portia and Bassanio, to find the same unselfconscious joyous delight in love, the same exaltation of reverence and rapture. Shelley's love poetry, with all its beauty, is apt to be 'All breathing human passion far above'; Tennyson's is too analytical and self-centred, we grow weary of the plaints of Locksley Hall and Maud; but Browning unites the enthusiasm of the lover with the sanity and breadth of the true poet.

He was married in September, 1846, and after the interval to which reference has been made, the Brownings left England and settled in Italy, where they lived until Mrs. Browning's death in 1861. The influence of Italy shows itself in a very large number of his poems. It is not only that his knowledge of early Italian art was, as Rossetti said, 'encyclopaedic,' he loved everything connected with the country of his adoption, people, language, and scenery. He showed the keenest interest in the struggle which ended in the establishment of a united Italy, and his admiration for Garibaldi, Cavour, and Mazzini, was unbounded.

His attitude towards art is suggestive. He had considerable knowledge of the technicalities of painting, and he had studied the old masters as few professional critics had done. Mrs. Browning, in one of her letters, speaks of herself as urging her husband to write poetry, and having no success because he would spend his entire day in modelling clay busts, which he smashed as soon as they were finished. Sculpture and painting were as dear to him as poetry itself, but his criticisms of individual artists are always made from the dramatic, not the artistic point of view.

Compare for one moment Browning and Ruskin.

Ruskin gives us a wonderfully vivid description of the picture with which he is dealing, we see every fold of the drapery, every jewel on sword-hilt or turban ; we realize not only the technical skill of the artist, his management of perspective, of light and shade, his particular gift of colour or drawing, but also the idea which he is trying to convey, and it is art and the capabilities of art in which our interest centres. Take, for example, his description of Faith in Veronese's picture of his family :—

Perhaps a somewhat disappointing Faith at first sight, for her face is not in any special way exalted or refined. Veronese knew that Faith had to companion simple and slowhearted people, perhaps oftener than able or refined people—does not therefore insist on her being severely intellectual, or looking as if she were always in the best company. So she is distinguished by her pure white (not bright white) dress, her delicate hand, her golden hair drifted in light ripples across her breast, from which the white robes fall nearly in the shape of a shield—the shield of faith (Modern Painters V. ix. 3), and place beside it a passage from Fra Lippo Lippi :—

I shall paint
God in the midst, Madonna and her babe
Ringed by a bowery, flowery angel-brood,
Lilies and vestments and white faces, sweet
As puff on puff of grated orris-root
When ladies crowd the church at midsummer.
And then in front of course a saint or two—
Saint John, because he saves the Florentines,
Saint Ambrose, who puts down in black and white
The convent's friends and gives them a long day,
And Job, I must have him there past mistake,
The man of Uz (and Us without the z, Painters who need his patience) . . .

In both cases we see the picture clearly enough, but in the one we are interested in it, in the other we are occupied neither with painting nor with the Madonna and the saints, but with Fra Lippo Lippi. To Browning art is the expression of the individual: to Ruskin it is the individual expression of an ideal. Neither judges from the purely artistic standpoint, but Ruskin approaches it the more nearly. The humour of his description throws light upon his own character: the flippancy of Fra Lippo Lippi reveals the painter, not the poet.

Browning, as we have said, finds nothing commonplace or uninteresting, but his interest centres in man and man's relation to the universe—hence his love of ethical and religious speculation. What is the purpose of life? What is to follow hereafter? What is the relation between man and God? These are questions to which he returns again and again. In Tennyson's poetry we see a clear and placid reflection of the problems which were agitating men's minds in his day, but not even In Memoriam gives us the sense of struggle and effort and passion which pervades Christmas Eve or The Ring and the Book. Tennyson's heroes seem to be perpetually asking, 'Why should this happen to me?' Browning's ask the far greater question, 'Why should this happen?' Both poets lived through the storm and stress of two great religious and intellectual upheavals, the Oxford Movement and the battle which raged round Darwin's statement of the theory of evolution; and while neither of them took any active part in either struggle, it was inevitable that their poetry should show the influence of the restless and inquiring spirit of the age. Old beliefs were being swept away on the one hand, and on the other men were urging the claims of authority with passionate devotion. In Mr. Sludge, as in Bishop Blougram's Apology, Browning proves his ability to see through sham and formalism, his resolute determination to face the truth, his irritation with forms and ceremonies as such. But Cardinal Wiseman showed his insight into character when, after reading Blougram, he wrote that he should never be surprised to hear of its author's conversion to Catholicism—not that Browning ever came within measurable distance of being a Catholic, but, as the Cardinal realized, reverence, not contempt, was the spirit that inspired him. He was not, and could never have been, a writer of hymns, or of what is usually meant by religious poetry, but two main factors dominate life as he sees it—human love and divine.

I count life just a stuff
To try the soul's strength on, educe the man, says Norbert, and in poem after poem we see the test being applied, and find that love is the touchstone. It is not that Browning is blind to other interests—one of the finest of his shorter poems, the Grammarian's Funeral, shows a man thirsting not for love but for knowledge, but even here the key lies in the lines which describe how he throws himself on God, and unperplexed

Seeking shall find Him.

In Karshish, in Saul, in Cleon, one thought shines out pre-eminent—

So, through the thunder comes a human voice
Saying, 'O heart I made, a heart beats here!
Face, my hands fashioned, see it in myself.

Thou hast no power nor may'st conceive of mine,
But love I gave thee, with Myself to love,
And thou must love me who have died for thee.'

Not Milton himself has dared more boldly 'to justify the ways of God to man', not even Milton has such passionate, adoring reverence for 'the All-Loving'. Browning is a mystic in the truest sense of the word, he does not lose himself in vague emotionalism, or scorn the common things of everyday life, but to him earth no less than heaven declares the glory of God.

It is strange that with such wide sympathies and such a power of appreciating the right value of detail—two of the qualities most essential to dramatic writing—Browning fails as a dramatist. This is not the place in which to discuss his dramas proper, but even such fragments as In a Balcony show that he is no playwright. He has a marvellous power of seizing character at one particular moment, but with one great exception—that of Caponsacchi in the Ring and the Book—he cannot show us character in the making. We may see, as in Fra Lippo Lippi, or Mr. Sludge, how the man has come to be what he is, but we do not see him develop before our eyes; we see him thinking, meditating, analysing his own character and the character of others, but we do not as a rule see him acting; as a recent writer¹ has said, 'Browning . . . prefers to take the action as past. In his plays little happens, though much is said.' The long speeches in In a Balcony are practically so many soliloquies, and, worse still from a dramatic point of view, Norbert, Constance, and the Queen all soliloquize in exactly the same manner. Browning can project himself into character of many various kinds, but he never loses his own identity ; however much personality and situation may differ, the voice is always that of the poet himself. Moreover the voice of Browning is like that of no other man who ever lived. It is not only that all his characters from David to Cleon delight in metaphysical speculation, but they clothe their thoughts in the same strange medley of poetic imagery and harsh, abrupt phraseology, which often needs to be helped out with dots and dashes. There is no poet who expects more to be read between his lines, none who passes from such lyric beauty as breathes in Saul, or The Last Ride Together, to such grotesque ugliness as that of Master Hugues of Saxe-Gotha, or the almost insufferable jingle of Love among the Ruins. Again, the obscurity with which he is charged—not altogether unjustly—militates against him as a dramatist. There is a well-known story of Carlyle's writing to say that his wife had read Sordello with great interest, and would be glad to know if Sordello were a man, a place, or a book ; and the accusation which it implies is not unfounded. This obscurity was not a pose or an affectation, it sprang from his habit of following a thought into its most minute ramifications, and of taking it for granted that the reader could leap chasms which he himself crossed at a stride. He has a curious fondness for inverting his phrases—a trick which characterizes his letters as well as his poems—and the effect, though vigorous, is often crude and harsh. Absence of beauty or ornament with him is very different from the naked simplicity of Wordsworth ; at times there is something barbarous in the fierce strength of his versification.

¹ Prof. Walker, Literature of the Victorian Era, p. 321.

After his wife's death, Browning returned to England, and devoted himself to the education of their son. Honours were showered upon him, and he showed a particular delight in the honorary fellowship of Balliol, which brought him into such close touch with Oxford. To the end of his life he retained his intellectual, and much of his physical vigour. Jocoseria, Ferishtah's Fancies, and Parleyings with Certain People of Importance in their Day, were all written after he was 70, and Asolando was published in the year of his death (1889); and though opinions differ as to the merits of these poems, the mere fact of their production at such an age is a proof of unusual energy and vitality.

We are as yet too near Browning to be able to estimate his claim to immortality. Probably the very qualities which led to the formation of Browning societies in his lifetime—his interest in abstract problems, his discussion of the thoughts which were agitating his own generation—will tell against him in another age, concerned with other problems of its own, and his poetry will never live by virtue of sheer intrinsic beauty, like the poetry of Shelley or Keats; but insight into character must surely have its value in any age, and if in years to come men relegate Paracelsus and Sordello to the topmost shelves of their libraries, it is difficult to believe that they will ever impoverish themselves by forgetting Pompilia and Caponsacchi, Fra Lippo Lippi, and Bishop Blougram, and all the rest of Browning's noble portrait gallery of Men and Women.

MEN AND WOMEN.

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. I.

LONDON:

CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193, PICCADILLY.

1855.

CONTENTS.

	Page
LOVE AMONG THE RUINS	5
A LOVERS' QUABREL	9
EVELYN HOPE	16
UP AT A VILLA—DOWN IN THE CITY. (AS DISTINGUISHED BY AN ITALIAN PERSON OF QUALITY.)	19
A WOMAN'S LAST WORD	24
FRA LIPPO LIPPI	26
A TOCCATA OF GALUPPI'S	39
BY THE FIRE-SIDE	43
ANY WIFE TO ANY HUSBAND	54
AN EPISTLE CONTAINING THE STRANGE MEDICAL EXPERI- ENCE OF KARSHISH, THE ARAB PHYSICIAN	60
MESMERISM	70
A SERENADE AT THE VILLA	76
MY STAB	79

	Page
INSTANS TYBANNUS	80
A PRETTY WOMAN	83
"CHILDE ROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER CAME." ¹² . . .	87
RESPECTABILITY	95
A LIGHT WOMAN	96
THE STATUE AND THE BUST	99
LOVE IN A LIFE	109
LIFE IN A LOVE	110
HOW IT STRIKES A CONTEMPORARY	111
THE LAST RIDE TOGETHER	115
THE PATRIOT.—AN OLD STORY	120
MASTER HUGUES OF SAXE-GOTHA	122
BISHOP BLOUGRAM'S APOLOGY	128
MEMORABILLIA	162

MEN AND WOMEN.

LOVE AMONG THE RUINS.

1.

WHERE the quiet-coloured end of evening smiles
Miles and miles
On the solitary pastures where our sheep
Half-asleep
Tinkle homeward thro' the twilight, stray or stop
As they crop—

2.

Was the site once of a city great and gay,
(So they say)
Of our country's very capital, its prince Ages since
Held his court in, gathered councils, wielding far
Peace or war.

3.

Now—the country does not even boast a tree,
 As you see,
 To distinguish slopes of verdure, certain rills
 From the hills
 Intersect and give a name to, (else they run Into one)

4.

Where the domed and daring palace shot its spires
 Up like fires
 O'er the hundred-gated circuit of a wall
 Bounding all,
 Made of marble, men might march on nor be prest,
 Twelve abreast.

5.

And such plenty and perfection, see, of grass
 Never was !
 Such a carpet as, this summer-time, o'erspreads
 And embeds
 Every vestige of the city, guessed alone,
 Stock or stone—

6.

Where a multitude of men breathed joy and woe
 Long ago ;
 Lust of glory pricked their hearts up, dread of shame
 Struck them tame ;
 And that glory and that shame alike, the gold
 Bought and sold.

7.

Now,—the single little turret that remains
 On the plains,
By the caper overrooted, by the gourd
 Overscored,
While the patching houseleek's head of blossom winks
 Through the chinks—

8.

Marks the basement whence a tower in ancient time
 Sprang sublime,
And a burning ring all round, the chariots traced
 As they raced,
And the monarch and his minions and his dames
 Viewed the games.

9.

And I know, while thus the quiet-coloured eve
 Smiles to leave
To their folding, all our many-tinkling fleece
 In such peace,
And the slopes and rills in undistinguished grey Melt away—

10.

That a girl with eager eyes and yellow hair
 Waits me there
In the turret, whence the charioteers caught soul
 For the goal, [dumb
When the king looked, where she looks now, breathless,
 Till I come.

11.

But he looked upon the city, every side,
Far and wide,
All the mountains topped with temples, all the glades'
Colonnades,
All the causeys, bridges, aqueducts,—and then,
All the men !

12.

When I do come, she will speak not, she will stand,
Either hand
On my shoulder, give her eyes the first embrace
Of my face,
Ere we rush, ere we extinguish sight and speech
Each on each.

13.

In one year they sent a million fighters forth
South and north,
And they built their gods a brazen pillar high
As the sky,
Yet reserved a thousand chariots in full force—
Gold, of course.

14.

Oh, heart ! oh, blood that freezes, blood that burns !
Earth's returns
For whole centuries of folly, noise and sin !
Shut them in,
With their triumphs and their glories and the rest.
Love is best !

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

1.

Oh, what a dawn of day !
How the March sun feels like May !
 All is blue again
 After last night's rain,
And the South dries the hawthorn-spray.
 Only, my Love's away !
I'd as lief that the blue were grey.

2.

Runnels, which rillels swell,
Must be dancing down the dell
 With a foamy head
 On the beryl bed
Paven smooth as a hermit's cell ;
 Each with a tale to tell,
Could my Love but attend as well.

3.

Dearest, three months ago !
When we lived blocked-up with snow,—
 When the wind would edge
 In and in his wedge,
In, as far as the point could go—
 Not to our ingle, though,
Where we loved each the other so !

4.

Laughs with so little cause !
We devised games out of straws.
 We would try and trace
 One another's face
In the ash, as an artist draws ;
 Free on each other's flaws,
How we chattered like two church daws !

5.

What's in the " Times ? "—a scold
At the emperor deep and cold ;
 He has taken a bride
 To his gruesome side,
That's as fair as himself is bold :
 There they sit ermine-stoled,
And she powders her hair with gold.

6.

Fancy the Pampas' sheen !
Miles and miles of gold and green

Where the sun-flowers blow
In a solid glow,
And to break now and then the screen—
Black neck and eyeballs keen,
Up a wild horse leaps between !

7.

Try, will our table turn ?
Lay your hands there light, and yearn
Till the yearning slips
Thro' the finger tips
In a fire which a few discern,
And a very few feel burn,
And the rest, they may live and learn !

8.

Then we would up and pace,
For a change, about the place,
Each with arm o'er neck.
'Tis our quarter-deck,
We are seamen in woeful case.
Help in the ocean-space !
Or, if no help, we'll embrace.

9.

See, how she looks now, drest
In a sledging-cap and vest.
'Tis a huge fur cloak—
Like a reindeer's yoke
Falls the lappet along the breast :
Sleeves for her arms to rest,
Or to hang, as my Love likes best.

10.

Teach me to flirt a fan
As the Spanish ladies can,
Or I tint your lip
With a burnt stick's tip
And you turn into such a man !
Just the two spots that span
Half the bill of the young male swan.

11.

Dearest, three months ago
When the mesmeriser Snow
With his hand's first sweep
Put the earth to sleep,
'Twas a time when the heart could show
All—how was earth to know,
'Neath the mute hand's to-and-fro !

12.

Dearest, three months ago
When we loved each other so,
Lived and loved the same
Till an evening came
When a shaft from the Devil's bow
Pierced to our ingle-glow,
And the friends were friend and foe !

13.

Not from the heart beneath—
'Twas a bubble born of breath,

Neither sneer nor vaunt,
Nor reproach nor taunt.
See a word, how it severeth !
Oh, power of life and death
In the tongue, as the Preacher saith !

14.

Woman, and will you cast
For a word, quite off at last,
Me, your own, your yon,—
Since, as Truth is true,
I was you all the happy past—
Me do you leave aghast
With the memories we amassed ?

15.

Love, if you knew the light
That your soul casts in my sight,
How I look to you
For the pure and true,
And the beauteous and the right,—
Bear with a moment's spite
When a mere mote threatens the white ?

16.

What of a hasty word ?
Is the fleshly heart not stirred
By a worm's pin-prick
Where its roots are quick ?
See the eye, by a fly's-foot blurred—
Ear, when a straw is heard
Scratch the brain's coat of curd !

17.

Foul be the world or fair,
More or less, how can I care ?
 'Tis the world the same
 For my praise or blame,
And endurance is easy there.
 Wrong in the one thing rare—
Oh, it is hard to bear !

18.

Here's the spring back or close,
When the almond-blossom blows ;
 We shall have the word
 In that minor third
There is none but the cuckoo knows—
 Heaps of the guelder-rose !
I must bear with it, I suppose.

19.

Could but November come,
Were the noisy birds struck dumb
 At the warning slash
 Of his driver's-lash—
I would laugh like the valiant Thumb
 Facing the castle glum
And the giant's fee-faw-fum !

20.

Then, were the world well stript
Of the gear wherein equipped

We can stand apart.
Heart dispense with heart
In the sun, with the flowers unnipped,—
Oh, the world's hangings ripped,
We were both in a bare-walled crypt !

21.

Each in the crypt would cry
“ But one freezes here ! and why ?
When a heart as chill
At my own would thrill
Back to life, and its fires out-fly ?
Heart, shall we live or die ?
The rest, . . . settle it by and by ! ”

22.

So, she'd efface the score,
And forgive me as before.
Just at twelve o'clock
I shall hear her knock
In the worst of a storm's uproar—
I shall pull her through the door—
I shall have her for evermore !

EVELYN HOPE.

i.

BEAUTIFUL Evelyn Hope is dead
Sit and watch by her side an hour.
That is her book-shelf, this her bed ;
She plucked that piece of geranium-flower,
Beginning to die too, in the glass.
Little has yet been changed, I think—
The shutters are shut, no light may pass
Save two long rays thro' the hinge's chink.

2.

Sixteen years old when she died !
Perhaps she had scarcely heard my name—
It was not her time to love : beside,
Her life had many a hope and aim,
Duties enough and little cares,
And now was quiet, now astir—
Till God's hand beckoned unawares,
And the sweet white brow is all of her.

3.

Is it too late then, Evelyn Hope ?
What, your soul was pure and true,
The good stars met in your horoscope,
Made you of spirit, fire and dew—
And just because I was thrice as old,
And our paths in the world diverged so wide,
Each was nought to each, must I be told ?
We were fellow mortals, nought beside ?

4.

No, indeed ! for God above
Is great to grant, as mighty to make,
And creates the love to reward the love,—
I claim you still, for my own love's sake !
Delayed it may be for more lives yet,
Through worlds I shall traverse, not a few—
Much is to learn and much to forget
Ere the time be come for taking you.

5.

But the time will come,—at last it will,
When, Evelyn Hope, what meant, I shall say
In the lower earth, in the years long still,
That body and soul so pure and gay ?
Why your hair was amber, I shall divine.
And your mouth of your own geranium's red—
And what you would do with me, in fine,
In the new life come in the old one's stead.

6.

I have lived, I shall say, so much since then,
Given up myself so many times,
Gained me the gains of various men,
Ransacked the ages, spoiled the climes ;
Yet one thing, one, in my soul's full scope,
Either I missed or itself missed me—
And I want and find you, Evelyn Hope !
What is the issue ? let us see !

I loved you, Evelyn, all the while ;
My heart seemed full as it could hold—
There was place and to spare for the frank young smile
And the red young mouth and the hair's young gold.
So, hush,—I will give you this leaf to keep—
See, I shut it inside the sweet cold hand.
There, that is our secret ! go to sleep ;
You will wake, and remember, and understand.

UP AT A VILLA—DOWN IN THE CITY.

(AS DISTINGUISHED BY AN ITALIAN PERSON OF QUALITY.)

1.

HAD I but plenty of money, money enough and to spare,
The house for me, no doubt, were a house in the city-square.

Ah, such a life, such a life, as one leads at the window
there !

2.

Something to see, by Bacchus, something to hear, at least !

There, the whole day long, one's life is a perfect feast ;
While up at a villa one lives, I maintain it, no more than a beast.

3.

Well now, look at our villa ! stuck like the horn of a bull

Just on a mountain's edge as bare as the creature's skull,
Save a mere shag of a bush with hardly a leaf to pull !
—I scratch my own, sometimes, to see if the hair's turned wool.

4.

But the city, oh the city—the square with the houses!

Why?

They are stone-faced, white as a curd, there's something to take the eye!

Houses in four straight lines, not a single front awry!

You watch who crosses and gossips, who saunters, who hurries by:

Green blinds, as a matter of course, to draw when the sun gets high;

And the shops with fanciful signs which are painted properly.

5.

What of a villa? Though winter be over in March by rights,

'Tis May perhaps ere the snow shall have withered well
off the heights:

You've the brown ploughed land before, where the oxen steam and wheeze,

And the hills over-smoked behind by the faint grey olive trees.

6.

Is it better in May I ask you? you've summer all at once;

In a day he leaps complete with a few strong April suns!

'Mid the sharp short emerald wheat, scarce risen three fingers well,

The wild tulip, at end of its tube, blows out its great red bell,
Like a thin clear bubble of blood, for the children to pick and sell.

7.

Is it ever hot in the square ? There's a fountain to spout and splash !
In the shade it sings and springs ; in the shine such foam-bows flash
On the horses with curling fish-tails, that prance and paddle and pash
Round the lady atop in the conch—fifty gazers do not abash,
Though all that she wears is some weeds round her waist in a sort of sash !

8.

All the year long at the villa, nothing's to see though you linger,
Except yon cypress that points like Death's lean lifted forefinger.
Some think fireflies pretty, when they mix in the corn and mingle,
Or thrid the stinking hemp till the stalks of it seem a-tingle.
Late August or early September, the stunning cicada is shrill,
And the bees keep their tiresome whine round the resinous firs on the hill.
Enough of the seasons,—I spare you the months of the fever and chill.

9.

Ere opening your eyes in the city, the blessed church-bells begin :

No sooner the bells leave off, than the diligence rattles in :
You get the pick of the news, and it costs you never a pin.
By and by there's the travelling doctor gives pills, lets blood, draws teeth ;

Or the Pulcinello-trumpet breaks up the market beneath.
At the post-office such a scene-picture—the new play, piping hot !

And a notice how, only this morning, three liberal thieves were shot.

Above it, behold the archbishop's most fatherly of rebukes,

And beneath, with his crown and his lion, some little new law of the Duke's !

Or a sonnet with flowery marge, to the Reverend Don
So-and-so

Who is Dante, Boccaccio, Petrarca, Saint Jerome, and Cicero,

“ And moreover,” (the sonnet goes rhyming,) “ the skirts of St. Paul has reached,

Having preached us those six Lent-lectures more unctuous than ever he preached.”

Noon strikes,—here sweeps the procession ! our Lady borne smiling and smart

With a pink gauze gown all spangles, and seven swords stuck in her heart !

Bang, whang, whang, goes the drum, tootle-te-tootle the fife ;
No keeping one's haunches still : it's the greatest pleasure in life.

10.

But bless you, it's dear—it's dear ! fowls, wine, at double the rate.

They have clapped a new tax upon salt, and what oil pays passing the gate

It's a horror to think of. And so, the villa for me, not the city !

Beggars can scarcely be choosers—but still—ah, the pity, the pity !

Look, two and two go the priests, then the monks with cowls and sandals,

And the penitents dressed in white shirts, a-holding the yellow candles.

One, he carries a flag up straight, and another a cross with handles,

And the Duke's guard brings up the rear, for the better prevention of scandals.

Bang, whang, whang, goes the drum, tootle-te-tootle the fife.

Oh, a day in the city-square, there is no such pleasure in life !

A WOMAN'S LAST WORD.

1.

LET'S contend no more, Love,
Strive nor weep—
All be as before, Love,
—Only sleep !

2.

What so wild as words are !
—I and thou
In debate, as birds are,
Hawk on bough !

3.

See the creature stalking
While we speak—
Hush and hide the talking,
Cheek on cheek !

4.

What so false as truth is,
False to thee ?
Where the serpent's tooth is,
Shun the tree—

5.

Where the apple reddens
Never pry—
Lest we lose our Edens,
Eve and I !

6.

Be a god and hold me
With a charm—
Be a man and fold me
With thine arm !

7.

Teach me, only teach, Love !
As I ought
I will speak thy speech, Love
Think thy thought—

8.

Meet, if thou require it,
Both demands,
Laying flesh and spirit
In thy hands !

9.

That shall be to-morrow
Not to-night :
I must bury sorrow
Out of sight.

10.

—Must a little weep, Love,
—Foolish me !
And so fall asleep, Love,
Loved by thee.

FRA LIPPO LIPPI.

I AM poor brother Lippo, by your leave !
You need not clap your torches to my face.
Zooks, what's to blame ? you think you see a monk !
What, it's past midnight, and you go the rounds,
And here you catch me at an alley's end
Where sportive ladies leave their doors ajar.
The Carmine's my cloister : hunt it up,
Do,—harry out, if you must show your zeal,
Whatever rat, there, haps on his wrong hole,
And nip each softling of a wee white mouse, 10
Weke, weke, that's crept to keep him company !
Aha, you know your betters ? Then, you'll take
Your hand away that's fiddling on my throat,
And please to know me likewise. Who am I ?
Why, one, sir, who is lodging with a friend
Three streets off—he's a certain . . . how d'ye call ?
Master—a . . . Cosimo of the Medici,
In the house that caps the corner. Boh ! you were best !
Remember and tell me, the day you're hanged,
How you affected such a gullet's-gripe ! 20

But you, sir, it concerns you that your knaves
Pick up a manner nor discredit you.
Zooks, are we pilchards, that they sweep the streets
And count fair prize what comes into their net ?
He's Judas to a tittle, that man is !
Just such a face ! why, sir, you make amends.
Lord, I'm not angry ! Bid your hangdogs go
Drink out this quarter-florin to the health
Of the munificent House that harbours me
(And many more beside, lads ! more beside !) 30
And all's come square again. I'd like his face—
His, elbowing on his comrade in the door
With the pike and lantern,—for the slave that holds
John Baptist's head a-dangle by the hair
With one hand (" look you, now," as who should say)
And his weapon in the other, yet unwiped !
It's not your chance to have a bit of chalk,
A wood-coal or the like ? or you should see !
Yes, I'm the painter, since you style me so.
What, brother Lippo's doings, up and down, 40
You know them and they take you ? like enough !
I saw the proper twinkle in your eye—
'Tell you I liked your looks at very first.
Let's sit and set things straight now, hip to haunch.
Here's spring come, and the nights one makes up bands
To roam the town and sing out carnival,
And I've been three weeks shut within my mew,
A-painting for the great man, saints and saints
And saints again. I could not paint all night—
Ouf ! I leaned out of window for fresh air. 50
There came a hurry of feet and little feet,
A sweep of lute-strings, laughs, and whiffs of song,—

Flower o' the broom,
Take away love, and our earth is a tomb !
Flower o' the quince,
I let Lisa go, and what good's in life since ?
Flower o' the thyme—and so on. Round they went.
 Scarce had they turned the corner when a titter,
 Like the skipping of rabbits by moonlight,—three slim shapes—

And a face that looked up . . . zooks, sir, flesh and blood,
 That's all I'm made of ! Into shreds it went, 61
 Curtain and counterpane and coverlet,
 All the bed furniture—a dozen knots,
 There was a ladder ! down I let myself,
 Hands and feet, scrambling somehow, and so dropped,
 And after them. I came up with the fun
 Hard by St. Laurence, hail fellow, well met,— Flower o' the rose,

If I've been merry, what matter who knows ?
 And so as I was stealing back again 70
 To get to bed and have a bit of sleep
 Ere I rise up to-morrow and go work
 On Jerome knocking at his poor old breast
 With his great round stone to subdue the flesh,
 You snap me of the sudden. Ah, I see !
 Though your eye twinkles still, you shake your head—
 Mine's shaved,—a monk, you say—the sting's in that !
 If Master Cosimo announced himself,
 Mum's the word naturally ; but a monk !
 Come, what am I a beast for ? tell us, now ! 80
 I was a baby when my mother died
 And father died and left me in the street.
 I starved there, God knows how, a year or two

On fig-skins, melon-parings, rinds and shucks,
 Refuse and rubbish. One fine frosty day
 My stomach being empty as your hat,
 The wind doubled me up and down I went.
 Old Aunt Lapaccia trussed me with one hand,
 (Its fellow was a stinger as I knew)
 And so along the wall, over the bridge, 90
 By the straight cut to the convent. Six words, there,
 While I stood munching my first bread that month :
 "So, boy, you're minded," quoth the good fat father Wiping his own mouth, 'twas refection-time,—
 "To quit this very miserable world ?
 Will you renounce" . . . The mouthful of bread ?
 thought I ;
 By no means ! Brief, they made a monk of me ;
 I did renounce the world, its pride and greed,
 Palace, farm, villa, shop and banking-house,
 Trash, such as these poor devils of Medici 100
 Have given their hearts to—all at eight years old.
 Well, sir, I found in time, you may be sure,
 'Twas not for nothing—the good bellyful,
 The warm serge and the rope that goes all round,
 And day-long blessed idleness beside !
 "Let's see what the urchin's fit for"—that came next.
 Not overmuch their way, I must confess.
 Such a to-do ! they tried me with their books.
 Lord, they'd have taught me Latin in pure waste !
Flower o' the clove, 110
All the Latin I construe is, "amo" I love !
 But, mind you, when a boy starves in the streets
 Eight years together, as my fortune was,
 Watching folk's faces to know who will fling

The bit of half-stripped grape-bunch he desires,
 And who will curse or kick him for his pains—
 Which gentleman processional and fine,
 Holding a candle to the Sacrament
 Will wink and let him lift a plate and catch
 The droppings of the wax to sell again, 120
 Or holla for the Eight and have him whipped,—
 How say I ?—nay, which dog bites, which lets drop
 His bone from the heap of offal in the street !
 —The soul and sense of him grow sharp alike,
 He learns the look of things, and none the less
 For admonitions from the hunger-pinch.
 I had a store of such remarks, be sure,
 Which, after I found leisure, turned to use :
 I drew men's faces on my copy-books,
 Scrawled them within the antiphonary's marge, 130
 Joined legs and arms to the long music-notes,
 Found nose and eyes and chin for A.s and B.s,
 And made a string of pictures of the world
 Betwixt the ins and outs of verb and noun,
 On the wall, the bench, the door. The monks looked black.

“Nay,” quoth the Prior, “turn him out, d’ye say ?
 In no wise. Lose a crow and catch a lark.
 What if at last we get our man of parts,
 We Carmelites, like those Camaldolese
 And Preaching Friars, to do our church up fine 140
 And put the front on it that ought to be !”
 And hereupon they bade me daub away.
 Thank you ! my head being crammed, their walls a blank,
 Never was such prompt disemburdening.
 First, every sort of monk, the black and white,

I drew them, fat and lean : then, folks at church,
From good old gossips waiting to confess
Their cribs of barrel-droppings, candle-ends,—
To the breathless fellow at the altar-foot,
Fresh from his murder, safe and sitting there 150
With the little children round him in a row
Of admiration, half for his beard and half
For that white anger of his victim's son
Shaking a fist at him with one fierce arm,
Signing himself with the other because of Christ (Whose sad face on the cross sees only this After the passion of a thousand years)
Till some poor girl, her apron o'er her head
Which the intense eyes looked through, came at eve
On tip-toe, said a word, dropped in a loaf, 160
Her pair of ear-rings and a bunch of flowers
The brute took growling, prayed, and then was gone.
I painted all, then cried, "'tis ask and have—
Choose, for more's ready !"—laid the ladder flat,
And showed my covered bit of cloister-wall.
The monks closed in a circle and praised loud
Till checked, (taught what to see and not to see,
Being simple bodies) " that's the very man !
Look at the boy who stoops to pat the dog !
That woman's like the Prior's niece who comes 170
To care about his asthma : it's the life ! "
But there my triumph's straw-fire flared and funk—
Their betters took their turn to see and say :
The Prior and the learned pulled a face
And stopped all that in no time. " How ? what's here ?
Quite from the mark of painting, bless us all !
Faces, arms, legs and bodies like the true

As much as pea and pea ! it's devil's-game !
Your business is not to catch men with show,
With homage to the perishable clay, 180
But lift them over it, ignore it all,
Make them forget there's such a thing as flesh.
Your business is to paint the souls of men—
Man's soul, and it's a fire, smoke . . no it's not . .
It's vapour done up like a new-born babe—
(In that shape when you die it leaves your mouth)
It's . . well, what matters talking, it's the soul !
Give us no more of body than shows soul.
Here's Giotto, with his Saint a-praising God !
That sets you praising,—why not stop with him ? 190
Why put all thoughts of praise out of our heads
With wonder at lines, colours, and what not ?
Paint the soul, never mind the legs and arms !
Rub all out, try at it a second time.
Oh, that white smallish female with the breasts,
She's just my niece . . . Herodias, I would say,—
Who went and danced and got men's heads cut off—
Have it all out ! " Now, is this sense, I ask ?
A fine way to paint soul, by painting body
So ill, the eye can't stop there, must go further 200
And can't fare worse ! Thus, yellow does for white
When what you put for yellow's simply black,
And any sort of meaning looks intense
When all beside itself means and looks nought.
Why can't a painter lift each foot in turn,
Left foot and right foot, go a double step,
Make his flesh liker and his soul more like,
Both in their order ? Take the prettiest face,
The Prior's niece . . . patron-saint—is it so pretty

You can't discover if it means hope, fear, 210
 Sorrow or joy ? won't beauty go with these ?
 Suppose I've made her eyes all right and blue,
 Can't I take breath and try to add life's flash,
 And then add soul and heighten them threefold ?
 Or say there's beauty with no soul at all —
 (I never saw it—put the case the same—)
 If you get simple beauty and nought else,
 You get about the best thing God invents,— That's somewhat. And you'll find the soul you have missed,

Within yourself when you return Him thanks ! 220
 " Rub all out ! " well, well, there's my life, in short,
 And so the thing has gone on ever since.
 I'm grown a man no doubt, I've broken bounds—
 You should not take a fellow eight years old
 And make him swear to never kiss the girls—
 I'm my own master, paint now as I please—
 Having a friend, you see, in the Corner-house !
 Lord, it's fast holding by the rings in front—
 Those great rings serve more purposes than just
 To plant a flag in, or tie up a horse ! 230
 And yet the old schooling sticks—the old grave eyes
 Are peeping o'er my shoulder as I work,
 The heads shake still—" It's Art's decline, my son !"
 You're not of the true painters, great and old :
 Brother Angelico's the man, you'll find :
 Brother Lorenzo stands his single peer.
 Fag on at flesh, you'll never make the third ! "
Flower o' the pine,
You keep your mistr . . . manners, and I'll stick to mine !
 I'm not the third, then : bless us, they must know ! 240

Don't you think they're the likeliest to know,
 They, with their Latin ? so I swallow my rage,
 Clench my teeth, suck my lips in tight, and paint
 To please them—sometimes do, and sometimes don't,
 For, doing most, there's pretty sure to come
 A turn—some warm eve finds me at my saints—
 A laugh, a cry, the business of the world—

(Flower o' the peach,

Death for us all, and his own life for each !)

And my whole soul revolves, the cup runs o'er, 250
 The world and life's too big to pass for a dream,
 And I do these wild things in sheer despite,
 And play the fooleries you catch me at,
 In pure rage ! the old mill-horse, out at grass
 After hard years, throws up his stiff heels so,
 Although the miller does not preach to him
 The only good of grass is to make chaff.

What would men have ? Do they like grass or no—
 May they or mayn't they ? all I want's the thing
 Settled for ever one way : as it is, 260

You tell too many lies and hurt yourself.
 You don't like what you only like too much,
 You do like what, if given you at your word,
 You find abundantly detestable.

For me, I think I speak as I was taught—
 I always see the Garden and God there
 A-making man's wife—and, my lesson learned,
 The value and significance of flesh,
 I can't unlearn ten minutes afterward.

You understand me : I'm a beast, I know. 270
 But see, now—why, I see as certainly
 As that the morning-star's about to shine,

What will hap some day. We've a youngster here
 Comes to our convent, studies what I do,
 Slouches and stares and lets no atom drop—
 His name is Guidi—he'll not mind the monks—
 They call him Hulking Tom, he lets them talk—
 He picks my practice up—he'll paint apace,
 I hope so—though I never live so long,
 I know what's sure to follow. You be judge! 280
 You speak no Latin more than I, belike—
 However, you're my man, you've seen the world
 —The beauty and the wonder and the power,
 The shapes of things, their colours, lights and shades,
 Changes, surprises,—and God made it all!
 —For what? do you feel thankful, ay or no,
 For this fair town's face, yonder river's line,
 The mountain round it and the sky above,
 Much more the figures of man, woman, child,
 These are the frame to? What's it all about? 290
 To be passed o'er, despised? or dwelt upon,
 Wondered at? oh, this last of course, you say.
 But why not do as well as say,—paint these
 Just as they are, careless what comes of it?
 God's works—paint anyone, and count it crime
 To let a truth slip. Don't object, "His works
 Are here already—nature is complete:
 Suppose you reproduce her—(which you can't)
 There's no advantage! you must beat her, then."
 For, don't you mark, we're made so that we love 300
 First when we see them painted, things we have passed
 Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see;
 And so they are better, painted—better to us,
 Which is the same thing. Art was given for that—

God uses us to help each other so,
Lending our minds out. Have you noticed, now,
Your cullion's hanging face? A bit of chalk,
And trust me but you should, though! How much more,

If I drew higher things with the same truth!
That were to take the Prior's pulpit-place, 310
Interpret God to all of you! oh, oh,
It makes me mad to see what men shall do
And we in our graves! This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank—it means intensely, and means good:
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.
“Ay, but you don't so instigate to prayer”
Strikes in the Prior! “when your meaning's plain
It does not say to folks—remember matins—
Or, mind you fast next Friday.” Why, for this
What need of art at all? A skull and bones, 320
Two bits of stick nailed cross-wise, or, what's best,
A bell to chime the hour with, does as well.
I painted a St. Laurence six months since
At Prato, splashed the fresco in fine style.
“How looks my painting, now the scaffold's down?”
I ask a brother: “Hugely,” he returns—
“Already not one phiz of your three slaves
That turn the Deacon off his toasted side,
But's scratched and prodded to our heart's content,
The pious people have so eased their own 330
When coming to say prayers there in a rage.
We get on fast to see the bricks beneath.
Expect another job this time next year,
For pity and religion grow i' the crowd—
Your painting serves its purpose!” Hang the fools!

—That is—you'll not mistake an idle word
 Spoke in a huff by a poor monk, God wot,
 Tasting the air this spicy night which turns
 The unaccustomed head like Chianti wine !
 Oh, the church knows ! don't misreport me, now ! 340
 It's natural a poor monk out of bounds
 Should have his apt word to excuse himself :
 And hearken how I plot to make amends.
 I have bethought me : I shall paint a piece
 . . . There's for you ! Give me six months, then go, see Something in Sant' Ambrogio's . . . (bless the nuns !
 They want a cast of my office) I shall paint
 God in the midst, Madonna and her babe,
 Ringed by a bowery, flowery angel-brood,
 Lilies and vestments and white faces, sweet 350
 As puff on puff of grated orris-root
 When ladies crowd to church at midsummer.
 And then in the front, of course a saint or two—
 Saint John, because he saves the Florentines,
 Saint Ambrose, who puts down in black and white
 The convent's friends and gives them a long day,
 And Job, I must have him there past mistake,
 The man of Uz, (and Us without the z, Painters who need his patience.) Well, all these Secured at their devotions, up shall come 360
 Out of a corner when you least expect,
 As one by a dark stair into a great light
 Music and talking, who but Lippo ! I !—
 Mazed, motionless and moon-struck—I'm the man !
 Back I shrink—what is this I see and hear ?
 I, caught up with my monk's things by mistake,
 My old serge gown and rope that goes all round,

I, in this presence, this pure company !
Where's a hole, where's a corner for escape ?
Then steps a sweet angelic slip of a thing 370
Forward, puts out a soft palm—" Not so fast ! "
—Addresses the celestial presence, " nay—
He made you and devised you, after all,
Though he's none of you ! Could Saint John there, draw—

His camel-hair make up a painting-brush ?
We come to brother Lippo for all that,
Iste perfecit opus ! " So, all smile—
I shuffle sideways with my blushing face
Under the cover of a hundred wings
Thrown like a spread of kirtles when you're gay 380
And play hot cockles, all the doors being shut,
Till, wholly unexpected, in there pops
The hothead husband ! Thus I scuttle off
To some safe bench behind, not letting go
The palm of her, the little lily thing
That spoke the good word for me in the nick,
Like the Prior's niece . . . Saint Lucy, I would say.
And so all's saved for me, and for the church
A pretty picture gained. Go, six months hence !
Your hand, sir, and good bye : no lights, no lights ! 390
The street's hushed, and I know my own way back—
Don't fear me ! There's the grey beginning. Zooks !

A TOCCATA OF GALUPPI'S.

1.

Oh, Galuppi, Baldassaro, this is very sad to find !
I can hardly misconceive you ; it would prove me deaf and blind ;
But although I give you credit, 'tis with such a heavy mind !

2.

Here you come with your old music, and here's all the good it brings.
What, they lived once thus at Venice, where the merchants were the kings,
Where St. Mark's is, where the Doges used to wed the sea with rings ?

3.

Ay, because the sea's the street there ; and 'tis arched by . . . what you call
. . . Shylock's bridge with houses on it, where they kept the carnival !
I was never out of England—it's as if I saw it all !

4.

Did young people take their pleasure when the sea was warm in May ?
Balls and masks begun at midnight, burning ever to mid-day,
When they made up fresh adventures for the morrow,
do you say ?

5.

Was a lady such a lady, cheeks so round and lips so red,—
On her neck the small face buoyant, like a bell-flower on its bed,
O'er the breast's superb abundance where a man might base his head ?

6.

Well (and it was graceful of them) they'd break talk off and afford
—She, to bite her mask's black velvet, he to finger on his sword,
While you sat and played Toccatas, stately at the clavichord ?

7.

What ? Those lesser thirds so plaintive, sixths diminished, sigh on sigh,
Told them something ? Those suspensions, those solutions—" Must we die ? "
Those commiserating sevenths—" Life might last ! we can but try ! "

8.

"Were you happy?"—"Yes."—"And are you still as happy?"—"Yes—And you?"
—"Then more kisses"—"Did I stop them, when a million seemed so few?"
Hark—the dominant's persistence, till it must be answered to!

9.

So an octave struck the answer. Oh, they praised you,
I dare say!
"Brave Galuppi! that was music! good alike at grave and gay!"
I can always leave off talking, when I hear a master play."

10.

Then they left you for their pleasure: till in due time,
one by one,
Some with lives that came to nothing, some with deeds
as well undone,
Death came tacitly and took them where they never see the sun.

11.

But when I sit down to reason,—think to take my stand nor swerve
Till I triumph o'er a secret wrung from nature's close reserve,
In you come with your cold music, till I creep thro'
every nerve.

12.

Yes, you, like a ghostly cricket, creaking where a house was burned—
“Dust and ashes, dead and done with, Venice spent what Venice earned !
The soul, doubtless, is immortal—where a soul can be discerned.

13.

“Yours for instance, you know physics, something of geology,
Mathematics are your pastime ; souls shall rise in their degree ;
Butterflies may dread extinction,—you'll not die, it cannot be !

14.

“As for Venice and its people, merely born to bloom and drop,
Here on earth they bore their fruitage, mirth and folly
were the crop.
What of soul was left, I wonder, when the kissing had to stop ?

15.

“Dust and ashes ! ” So you creak it, and I want the heart to scold.
Dear dead women, with such hair, too—what's become of all the gold
Used to hang and brush their bosoms ? I feel chilly and grown old.

BY THE FIRE-SIDE.

1.

How well I know what I mean to do
When the long dark Autumn evenings come,
And where, my soul, is thy pleasant hue ?
With the music of all thy voices, dumb
In life's November too !

2.

I shall be found by the fire, suppose,
O'er a great wise book as beseemeth age,
While the shutters flap as the cross-wind blows,
And I turn the page, and I turn the page,
Not verse now, only prose !

3.

Till the young ones whisper, finger on lip,
" There he is at it, deep in Greek—
Now or never, then, out we slip
To cut from the hazels by the creek
A mainmast for our ship."

4.

I shall be at it indeed, my friends !
Greek puts already on either side
Such a branch-work forth, as soon extends
To a vista opening far and wide,
And I pass out where it ends.

5.

The outside-frame like your hazel-trees—
But the inside-archway narrows fast,
And a rarer sort succeeds to these,
And we slope to Italy at last
And vouth, by green degrees.

6.

I follow wherever I am led,
Knowing so well the leader's hand—
Oh, woman-country, wooed, not wed,
Loved all the more by earth's male-lands,
Laid to their hearts instead !

7.

Look at the ruined chapel again
Half way up in the Alpine gorge.
Is that a tower, I point you plain,
Or is it a mill or an iron forge
Breaks solitude in vain ?

8.

A turn, and we stand in the heart of things ;
The woods are round us, heaped and dim ;
From slab to slab how it slips and springs,
The thread of water single and slim,
Thro' the ravage some torrent brings !

9.

Does it feed the little lake below ?

That speck of white just on its marge

Is Pella ; see, in the evening glow

How sharp the silver spear-heads charge

When Alp meets Heaven in snow.

10.

On our other side is the straight-up rock ;

And a path is kept 'twixt the gorge and it

By boulder-stones where lichens mock

The marks on a moth, and small ferns fit

Their teeth to the polished block.

11.

Oh, the sense of the yellow mountain flowers,

And the thorny balls, each three in one,

The chestnuts throw on our path in showers,

For the drop of the woodland fruit's begun

These early November hours—

12.

That crimson the creeper's leaf across

Like a splash of blood, intense, abrupt,

O'er a shield, else gold from rim to boss,

And lay it for show on the fairy-cupped

Elf-needed mat of moss,

13.

By the rose-flesh mushrooms, undivulged

Last evening—nay, in to-day's first dew

Yon sudden coral nipple bulged

Where a freaked, fawn-coloured, flaky crew

Of toad-stools peep indulged.

14.

And yonder, at foot of the fronting ridge
That takes the turn to a range beyond,
Is the chapel reached by the one-arched bridge
Where the water is stopped in a stagnant pond
Danced over by the midge.

15.

The chapel and bridge are of stone alike,
Blackish grey and mostly wet ;
Cut hemp-stalks steep in the narrow dyke.
See here again, how the lichens fret
And the roots of the ivy strike !

16.

Poor little place, where its one priest comes
On a festa-day, if he comes at all,
To the dozen folk from their scattered homes,
Gathered within that precinct small
By the dozen ways one roams

17.

To drop from the charcoal-burners' huts,
Or climb from the hemp-dressers' low shed,
Leave the grange where the woodman stores his nuts,
Or the wattled cote where the fowlers spread
Their gear on the rock's bare juts.

18.

It has some pretension too, this front,
With its bit of fresco half-moon-wise
Set over the porch, art's early wont—
'Tis John in the Desert, I surmise,
But has borne the weather's brunt—

19.

Not from the fault of the builder, though,
For a pent-house properly projects
Where three carved beams make a certain show,
Dating—good thought of our architect's—
'Five, six, nine, he lets you know.

20.

And all day long a bird sings there,
And a stray sheep drinks at the pond at times :
The place is silent and aware ;
It has had its scenes, its joys and crimes,
But that is its own affair.

21.

My perfect wife, my Leonor,
Oh, heart my own, oh, eyes, mine too,
Whom else could I dare look backward for,
With whom beside should I dare pursue
The path grey heads abhor ?

22.

For it leads to a crag's sheer edge with them ;
Youth, flowery all the way, there stops—
Not they ; age threatens and they contemn,
Till they reach the gulf wherein youth drops,
One inch from our life's safe hem !

23.

With me, youth led—I will speak now,
No longer watch you as you sit
Reading by fire-light, that great brow
And the spirit-small hand propping it
Mutely—my heart knows how—

24.

When, if I think but deep enough,
You are wont to answer, prompt as rhyme ;
And you, too, find without a rebuff
The response your soul seeks many a time
Piercing its fine flesh-stuff—

25.

My own, confirm me ! If I tread
This path back, is it not in pride
To think how little I dreamed it led
To an age so blest that by its side
Youth seems the waste instead !

26.

My own, see where the years conduct !
At first, 'twas something our two souls
Should mix as mists do : each is sucked
Into each now ; on, the new stream rolls,
Whatever rocks obstruct.

27.

Think, when our one soul understands
The great Word which makes all things new—
When earth breaks up and Heaven expands—
How will the change strike me and you
In the House not made with hands ?

28.

Oh, I must feel your brain prompt mine,
Your heart anticipate my heart,
You must be just before, in fine,
See and make me see, for your part,
New depths of the Divine !

29.

But who could have expected this,
When we two drew together first
Just for the obvious human bliss,
To satisfy life's daily thirst
With a thing men seldom miss ?

30.

Come back with me to the first of all.
Let us lean and love it over again—
Let us now forget and then recall,
Break the rosary in a pearly rain,
And gather what we let fall !

31.

What did I say ?—that a small bird sings
All day long, save when a brown pair
Of hawks from the wood float with wide wings
Strained to a bell : 'gainst the noon-day glare
You count the streaks and rings.

32.

But at afternoon or almost eve
'Tis better ; then the silence grows
To that degree, you half believe
It must get rid of what it knows,
Its bosom does so heave.

33.

Hither we walked, then, side by side,
Arm in arm and cheek to cheek,
And still I questioned or replied,
While my heart, convulsed to really speak,
Lay choking in its pride.

34.

Silent the crumbling bridge we cross,
And pity and praise the chapel sweet,
And care about the fresco's loss,
And wish for our souls a like retreat,
And wonder at the moss.

35.

Stoop and kneel on the settle under—
Look through the window's grated square :
Nothing to see ! for fear of plunder,
The cross is down and the altar bare,
As if thieves don't fear thunder.

36.

We stoop and look in through the grate,
See the little porch and rustic door,
Read duly the dead builder's date,
Then cross the bridge we crossed before,
Take the path again—but wait !

37.

Oh moment, one and infinite !
The water slips o'er stock and stone ;
The west is tender, hardly bright.
How grey at once is the evening grown—
One star, the chrysolite !

38.

We two stood there with never a third,
But each by each, as each knew well.
The sights we saw and the sounds we heard,
The lights and the shades made up a spell
Till the trouble grew and stirred.

39.

Oh, the little more, and how much it is !
And the little less, and what worlds away !
How a sound shall quicken content to bliss,
Or a breath suspend the blood's best play,
And life be a proof of this !

40.

Had she willed it, still had stood the screen
So slight, so sure, 'twixt my love and her.
I could fix her face with a guard between,
And find her soul as when friends confer,
Friends—lovers that might have been.

41.

For my heart had a touch of the woodland time,
Wanting to sleep now over its best.
Shake the whole tree in the summer-prime,
But bring to the last leaf no such test.
“ Hold the last fast ! ” says the rhyme.

42.

For a chance to make your little much,
To gain a lover and lose a friend,
Venture the tree and a myriad such,
When nothing you mar but the year can mend !
But a last leaf—fear to touch.

43.

Yet should it unfasten itself and fall
Eddying down till it find your face
At some slight wind—(best chance of all !)
Be your heart henceforth its dwelling-place
You trembled to forestal !

44.

Worth how well, those dark grey eyes,
—That hair so dark and dear, how worth
That a man should strive and agonise,
And taste a very hell on earth
For the hope of such a prize !

45.

Oh, you might have turned and tried a man,
Set him a space to weary and wear,
And prove which suited more your plan,
His best of hope or his worst despair,
Yet end as he began.

46.

But you spared me this, like the heart you are,
And filled my empty heart at a word
If you join two lives, there is oft a scar,
They are one and one, with a shadowy third ;
One near one is too far.

47.

A moment after, and hands unseen
Were hanging the night around us fast.
But we knew that a bar was broken between Life and life ; we were mixed at last
In spite of the mortal screen.

48.

The forests had done it ; there they stood—
We caught for a second the powers at play :
They had mingled us so, for once and for good,
Their work was done—we might go or stay,
They relapsed to their ancient mood.

49.

How the world is made for each of us !
How all we perceive and know in it
Tends to some moment's product thus,
When a soul declares itself—to wit,
By its fruit—the thing it does !

50.

Be Hate that fruit or Love that fruit,
It forwards the General Deed of Man,
And each of the Many helps to recruit
The life of the race by a general plan,
Each living his own, to boot.

51.

I am named and known by that hour's feat,
There took my station and degree.
So grew my own small life complete
As nature obtained her best of me—
One born to love you, sweet !

52.

And to watch you sink by the fire-side now
Back again, as you mutely sit
Musing by fire-light, that great brow
And the spirit-small hand propping it
Yonder, my heart knows how !

53.

So the earth has gained by one man more,
And the gain of earth must be Heaven's gain too,
And the whole is well worth thinking o'er
When the autumn comes : which I mean to do
One day, as I said before.

ANY WIFE TO ANY HUSBAND.

1.

My love, this is the bitterest, that thou
Who art all truth and who dost love me now
As thine eyes say, as thy voice breaks to say—
Should'st love so truly and could'st love me still
A whole long life through, had but love its will,
Would death that leads me from thee brook delay !

2.

I have but to be by thee, and thy hand
Would never let mine go, thy heart withstand
The beating of my heart to reach its place.
When should I look for thee and feel thee gone ?
When cry for the old comfort and find none ?
Never, I know ! Thy soul is in thy face.

3.

Oh, I should fade—'tis willed so ! might I save,
Gladly I would, whatever beauty gave
Joy to thy sense, for that was precious too.
It is not to be granted. But the soul
Whence the love comes, all ravage leaves that whole ;
Vainly the flesh fades—soul makes all things new.

4.

And 'twould not be because my eye grew dim
 Thou could'st not find the love there, thanks to Him
 Who never is dishonoured in the spark
 He gave us from his fire of fires, and bade
 Remember whence it sprang nor be afraid
 While that burns on, though all the rest grow dark.

5.

So, how thou would'st be perfect, white and clean
 Outside as inside, soul and soul's demesne
 Alike, this body given to show it by !
 Oh, three-parts through the worst of life's abyss,
 What plaudits from the next world after this.
 Could'st thou repeat a stroke and gain the sky !

6.

And is it not the bitterer to think
 That, disengage our hands and thou wilt sink
 Although thy love was love in very deed ?
 I know that nature ! Pass a festive day
 Thou dost not throw its relic-flower away
 Nor bid its music's loitering echo speed.

7.

Thou let'st the stranger's glove lie where it fell ;
 If old things remain old things all is well,
 For thou art grateful as becomes man best :
 And hadst thou only heard me play one tune,
 Or viewed me from a window, not so soon
 With thee would such things fade as with the rest.

8.

I seem to see ! we meet and part : 'tis brief :
The book I opened keeps a folded leaf,
The very chair I sat on, breaks the rank ;
That is a portrait of me on the wall—
Three lines, my face comes at so slight a call ;
And for all this, one little hour's to thank.

9.

But now, because the hour through years was fixed,
Because our inmost beings met and mixed,
Because thou once hast loved me—wilt thou dare
Say to thy soul and Who may list beside,
“ Therefore she is immortally my bride,
Chance cannot change that love, nor time impair.

10.

“ So, what if in the dusk of life that's left,
I, a tired traveller, of my sun bereft,
Look from my path when, mimicking the same,
The fire-fly glimpses past me, come and gone ?
—Where was it till the sunset ? where anon
It will be at the sunrise ! what's to blame ? ”

11.

Is it so helpful to thee ? canst thou take
The mimic up, nor, for the true thing's sake,
Put gently by such efforts at a beam ?
Is the remainder of the way so long
Thou need'st the little solace, thou the strong ?
Watch out thy watch, let weak ones doze and dream !

12.

“—Ah, but the fresher faces ! Is it true,” Thou’lt ask, “ some eyes are beautiful and new ?
 Some hair,—how can one choose but grasp such wealth ?
 And if a man would press his lips to lips
 Fresh as the wilding hedge-rose-cup there slips
 The dew-drop out of, must it be by stealth ?

13.

“ It cannot change the love kept still for Her,
 Much more than, such a picture to prefer
 Passing a day with, to a room’s bare side.
 The painted form takes nothing she possessed,
 Yet while the Titian’s Venus lies at rest
 A man looks. Once more, what is there to chide ? ”

14.

So must I see, from where I sit and watch,
 My own self sell myself, my hand attach
 Its warrant to the very thefts from me—
 Thy singleness of soul that made me proud,
 Thy purity of heart I loved aloud,
 Thy man’s truth I was bold to bid God see !

15.

Love so, then, if thou wilt ! Give all thou canst
 Away to the new faces—disentranced—
 (Say it and think it) obdurate no more,
 Re-issue looks and words from the old mint—
 Pass them afresh, no matter whose the print
 Image and superscription once they bore !

16.

Re-coin thyself and give it them to spend,—
It all comes to the same thing at the end,
 Since mine thou wast, mine art, and mine shalt be,
Faithful or faithless, sealing up the sum
Or lavish of my treasure, thou must come
 Back to the heart's place here I keep for thee !

17.

Only, why should it be with stain at all ?
Why must I, 'twixt the leaves of coronal,
 Put any kiss of pardon on thy brow ?
Why need the other women know so much
And talk together, " Such the look and such
 The smile he used to love with, then as now ! "

18.

Might I die last and shew thee ! Should I find
Such hardship in the few years left behind,
 If free to take and light my lamp, and go
Into thy tomb, and shut the door and sit
Seeing thy face on those four sides of it
 The better that they are so blank, I know !

19.

Why, time was what I wanted, to turn o'er
Within my mind each look, get more and more
 By heart each word, too much to learn at first,
And join thee all the fitter for the pause
'Neath the low door-way's lintel. That were cause
 For lingering, though thou calledst, if I durst !

20.

And yet thou art the nobler of us two.
 What dare I dream of, that thou canst not do,
 Outstripping my ten small steps with one stride ?
 I'll say then, here's a trial and a task—
 Is it to bear ?—if easy, I'll not ask—
 Though love fail, I can trust on in thy pride.

21.

Pride ?—when those eyes forestal the life behind
 The death I have to go through !—when I find,
 Now that I want thy help most, all of thee !
 What did I fear ? Thy love shall hold me fast
 Until the little minute's sleep is past
 And I wake saved.—And yet, it will not be !

AN EPISTLE

CONTAINING THE

STRANGE MEDICAL EXPERIENCE OF KARSHISH, THE ARAB PHYSICIAN.

KARSHISH, the picker-up of learning's crumbs,
The not-incurious in God's handiwork
(This man's-flesh He hath admirably made,
Blown like a bubble, kneaded like a paste,
To coop up and keep down on earth a space
That puff of vapour from His mouth, man's soul)
—To Abib, all-sagacious in our art,
Breeder in me of what poor skill I boast,
Like me inquisitive how pricks and cracks
Befall the flesh through too much stress and strain, 10
Whereby the wily vapour fain would slip
Back and rejoin its source before the term,—
And aptest in contrivance, under God,
To baffle it by deftly stopping such :—
The vagrant Scholar to his Sage at home
Sends greeting (health and knowledge, fame with peace)
Three samples of true snake-stone—rarer still,
One of the other sort, the melon-shaped,
(But fitter, pounded fine, for charms than drugs)
And writeth now the twenty-second time.

My journeyings were brought to Jericho,
 Thus I resume. Who studious in our art
 Shall count a little labour unrepaid ?
 I have shed sweat enough, left flesh and bone
 On many a flinty furlong of this land.
 Also the country-side is all on fire
 With rumours of a marching hitherward—
 Some say Vespasian cometh, some, his son.
 A black lynx snarled and pricked a tufted ear ;
 Lust of my blood inflamed his yellow balls : 30
 I cried and threw my staff and he was gone.
 Twice have the robbers stripped and beaten me,
 And once a town declared me for a spy,
 But at the end, I reach Jerusalem,
 Since this poor covert where I pass the night,
 This Bethany, lies scarce the distance thence
 A man with plague-sores at the third degree
 Runs till he drops down dead. Thou laughest here !
 'Sooth, it elates me, thus reposed and safe,
 To void the stuffing of my travel-scrip 40
 And share with thee whatever Jewry yields.
 A viscid choler is observable
 In tertians, I was nearly bold to say,
 And falling-sickness hath a happier cure
 Than our school wots of : there's a spider here
 Weaves no web, watches on the ledge of tombs,
 Sprinkled with mottles on an ash-grey back ;
 Take five and drop them . . . but who knows his mind,
 The Syrian run-a-gate I trust this to ?
 His service payeth me a sublimate 50
 Blown up his nose to help the ailing eye.
 Best wait : I reach Jerusalem at morn,
 There set in order my experiences.

Gather what most deserves and give thee all—
 Or I might add, Judea's gum-tragacanth
 Scales off in purer flakes, shines clearer-grained,
 Cracks 'twixt the pestle and the porphyry,
 In fine exceeds our produce. Scalp-disease
 Confounds me, crossing so with leprosy—
 Thou hadst admired one sort I gained at Zoar— 60
 But zeal outruns discretion. Here I end.

Yet stay : my Syrian blinketh gratefully,
 Protesteth his devotion is my price—
 Suppose I write what harms not, though he steal ?
 I half resolve to tell thee, yet I blush,
 What set me off a-writing first of all.
 An itch I had, a sting to write, a tang !
 For, be it this town's barrenness—or else
 The Man had something in the look of him—
 His case has struck me far more than 'tis worth. 70
 So, pardon if—(lest presently I lose
 In the great press of novelty at hand
 The care and pains this somehow stole from me)
 I bid thee take the thing while fresh in mind,
 Almost in sight—for, wilt thou have the truth ?
 The very man is gone from me but now,
 Whose ailment is the subject of discourse.
 Thus then, and let thy better wit help all.

'Tis but a case of mania—subinduced
 By epilepsy, at the turning-point 80
 Of trance prolonged unduly some three days,
 When by the exhibition of some drug
 Or spell, exorcisation, stroke of art
 Unknown to me and which 'twere well to know,
 The evil thing out-breaking all at once

Left the man whole and sound of body indeed,—
 But, flinging, so to speak, life's gates too wide,
 Making a clear house of it too suddenly,
 The first conceit that entered pleased to write
 Whatever it was minded on the wall 90
 So plainly at that vantage, as it were,
 (First come, first served) that nothing subsequent Attaineth to erase the fancy-scrawks
 Which the returned and new-established soul
 Hath gotten now so thoroughly by heart
 That henceforth she will read or these or none.
 And first—the man's own firm conviction rests
 That he was dead (in fact they buried him)
 That he was dead and then restored to life
 By a Nazarene physician of his tribe: 100
 —'Sayeth, the same bade " Rise," and he did rise.
 " Such cases are diurnal," thou wilt cry.
 Not so this figment!—not, that such a fume,
 Instead of giving way to time and health,
 Should eat itself into the life of life,
 As saffron tingeth flesh, blood, bones and all !
 For see, how he takes up the after-life.
 The man—it is one Lazarus a Jew,
 Sanguine, proportioned, fifty years of age,
 The body's habit wholly laudable, 110
 As much, indeed, beyond the common health
 As he were made and put aside to shew.
 Think, could we penetrate by any drug
 And bathe the wearied soul and worried flesh,
 And bring it clear and fair, by three days sleep !
 Whence has the man the balm that brightens all ?
 This grown man eyes the world now like a child.
 Some elders of his tribe, I should premise,

Led in their friend, obedient as a sheep,
To bear my inquisition. While they spoke, 120
Now sharply, now with sorrow,—told the case,—
He listened not except I spoke to him,
But folded his two hands and let them talk,
Watching the flies that buzzed : and yet no fool.
And that's a sample how his years must go.
Look if a beggar, in fixed middle-life,
Should find a treasure, can he use the same
With straightened habits and with tastes starved small,
And take at once to his impoverished brain
The sudden element that changes things, 130
—That sets the undreamed-of rapture at his hand,
And puts the cheap old joy in the scorned dust ?
Is he not such an one as moves to mirth—
Warily parsimonious, when's no need,
Wasteful as drunkenness at undue times ?
All prudent counsel as to what befits
The golden mean, is lost on such an one.
The man's fantastic will is the man's law.
So here—we'll call the treasure knowledge, say—
Increased beyond the fleshly faculty— 140
Heaven opened to a soul while yet on earth,
Earth forced on a soul's use while seeing Heaven.
The man is witless of the size, the sum,
The value in proportion of all things,
Or whether it be little or be much.
Discourse to him of prodigious armaments
Assembled to besiege his city now,
And of the passing of a mule with gourds—
'Tis one ! Then take it on the other side,
Speak of some trifling fact—he will gaze rapt 150
With stupor at its very littleness—

(Far as I see) as if in that indeed
 He caught prodigious import, whole results ;
 And so will turn to us the bystanders
 In ever the same stupor (note this point)
 That we too see not with his opened eyes !
 Wonder and doubt come wrongly into play,
 Preposterously, at cross purposes.
 Should his child sicken unto death,—why, look
 For scarce abatement of his cheerfulness, 160
 Or pretermission of his daily craft—
 While a word, gesture, glance, from that same child
 At play or in the school or laid asleep,
 Will start him to an agony of fear,
 Exasperation, just as like ! demand
 The reason why—“ ’tis but a word,” object—
 “ A gesture ”—he regards thee as our lord
 Who lived there in the pyramid alone,
 Looked at us, dost thou mind, when being young
 We both would unadvisedly recite 170
 Some charm’s beginning, from that book of his,
 Able to bid the sun throb wide and burst
 All into stars, as suns grown old are wont.
 Thou and the child have each a veil alike
 Thrown o’er your heads from under which ye both
 Stretch your blind hands and trifle with a match
 Over a mine of Greek fire, did ye know !
 He holds on firmly to some thread of life—
 (It is the life to lead perforcedly)
 Which runs across some vast distracting orb 180
 Of glory on either side that meagre thread,
 Which, conscious of, he must not enter yet—
 The spiritual life around the earthly life !
 The law of that is known to him as this—

His heart and brain move there, his feet stay here.
So is the man perplex with impulses
Sudden to start off crosswise, not straight on,
Proclaiming what is Right and Wrong across—
And not along—this black thread through the blaze—
“It should be” balked by “here it cannot be.” 190
And oft the man’s soul springs into his face
As if he saw again and heard again
His sage that bade him “Rise” and he did rise.
Something—a word, a tick of the blood within Admonishes—then back he sinks at once
To ashes, that was very fire before,
In sedulous recurrence to his trade
Whereby he earneth him the daily bread—
And studiously the humbler for that pride,
Professedly the faultier that he knows 200
God’s secret, while he holds the thread of life.
Indeed the especial marking of the man
Is prone submission to the Heavenly will—Seeing it, what it is, and why it is.
’Sayeth, he will wait patient to the last
For that same death which will restore his being
To equilibrium, body loosening soul
Divorced even now by premature full growth :
He will live, nay, it pleaseth him to live
So long as God please, and just how God please. 210
He even seeketh not to please God more
(Which meaneth, otherwise) than as God please.
Hence I perceive not he affects to preach
The doctrine of his sect whate’er it be—
Make proselytes as madmen thirst to do.
How can he give his neighbour the real ground,
His own conviction ? ardent as he is—

Call his great truth a lie, why still the old
 "Be it as God please" reassureth him.
 I probed the sore as thy disciple should— 220
 "How, beast," said I, "this stolid carelessness
 Sufficeth thee, when Rome is on her march
 To stamp out like a little spark thy town,
 Thy tribe, thy crazy tale and thee at once?"
 He merely looked with his large eyes on me.
 The man is apathetic, you deduce?
 Contrariwise he loves both old and young,
 Able and weak—affects the very brutes
 And birds—how say I? flowers of the field—
 As a wise workman recognises tools 230
 In a master's workshop, loving what they make.
 Thus is the man as harmless as a lamb:
 Only impatient, let him do his best,
 At ignorance and carelessness and sin—
 An indignation which is promptly curbed.
 As when in certain travels I have feigned
 To be an ignoramus in our art
 According to some preconceived design,
 And happed to hear the land's practitioners
 Steeped in conceit sublimed by ignorance, 240
 Prattle fantastically on disease,
 Its cause and cure—and I must hold my peace!

Thou wilt object—why have I not ere this Sought out the sage himself, the Nazarene
 Who wrought this cure, enquiring at the source,
 Conferring with the frankness that befits?
 Alas! it grieveth me, the learned leech
 Perished in a tumult many years ago,
 Accused,—our learning's fate,—of wizardry,

Rebellion, to the setting up a rule 250
And creed prodigious as described to me.
His death which happened when the earthquake fell (Prefiguring, as soon appeared, the loss
To occult learning in our lord the sage
That lived there in the pyramid alone)
Was wrought by the mad people—that's their wont—
On vain recourse, as I conjecture it,
To his tried virtue, for miraculous help—
How could he stop the earthquake? That's their way!
The other imputations must be lies : 260
But take one—though I loathe to give it thee,
In mere respect to any good man's fame!
(And after all our patient Lazarus
Is stark mad—should we count on what he says?
Perhaps not—though in writing to a leech
'Tis well to keep back nothing of a case.)
This man so cured regards the curer then,
As—God forgive me—who but God himself,
Creator and Sustainer of the world,
That came and dwelt in flesh on it awhile ! 270
—'Sayeth that such an One was born and lived,
Taught, healed the sick, broke bread at his own house,
Then died, with Lazarus by, for aught I know,
And yet was . . . what I said nor choose repeat,
And must have so avouched himself, in fact,
In hearing of this very Lazarus
Who saith—but why all this of what he saith?
Why write of trivial matters, things of price
Calling at every moment for remark?
I noticed on the margin of a pool 280
Blue-flowering borage, the Aleppo sort,
Aboundeth, very nitrous. It is strange!

Thy pardon for this long and tedious case,
 Which, now that I review it, needs must seem Unduly dwelt on, prolixly set forth.
 Nor I myself discern in what is writ
 Good cause for the peculiar interest
 And awe indeed this man has touched me with.
 Perhaps the journey's end, the weariness
 Had wrought upon me first. I met him thus— 290
 I crossed a ridge of short sharp broken hills
 Like an old lion's cheek-teeth. Out there came
 A moon made like a face with certain spots
 Multiform, manifold, and menacing :
 Then a wind rose behind me. So we met
 In this old sleepy town at unaware,
 The man and I. I send thee what is writ.
 Regard it as a chance, a matter risked
 To this ambiguous Syrian—he may lose,
 Or steal, or give it thee with equal good. 300
 Jerusalem's repose shall make amends
 For time this letter wastes, thy time and mine,
 Till when, once more thy pardon and farewell !

The very God ! think, Abib ; dost thou think ?
 So, the All-Great, were the All-Loving too—
 So, through the thunder comes a human voice
 Saying, " O heart I made, a heart beats here !
 Face, my hands fashioned, see it in myself.
 Thou hast no power nor may'st conceive of mine,
 But love I gave thee, with Myself to love, 310
 And thou must love me who have died for thee ! "
 The madman saith He said so : it is strange.

MESMERISM.

1.

ALL I believed is true!
I am able yet
All I want to get
By a method as strange as new:
Dare I trust the same to you?

2.

If at night, when doors are shut,
And the wood-worm picks,
And the death-watch ticks,
And the bar has a flag of smut,
And a cat's in the water-butt—

3.

And the socket floats and flares,
And the house-beams groan,
And a foot unknown
Is surmised on the garret-stairs,
And the locks slip unawares—

4.

And the spider, to serve his ends,
By a sudden thread,
Arms and legs outspread,
On the table's midst descends,
Comes to find, God knows what friends !—

5.

If since eve drew in, I say,
I have sate and brought
(So to speak) my thought
To bear on the woman away,
Till I felt my hair turn grey—

6.

Till I seemed to have and hold
In the vacancy
'Twixt the wall and me,
From the hair-plait's chestnut-gold
To the foot in its muslin fold—

7.

Have and hold, then and there,
Her, from head to foot,
Breathing and mute,
Passive and yet aware,
In the grasp of my steady stare—

8.

Hold and have, there and then,
All her body and soul
That completes my Whole,
All that women add to men,
In the clutch of my steady ken—

9.

Having and holding, till
I imprint her fast
On the void at last
As the sun does whom he will
By the calotypist's skill—

10.

Then,—if my heart's strength serve,
And through all and each
Of the veils I reach
To her soul and never swerve,
Knitting an iron nerve—

11.

Commanding that to advance
And inform the shape
Which has made escape
And before my countenance
Answers me glance for glance—

12.

I, still with a gesture fit
Of my hands that best
Do my soul's behest,
Pointing the power from it,
While myself do steadfast sit—

13.

Steadfast and still the same
On my object bent
While the hands give vent
To my ardour and my aim
And break into very flame—

14.

Then, I reach, I must believe,
Not her soul in vain,
For to me again
It reaches, and past retrieve
Is wound in the toils I weave—

15.

And must follow as I require,
As befits a thrall,
Bringing flesh and all,
Essence and earth-attire,
To the source of the tractile fire—

16.

Till the house called hers, not mine,
With a growing weight
Seems to suffocate
If she break not its leaden line
And escape from its close confine—

17.

Out of doors into the night !
On to the maze
Of the wild wood-ways,
Not turning to left or right
From the pathway, blind with sight—

18.

Making thro' rain and wind
O'er the broken shrubs,
'Twixt the stems and stubs,
With a still composed strong mind,
Not a care for the world behind—

19.

Swifter and still more swift,
As the crowding peace
Doth to joy increase
In the wide blind eyes uplift,
Thro' the darkness and the drift :

20.

While I—to the shape, I too
Feel my soul dilate
Nor a whit abate
And relax not a gesture due
As I see my belief come true—

21.

For there ! have I drawn or no
Life to that lip ?
Do my fingers dip
In a flame which again they throw
On the cheek that breaks a-glow ?

22.

Ha ! was the hair so first ?
What, unfileted,
Made alive, and spread
Through the void with a rich outburst,
Chestnut gold-interspersed !

23.

Like the doors of a casket-shrine,
See, on either side,
Her two arms divide
Till the heart betwixt makes sign,
Take me, for I am thine !

24.

Now—now—the door is heard
Hark ! the stairs and near—
Nearer—and here—
Now ! and at call the third
She enters without a word.

25.

On doth she march and on
To the fancied shape—
It is past escape
Herself, now—the dream is done
And the shadow and she are one.

26.

First I will pray. Do Thou
That ownest the soul,
Yet wilt grant controul
To another nor disallow
For a time, restrain me now !

27.

I admonish me while I may,
Not to squander guilt,
Since require Thou wilt
At my hand its price one day !
What the price is, who can say ?

A SERENADE AT THE VILLA.

1.

THAT was I, you heard last night
When there rose no moon at all,
Nor, to pierce the strained and tight
Tent of heaven, a planet small :
Life was dead, and so was light.

2.

Not a twinkle from the fly,
Not a glimmer from the worm.
When the crickets stopped their cry,
When the owls forbore a term,
You heard music ; that was I.

3.

Earth turned in her sleep with pain,
Sultrily suspired for proof :
In at heaven and out again,
Lightning !—where it broke the roof,
Bloodlike, some few drops of rain.

4.

What they could my words expressed,
O my love, my all, my one !
Singing helped the verses best,
And when singing's best was done,
To my lute I left the rest.

5.

So wore night ; the east was grey,
White the broad-faced hemlock flowers ;
Soon would come another day ;
Ere its first of heavy hours
Found me, I had past away.

6.

What became of all the hopes,
Words and song and lute as well ?
Say, this struck you—" When life gropes
Feebly for the path where fell
Light last on the evening slopes,

7.

" One friend in that path shall be
To secure my steps from wrong ;
One to count night day for me,
Patient through the watches long,
Serving most with none to see."

8.

Never say—as something bodes—
" So the worst has yet a worse !
When life halts 'neath double loads,
Better the task-master's curse
Than such music on the roads !

9.

"When no moon succeeds the sun,
Nor can pierce the midnight's tent
Any star, the smallest one,
While some drops, where lightning went,
Show the final storm begun—

10.

"When the fire-fly hides its spot,
When the garden-voices fail
In the darkness thick and hot,—
Shall another voice avail.
That shape be where those are not ?

11.

"Has some plague a longer lease
Proffering its help uncouth ?
Can't one even die in peace ?
As one shuts one's eyes on youth,
Is that face the last one sees ? "

12.

Oh, how dark your villa was,
Windows fast and obdurate !
How the garden grudged me grass
Where I stood—the iron gate
Ground its teeth to let me pass !

MY STAR.

ALL that I know
Of a certain star,
Is, it can throw
(Like the angled spar)
Now a dart of red,
Now a dart of blue,
Till my friends have said
They would fain see, too,
My star that dartles the red and the blue !
Then it stops like a bird, —like a flower, hangs furled ;
They must solace themselves with the Saturn above it.
What matter to me if their star is a world ?
Mine has opened its soul to me ; therefore I love it.

INSTANS TYRANNUS.

1.

Or the million or two, more or less,
I rule and possess,
One man, for some cause undefined,
Was least to my mind.

2.

I struck him, he grovelled of course—
For, what was his force ?
I pinned him to earth with my weight
And persistence of hate—
And he lay, would not moan, would not curse,
As if lots might be worse.

3.

“ Were the object less mean, would he stand
At the swing of my hand !
For obscurity helps him and blots
The hole where he squats.”
So I set my five wits on the stretch
To inveigle the wretch.

All in vain ! gold and jewels I threw,
Still he couched there perdue.
I tempted his blood and his flesh,
Hid in roses my mesh,
Choicest cates and the flagon's best spilth—
Still he kept to his filth !

4.

Had he kith now or kin, were access
To his heart, if I press—
Just a son or a mother to seize—
No such booty as these !
Were it simply a friend to pursue
'Mid my million or two,
Who could pay me in person or pelf
What he owes me himself.
No ! I could not but smile through my chafe—
For the fellow lay safe
As his mates do, the midge and the nit,
—Through minuteness, to wit.

5.

Then a humor more great took its place
At the thought of his face,
The droop, the low cares of the mouth,
The trouble uncouth
'Twixt the brows, all that air one is fain
To put out of its pain—
And, no, I admonished myself,
“ Is one mocked by an elf,
Is one baffled by toad or by rat ?
The gravamen's in that !

How the lion, who crouches to suit
His back to my foot,
Would admire that I stand in debate !
But the Small is the Great
If it vexes you,—that is the thing !
Toad or rat vex the King ?
Though I waste half my realm to unearth
Toad or rat, 'tis well worth ! ”

6.

So I soberly laid my last plan
To extinguish the man.
Round his creep-hole,—with never a break
Ran my fires for his sake ;
Over-head, did my thunders combine
With my under-ground mine :
Till I looked from my labor content
To enjoy the event.

7.

When sudden . . . how think ye, the end ?
Did I say “ without friend ? ”
Say rather, from marge to blue marge
The whole sky grew his targe
With the sun's self for visible boss,
While an Arm ran across
Which the earth heaved beneath like a breast
Where the wretch was safe prest !
Do you see ? just my vengeance complete,
The man sprang to his feet,
Stood erect, caught at God's skirts, and prayed !
—So, I was afraid !

A PRETTY WOMAN.

1.

THAT fawn-skin-dappled hair of hers,
And the blue eye
Dear and dewy,
And that infantine fresh air of hers !

2.

To think men cannot take you, Sweet,
And enfold you,
Ay, and hold you,
And so keep you what they make you, Sweet !

3.

You like us for a glance, you know—
For a word's sake,
Or a sword's sake,
All's the same, whate'er the chance, you know.

4.

And in turn we make you ours, we say—
You and youth too,
Eyes and mouth too,
All the face composed of flowers, we say

5.

All's our own, to make the most of, Sweet—
Sing and say for,
Watch and pray for,
Keep a secret or go boast of, Sweet.

6.

But for loving, why, you would not, Sweet,
Though we prayed you,
Paid you, brayed you
In a mortar—for you could not, Sweet.

7.

So, we leave the sweet face fondly there—
Be its beauty
Its sole duty !
Let all hope of grace beyond, lie there !

8.

And while the face lies quiet there,
Who shall wonder
That I ponder
A conclusion ? I will try it there.

9.

As,—why must one, for the love forgone.
Scout mere liking ?
Thunder-striking
Earth,—the heaven, we looked above for, gone !

10.

Why with beauty, needs there money be—
Love with liking ?
Crush the fly-king
In his gauze, because no honey bee ?

11.

May not liking be so simple-sweet,
If love grew there
'Twould undo there
All that breaks the cheek to dimples sweet ?

12.

Is the creature too imperfect, say ?
Would you mend it
And so end it ?
Since not all addition perfects aye !

13.

Or is it of its kind, perhaps,
Just perfection—
Whence, rejection
Of a grace not to its mind, perhaps ?

14.

Shall we burn up, tread that face at once
Into tinder,
And so hinder
Sparks from kindling all the place at once ?

15.

Or else kiss away one's soul on her ?
Your love-fancies !—
A sick man sees
Truer, when his hot eyes roll on her !

16.

Thus the craftsman thinks to grace the rose,— Plucks a mould-flower
For his gold flower,
Uses fine things that efface the rose.

17.

Rosy rubies make its cup more rose,
Precious metals
Ape the petals,—
Last, some old king locks it up, morose !

18.

Then, how grace a rose ? I know a way !
Leave it rather.
Must you gather ?
Smell, kiss, wear it—at last, throw away !

"CHILDE ROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER CAME."

(See Edgar's Song in "LEAR.")

1.

My first thought was, he lied in every word,
That hoary cripple, with malicious eye
Askance to watch the working of his lie
On mine, and mouth scarce able to afford
Suppression of the glee that pursed and scored
Its edge at one more victim gained thereby.

2.

What else should he be set for, with his staff ?
What, save to waylay with his lies, ensnare
All travellers that might find him posted there,
And ask the road ? I guessed what skull-like laugh
Would break, what crutch 'gin write my epitaph
For pastime in the dusty thoroughfare,

3.

If at his counsel I should turn aside
Into that ominous tract which, all agree,
Hides the Dark Tower. Yet acquiescingly
I did turn as he pointed ; neither pride
Nor hope rekindling at the end descried,
So much as gladness that some end should be.

4.

For, what with my whole world-wide wandering,
What with my search drawn out thro' years, my hope
Dwindled into a ghost not fit to cope
With that obstreperous joy success would bring,—
I hardly tried now to rebuke the spring
My heart made, finding failure in its scope.

5.

As when a sick man very near to death
Seems dead indeed, and feels begin and end
The tears and takes the farewell of each friend,
And hears one bid the other go, draw breath
Freelier outside, ("since all is o'er," he saith,
"And the blow fall'n no grieving can amend")

6.

While some discuss if near the other graves
Be room enough for this, and when a day
Suits best for carrying the corpse away,
With care about the banners, scarves and staves,—
And still the man hears all, and only craves
He may not shame such tender love and stay.

7.

Thus, I had so long suffered in this quest,
Heard failure prophesied so oft, been writ
So many times among "The Band"—to wit,
The knights who to the Dark Tower's search addressed
Their steps—that just to fail as they, seemed best,
And all the doubt was now—should I be fit.

8.

So, quiet as despair, I turned from him,
That hateful cripple, out of his highway
Into the path he pointed. All the day

Had been a dreary one at best, and dim
Was settling to its close, yet shot one grim
Red leer to see the plain catch its estray.

9.

For mark ! no sooner was I fairly found
Pledged to the plain, after a pace or two,
Than pausing to throw backward a last view
To the safe road, 'twas gone ! grey plain all round !
Nothing but plain to the horizon's bound.
I might go on ; nought else remained to do.

10.

So on I went. I think I never saw
Such starved ignoble nature ; nothing throve :
For flowers—as well expect a cedar grove !
But cockle, spurge, according to their law
Might propagate their kind, with none to awe,
You'd think : a burr had been a treasure-trove.

11.

No ! penury, inertness, and grimace,
In some strange sort, were the land's portion. " See Or shut your eyes "—said Nature peevishly—
" It nothing skills : I cannot help my case :
The Judgment's fire alone can cure this place,
Calcine its clods and set my prisoners free."

12.

If there pushed any ragged thistle-stalk
Above its mates, the head was chopped—the bents
Were jealous else. What made those holes and rents
In the dock's harsh swarth leaves—bruised as to baulk
All hope of greenness ? 'tis a brute must walk
Pashing their life out, with a brute's intents.

13.

As for the grass, it grew as scant as hair
In leprosy—thin dry blades pricked the mud
Which underneath looked kneaded up with blood.
One stiff blind horse, his every bone a-stare,
Stood stupified, however he came there—
Thrust out past service from the devil's stud !

14.

Alive ? he might be dead for all I know,
With that red gaunt and colloped neck a-strain,
And shut eyes underneath the rusty mane.
Seldom went such grotesqueness with such woe :
I never saw a brute I hated so—
He must be wicked to deserve such pain.

15.

I shut my eyes and turned them on my heart.
As a man calls for wine before he fights,
I asked one draught of earlier, happier sights
Ere fitly I could hope to play my part.
Think first, fight afterwards—the soldier's art :
One taste of the old times sets all to rights !

16.

Not it ! I fancied Cuthbert's reddening face
Beneath its garniture of curly gold,
Dear fellow, till I almost felt him fold
An arm in mine to fix me to the place,
That way he used. Alas ! one night's disgrace !
Out went my heart's new fire and left it cold.

17.

Giles, then, the soul of honour—there he stands
Frank as ten years ago when knighted first.
What honest men should dare (he said) he durst.

Good—but the scene shifts—faugh! what hangman's
Pin to his breast a parchment? his own bands [hands
Read it. Poor traitor, spit upon and curst!

18.

Better this present than a past like that—
Back therefore to my darkening path again.
No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.
Will the night send a howlet or a bat?
I asked: when something on the dismal flat
Came to arrest my thoughts and change their train.

19.

A sudden little river crossed my path
As unexpected as a serpent comes.
No sluggish tide congenial to the glooms—
This, as it frothed by, might have been a bath
For the fiend's glowing hoof—to see the wrath
Of its black eddy bespate with flakes and spumes.

20.

So petty yet so spiteful! all along,
Low scrubby alders kneeled down over it;
Drenched willows flung them headlong in a fit
Of mute despair, a suicidal throng:
The river which had done them all the wrong,
Whate'er that was, rolled by, deterred no whit.

21.

Which, while I forded,—good saints, how I feared
To set my foot upon a dead man's check,
Each step, or feel the spear I thrust to seek
For hollows, tangled in his hair or beard!
—It may have been a water-rat I speared,
But, ugh! it sounded like a baby's shriek.

22.

Glad was I when I reached the other bank.

Now for a better country. Vain presage !

Who were the strugglers, what war did they wage
Whose savage trample thus could pad the dank
Soil to a plash ? toads in a poisoned tank,
Or wild cats in a red-hot iron cage—

23.

The fight must so have seemed in that fell cirque.

What kept them there, with all the plain to choose ?

No foot-print leading to that horrid mews,
None out of it : mad brewage set to work
Their brains, no doubt, like galley-slaves the Turk
Pits for his pastime, Christians against Jews.

24.

And more than that—a furlong on—why, there !

What bad use was that engine for, that wheel,

Or brake, not wheel—that harrow fit to reel

Men's bodies out like silk ? with all the air

Of Tophet's tool, on earth left unaware,

Or brought to sharpen its rusty teeth of steel.

25.

Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood,

Next a marsh, it would seem, and now mere earth

Desperate and done with ; (so a fool finds mirth,

Makes a thing and then mars it, till his mood

Changes and off he goes !) within a rood

Bog, clay and rubble, sand and stark black dearth.

26.

Now blotches rankling, coloured gay and grim,

Now patches where some leanness of the soil's

Broke into moss or substances like boils ;

Then came some palsied oak, a cleft in him
Like a distorted mouth that splits its rim
Gaping at death, and dies while it recoils.

27.

And just as far as ever from the end !
Nought in the distance but the evening, nought
To point my footstep further ! At the thought,
A great black bird, Apollyon's bosom-friend,
Sailed past, nor beat his wide wing dragon-penned
That brushed my cap—perchance the guide I sought.

28.

For looking up, aware I somehow grew,
'Spite of the dusk, the plain had given place
All round to mountains—with such name to grace
Mere ugly heights and heaps now stol'n in view.
How thus they had surprised me,—solve it, you !
How to get from them was no plainer case.

29.

Yet half I seemed to recognise some trick
Of mischief happened to me, God knows when—
In a bad dream perhaps. Here ended, then,
Progress this way. When, in the very nick
Of giving up, one time more, came a click
As when a trap shuts—you're inside the den !

30.

Burningly it came on me all at once,
This was the place ! those two hills on the right
Crouched like two bulls locked horn in horn in fight—
While to the left, a tall scalped mountain . . . Dunce,
Fool, to be dozing at the very nonce,
After a life spent training for the sight !

31.

What in the midst lay but the Tower itself ?
 The round squat turret, blind as the fool's heart,
 Built of brown stone, without a counterpart
 In the whole world. The tempest's mocking elf
 Points to the shipman thus the unseen shelf
 He strikes on, only when the timbers start.

32.

Not see ? because of night perhaps ?—Why, day
 Came back again for that ! before it left,
 The dying sunset kindled through a cleft :
 The hills, like giants at a hunting, lay—
 Chin upon hand, to see the game at bay,—
 " Now stab and end the creature—to the heft ! "

33.

Not hear ? when noise was everywhere ? it tolled
 Increasing like a bell. Names in my ears,
 Of all the lost adventurers my peers,—
 How such a one was strong, and such was bold,
 And such was fortunate, yet each of old
 Lost, lost ! one moment knelled the woe of years.

34.

There they stood, ranged along the hill-sides—met
 To view the last of me, a living frame
 For one more picture ! in a sheet of flame
 I saw them and I knew them all. And yet
 Dauntless the slug-horn to my lips I set
 And blew. "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came."

RESPECTABILITY.

1.

DEAR, had the world in its caprice
Deigned to proclaim " I know you both,
Have recognised your plighted troth,
Am sponsor for you—live in peace ! "—
How many precious months and years
Of youth had passed, that speed so fast,
Before we found it out at last,
The world, and what it fears ?

2.

How much of priceless life were spent
With men that every virtue decks,
And women models of their sex,
Society's true ornament,—
Ere we dared wander, nights like this,
Thro' wind and rain, and watch the Seine,
And feel the Boulevart break again
To warmth and light and bliss ?

3.

I know ! the world proscribes not love ;
Allows my finger to caress
Your lip's contour and downiness,
Provided it supply a glove.
The world's good word !—the Institute !
Guizot receives Montalembert !
Eh ? down the court three lampions flare—
Put forward your best foot !

A LIGHT WOMAN.

1.

So far as our story approaches the end,
Which do you pity the most of us three ?—
My friend, or the mistress of my friend
With her wanton eyes, or me ?

2.

My friend was already too good to lose,
And seemed in the way of improvement yet,
When she crossed his path with her hunting-noose
And over him drew her net.

3.

When I saw him tangled in her toils,
A shame, said I, if she adds just him
To her nine-and-ninety other spoils,
The hundredth, for a whim !

4.

And before my friend be wholly hers,
How easy to prove to him, I said,
An eagle's the game her pride prefers,
Though she snaps at the wren instead !

5.

So I gave her eyes my own eyes to take,
 My hand sought hers as in earnest need,
 And round she turned for my noble sake,
 And gave me herself indeed.

6.

The eagle am I, with my fame in the world,
 The wren is he, with his maiden face.
 -- You look away and your lip is curled ?
 Patience, a moment's space !

7.

For see—my friend goes shaking and white ;
 He eyes me as the basilisk :
 I have turned, it appears, his day to night,
 Eclipsing his sun's disc.

8.

And I did it, he thinks, as a very thief :
 " Though I love her—that he comprehends—
 One should master one's passions, (love, in chief)
 And be loyal to one's friends ! "

9.

And she,—she lies in my hand as tame
 As a pear hung basking over a wall ;
 Just a touch to try and off it came ;
 'Tis mine,—can I let it fall ?

10.

With no mind to eat it, that's the worst
 Were it thrown in the road, would the case assist ?
 'Twas quenching a dozen blue-flies' thirst
 When I gave its stalk a twist.

11.

And I,—what I seem to my friend, you see—

What I soon shall seem to his love, you guess.

What I seem to myself, do you ask of me ?

No hero, I confess.

12.

'Tis an awkward thing to play with souls,

And matter enough to save one's own.

Yet think of my friend, and the burning coals

He played with for bits of stone !

13.

One likes to show the truth for the truth ;

That the woman was light is very true :

But suppose she says,—never mind that youth—

What wrong have I done to you ?

14.

Well, any how, here the story stays,

So far at least as I understand ;

And, Robert Browning, you writer of plays,

Here's a subject made to your hand !

THE STATUE AND THE BUST.

THERE'S a palace in Florence, the world knows well,
And a statue watches it from the square,
And this story of both do the townsmen tell.

Ages ago, a lady there,
At the farthest window facing the east
Asked, "Who rides by with the royal air?"

The brides-maids' prattle around her ceased;
She leaned forth, one on either hand;
They saw how the blush of the bride increased—

They felt by its beats her heart expand— 10
As one at each ear and both in a breath
Whispered, "The Great-Duke Ferdinand."

That selfsame instant, underneath,
The Duke rode past in his idle way,
Empty and fine like a swordless sheath.

Gay he rode, with a friend as gay,
Till he threw his head back—"Who is she?"
—"A Bride the Riccardi brings home to-day."

Hair in heaps laid heavily
Over a pale brow spirit-pure—
Carved like the heart of the coal-black tree. 20

Crisped like a war-steed's encolure—
Which vainly sought to dissemble her eyes
Of the blackest black our eyes endure.

And lo, a blade for a knight's emprise
Filled the fine empty sheath of a man, —
The Duke grew straightway brave and wise.

He looked at her, as a lover can ;
She looked at him, as one who awakes,—
The past was a sleep, and her life began. 30

As love so ordered for both their sakes,
A feast was held that selfsame night
In the pile which the mighty shadow makes.

(For Via Larga is three-parts light,
But the Palace overshadows one,
Because of a crime which may God requite

To Florence and God the wrong was done,
Through the first republic's murder there
By Cosimo and his cursed son.)

The Duke (with the statue's face in the square) 40
Turned in the midst of his multitude
At the bright approach of the bridal pair.

Face to face the lovers stood
A single minute and no more,
While the bridegroom bent as a man subdued—

Bowed till his bonnet brushed the floor—
For the Duke on the lady a kiss conferred,
As the courtly custom was of yore.

In a minute can lovers exchange a word ?
If a word did pass, which I do not think, 50
Only one out of the thousand heard.

That was the bridegroom. At day's brink
He and his bride were alone at last
In a bed-chamber by a taper's blink.

Calmly he said that her lot was cast,
That the door she had passed was shut on her
Till the final catafalk repassed.

The world meanwhile, its noise and stir,
Through a certain window facing the east
She might watch like a convent's chronicler. 60

Since passing the door might lead to a feast,
And a feast might lead to so much beside,
He, of many evils, chose the least.

"Freely I choose too," said the bride—
"Your window and its world suffice."
So replied the tongue, while the heart replied—

"If I spend the night with that devil twice,
May his window serve as my loop of hell
Whence a damned soul looks on Paradise !

"I fly to the Duke who loves me well, 70
Sit by his side and laugh at sorrow
Ere I count another ave-bell.

" 'Tis only the coat of a page to borrow,
And tie my hair in a horse-boy's trim,
And I save my soul—but not to-morrow"—

(She checked herself and her eye grew dim)—

" My father tarries to bless my state :
I must keep it one day more for him.

" Is one day more so long to wait ?
Moreover the Duke rides past, I know—
We shall see each other, sure as fate."

80

She turned on her side and slept. Just so !
So we resolve on a thing and sleep.
So did the lady, ages ago.

That night the Duke said, " Dear or cheap
As the cost of this cup of bliss may prove
To body or soul, I will drain it deep."

And on the morrow, bold with love,
He beckoned the bridegroom (close on call,
As his duty bade, by the Duke's alcove)

90

And smiled " 'Twas a very funeral
Your lady will think, this feast of ours,—
A shame to efface, whate'er befall !

" What if we break from the Arno bowers,
And let Petraja, cool and green,
Cure last night's fault with this morning's flowers ? "

The bridegroom, not a thought to be seen
On his steady brow and quiet mouth,
Said, " Too much favour for me so mean !

" Alas ! my lady leaves the south. 100
Each wind that comes from the Apennine
Is a menace to her tender youth

" No way exists, the wise opine,
If she quits her palace twice this year,
To avert the flower of life's decline."

Quoth the Duke, " A sage and a kindly fear.
Moreover Petraja is cold this spring—
Be our feast to-night as usual here ! "

And then to himself—" Which night shall bring
Thy bride to her lover's embraces, fool— 110
Or I am the fool, and thou art his king !

" Yet my passion must wait a night, nor cool—
For to-night the Envoy arrives from France
Whose heart I unlock with thyself, my tool.

" I need thee still and might miss perchance.
To-day is not wholly lost, beside,
With its hope of my lady's countenance—

" For I ride—what should I do but ride ?
And passing her palace, if I list,
May glance at its window—well betide ! " 120

So said, so done : nor the lady missed
One ray that broke from the ardent brow,
Nor a curl of the lips where the spirit kissed.

Be sure that each renewed the vow,
No morrow's sun should arise and set
And leave them then as it left them now.

But next day passed, and next day yet,
With still fresh cause to wait one more
Ere each leaped over the parapet.

And still, as love's brief morning wore, 130
With a gentle start, half smile, half sigh,
They found love not as it seemed before.

They thought it would work infallibly,
But not in despite of heaven and earth—
The rose would blow when the storm passed by.

Meantime they could profit in winter's dearth
By winter's fruits that supplant the rose :
The world and its ways have a certain worth !

And to press a point while these oppose 140
Were a simple policy—best wait,
And lose no friends and gain no foes.

Meanwhile, worse fates than a lover's fate,
Who daily may ride and lean and look
Where his lady watches behind the grate !

And she—she watched the square like a book
Holding one picture and only one,
Which daily to find she undertook.

When the picture was reached the book was done,
And she turned from it all night to scheme
Of tearing it out for herself next sun. 150

Weeks grew months, years—gleam by gleam
The glory dropped from youth and love,
And both perceived they had dreamed a dream,

Which hovered as dreams do, still above,—
But who can take a dream for truth ?
Oh, hide our eyes from the next remove !

One day as the lady saw her youth
Depart, and the silver thread that streaked
Her hair, and, worn by the serpent's tooth,

The brow so puckered, the chin so peaked,— 160
And wondered who the woman was,
So hollow-eyed and haggard-cheeked,

Fronting her silent in the glass—
“ Summon here,” she suddenly said,
“ Before the rest of my old self pass,

“ Him, the Carver, a hand to aid,
Who moulds the clay no love will change,
And fixes a beauty never to fade.

“ Let Robbia's craft so apt and strange
Arrest the remains of young and fair, 170
And rivet them while the seasons range.

“ Make me a face on the window there
Waiting as ever, mute the while,
My love to pass below in the square !

“ And let me think that it may beguile
Dreary days which the dead must spend
Down in their darkness under the aisle—

“ To say,—‘ What matters at the end ?
I did no more while my heart was warm,
Than does that image, my pale-faced friend.’ 180

“ Where is the use of the lip’s red charm,
The heaven of hair, the pride of the brow,
And the blood that blues the inside arm—

Unless we turn, as the soul knows how,
The earthly gift to an end divine ?
A lady of clay is as good, I trow.”

But long ere Robbia’s cornice, fine
With flowers and fruits which leaves enlace,
Was set where now is the empty shrine—

(With, leaning out of a bright blue space, 190
As a ghost might from a chink of sky,
The passionate pale lady’s face—

Eyeing ever with earnest eye
And quick-turned neck at its breathless stretch,
Some one who ever passes by—)

The Duke sighed like the simplest wretch
In Florence, “ So, my dream escapes !
Will its record stay ? ” And he bade them fetch

Some subtle fashioner of shapes—
“ Can the soul, the will, die out of a man 200
Ere his body find the grave that gapes ?

“ John of Douay shall work my plan,
Mould me on horseback here aloft,
Alive—(the subtle artisan !)

“ In the very square I cross so oft !
That men may admire, when future suns
Shall touch the eyes to a purpose soft,

" While the mouth and the brow are brave in bronze—
Admire and say, ' When he was alive,
How he would take his pleasure once ! ' 210

" And it shall go hard but I contrive
To listen meanwhile and laugh in my tomb
At indolence which aspires to strive."

So ! while these wait the trump of doom,
How do their spirits pass, I wonder,
Nights and days in the narrow room ?

Still, I suppose, they sit and ponder
What a gift life was, ages ago,
Six steps out of the chapel yonder.

Surely they see not God, I know, 220
Nor all that chivalry of His,
The soldier-saints who, row on row,

Burn upward each to his point of bliss—
Since, the end of life being manifest,
He had cut his way thro' the world to this.

I hear your reproach—" But delay was best,
For their end was a crime ! "—Oh, a crime will do
As well, I reply, to serve for a test,

As a virtue golden through and through,
Sufficient to vindicate itself 230
And prove its worth at a moment's view.

Must a game be played for the sake of pelf ?
Where a button goes, 'twere an epigram
To offer the stamp of the very Guelph.

The true has no value beyond the sham.
As well the counter as coin, I submit,
When your table's a hat, and your prize, a dram.

Stake your counter as boldly every whit,
Venture as truly, use the same skill,
Do your best, whether winning or losing it, 240

If you choose to play—is my principle !
Let a man contend to the uttermost
For his life's set prize, be it what it will !

The counter our lovers staked was lost
As surely as if it were lawful coin :
And the sin I impute to each frustrate ghost

Was, the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin,
Though the end in sight was a crime, I say.
You of the virtue, (we issue join)
How strive you ? De te, fabula ! 250

LOVE IN A LIFE.

1.

Room after room,
I hunt the house through
We inhabit together.
Heart, fear nothing, for, heart, thou shalt find her,
Next time, herself!—not the trouble behind her
Left in the curtain, the couch's perfume!
As she brushed it, the cornice-wreath blossomed anew,—
Yon looking-glass gleaned at the wave of her feather.

2.

Yet the day wears,
And door succeeds door;
I try the fresh fortune—
Range the wide house from the wing to the centre.
Still the same chance! she goes out as I enter.
Spend my whole day in the quest,—who cares?
But 'tis twilight, you see,—with such suites to explore,
Such closets to search, such alcoves to importune!

LIFE IN A LOVE.

ESCAPE me ?

Never—

Beloved !

While I am I, and you are you,

So long as the world contains us both,

Me the loving and you the loth,

While the one eludes, must the other pursue.

My life is a fault at last, I fear—

It seems too much like a fate, indeed !

Though I do my best I shall scarce succeed—

But what if I fail of my purpose here ?

It is but to keep the nerves at strain,

To dry one's eyes and laugh at a fall,

And baffled, get up to begin again,—

So the chace takes up one's life, that's all.

While, look but once from your farthest bound,

At me so deep in the dust and dark,

No sooner the old hope drops to ground

Than a new one, straight to the self-same mark,

I shape me—

Ever

Removed !

HOW IT STRIKES A CONTEMPORARY.

I ONLY knew one poet in my life :
And this, or something like it, was his way.

You saw go up and down Valladolid,
A man of mark, to know next time you saw.
His very serviceable suit of black
Was courtly once and conscientious still,
And many might have worn it, though none did :
The cloak that somewhat shone and shewed the threads
Had purpose, and the ruff, significance.
He walked and tapped the pavement with his cane, 10
Scenting the world, looking it full in face,
An old dog, bald and blindish, at his heels.
They turned up, now, the alley by the church,
That leads no whither ; now, they breathed themselves
On the main promenade just at the wrong time.
You'd come upon his scrutinising hat,
Making a peaked shade blacker than itself
Against the single window spared some house
Intact yet with its mouldered Moorish work,—
Or else surprise the ferrel of his stick
Trying the mortar's temper 'tween the chinks

Of some new shop a-building, French and fine.
He stood and watched the cobbler at his trade,
The man who slices lemons into drink,
The coffee-roaster's brazier, and the boys
That volunteer to help him turn its winch.
He glanced o'er books on stalls with half an eye,
And fly-leaf ballads on the vendor's string,
And broad-edge bold-print posters by the wall.
He took such cognisance of men and things, 30
If any beat a horse, you felt he saw ;
If any cursed a woman, he took note ;
Yet stared at nobody,—they stared at him,
And found, less to their pleasure than surprise,
He seemed to know them and expect as much.
So, next time that a neighbour's tongue was loosed,
It marked the shameful and notorious fact,
We had among us, not so much a spy,
As a recording chief-inquisitor,
The town's true master if the town but knew ! 40
We merely kept a Governor for form,
While this man walked about and took account
Of all thought, said, and acted, then went home,
And wrote it fully to our Lord the King
Who has an itch to know things, He knows why,
And reads them in His bed-room of a night.
Oh, you might smile ! there wanted not a touch,
A tang of . . . well, it was not wholly ease
As back into your mind the man's look came—
Stricken in years a little,—such a brow 50
His eyes had to live under !—clear as flint
On either side the formidable nose
Curved, cut, and coloured, like an eagle's claw.

Had he to do with A.'s surprising fate ?
 When altogether old B. disappeared
 And young C. got his mistress,—was't our friend,
 His letter to the King, that did it all ?
 What paid the bloodless man for so much pains ?
 Our Lord the King has favourites manifold,
 And shifts his ministry some once a month ; 60
 Our city gets new Governors at whiles,—
 But never word or sign, that I could hear,
 Notified to this man about the streets
 The King's approval of those letters conned
 The last thing duly at the dead of night.
 Did the man love his office ? frowned our Lord,
 Exhorting when none heard—" Beseech me not !
 Too far above my people,—beneath Me !
 I set the watch,—how should the people know ?
 Forget them, keep Me all the more in mind ! " 70
 Was some such understanding 'twixt the Two ?

I found no truth in one report at least—
 That if you tracked him to his home, down lanes
 Beyond the Jewry, and as clean to pace,
 You found he ate his supper in a room
 Blazing with lights, four Titians on the wall,
 And twenty naked girls to change his plate !
 Poor man, he lived another kind of life
 In that new, stuccoed, third house by the bridge,
 Fresh-painted, rather smart than otherwise ! 80
 The whole street might o'erlook him as he sat,
 Leg crossing leg, one foot on the dog's back,
 Playing a decent cribbage with his maid
 (Jacynth, you're sure her name was) o'er the cheese

And fruit, three red halves of starved winter-pears,
Or treat of radishes in April ! nine—
Ten, struck the church clock, straight to bed went he.

My father, like the man of sense he was,
Would point him out to me a dozen times ;
“ St—St,” he’d whisper, “ the Corregidor ! ” 90
I had been used to think that personage
Was one with lacquered breeches, lustrous belt,
And feathers like a forest in his hat,
Who blew a trumpet and proclaimed the news,
Announced the bull-fights, gave each church its turn,
And memorized the miracle in vogue !
He had a great observance from us boys—
I was in error ; that was not the man.

I’d like now, yet had haply been afraid,
To have just looked, when this man came to die, 100
And seen who lined the clean gay garret’s sides
And stood about the neat low truckle-bed,
With the heavenly manner of relieving guard.
Here had been, mark, the general-in-chief,
Thro’ a whole campaign of the world’s life and death,
Doing the King’s work all the dim day long,
In his old coat, and up to his knees in mud,
Smoked like a herring, dining on a crust,—
And now the day was won, relieved at once !
No further show or need for that old coat, 110
You are sure, for one thing ! Bless us, all the while
How sprucely we are dressed out, you and I !
A second, and the angels alter that.
Well, I could never write a verse,—could you ?
Let’s to the Prado and make the most of time.

THE LAST RIDE TOGETHER.

1.

I SAID—Then, dearest, since 'tis so,
Since now at length my fate I know,
Since nothing all my love avails,
Since all my life seemed meant for, fails,
 Since this was written and needs must be—
My whole heart rises up to bless
Your name in pride and thankfulness !
Take back the hope you gave,—I claim
Only a memory of the same,
—And this beside, if you will not blame,
 Your leave for one more last ride with me.

2.

My mistress bent that brow of hers,
Those deep dark eyes where pride demurs
When pity would be softening through,
Fixed me a breathing-while or two

With life or death in the balance—Right !
The blood replenished me again :
My last thought was at least not vain.
I and my mistress, side by side
Shall be together, breathe and ride,
So one day more am I deified.

Who knows but the world may end to-night ?

3.

Hush ! if you saw some western cloud
All billowy-bosomed, over-bowed
By many benedictions—sun's
And moon's and evening-star's at once—
And so, you, looking and loving best,
Conscious grew, your passion drew
Cloud, sunset, moonrise, star-shine too
Down on you, near and yet more near,
Till flesh must fade for heaven was here !—
Thus leant she and lingered—joy and fear !
Thus lay she a moment on my breast.

4.

Then we began to ride. My soul
Smoothed itself out, a long-cramped scroll
Freshening and fluttering in the wind.
Past hopes already lay behind.
What need to strive with a life awry ?
Had I said that, had I done this,
So might I gain, so might I miss.
Might she have loved me ? just as well
She might have hated,—who can tell ?
Where had I been now if the worst befell ?
And here we are riding, she and I.

5.

Fail I alone, in words and deeds ?
Why, all men strive and who succeeds ?
We rode ; it seemed my spirit flew,
Saw other regions, cities new,
 As the world rushed by on either side.
I thought, All labour, yet no less
Bear up beneath their unsuccess.
Look at the end of work, contrast
The petty Done the Undone vast,
This present of theirs with the hopeful past !
 I hoped she would love me. Here we ride.

6.

What hand and brain went ever paired ?
What heart alike conceived and dared ?
What act proved all its thought had been ?
What will but felt the fleshly screen ?
 We ride and I see her bosom heave.
There's many a crown for who can reach.
Ten lines, a statesman's life in each !
The flag stuck on a heap of bones,
A soldier's doing ! what atones ?
They scratch his name on the Abbey-stones.
 My riding is better, by their leave.

7.

What does it all mean, poet ? well,
Your brain's beat into rhythm—you tell
What we felt only ; you expressed
You hold things beautiful the best,

And pace them in rhyme so, side by side.
 'Tis something, nay 'tis much—but then,
 Have you yourself what's best for men ?
 Are you—poor, sick, old ere your time—
 Nearer one whit your own sublime
 Than we who never have turned a rhyme ?
 Sing, riding's a joy ! For me, I ride.

8.

And you, great sculptor—so you gave
 A score of years to art, her slave,
 And that's your Venus—whence we turn
 To yonder girl that fords the burn !
 You acquiesce and shall I repine ?
 What, man of music, you, grown grey
 With notes and nothing else to say,
 Is this your sole praise from a friend,
 " Greatly his opera's strains intend,
 " But in music we know how fashions end ! "
 I gave my youth—but we ride, in fine.

9.

Who knows what's fit for us ? Had fate
 Proposed bliss here should sublimate
 My being ; had I signed the bond—
 Still one must lead some life beyond,
 —Have a bliss to die with, dim-descried.
 This foot once planted on the goal,
 This glory-garland round my soul,
 Could I descry such ? Try and test !
 I sink back shuddering from the quest—
 Earth being so good, would Heaven seem best ?
 Now, Heaven and she are beyond this ride.

10.

And yet—she has not spoke so long !
What if Heaven be, that, fair and strong
At life's best, with our eyes upturned
Whither life's flower is first discerned,
 We, fixed so, ever should so abide ?
What if we still ride on, we two,
With life for ever old yet new,
Changed not in kind but in degree,
The instant made eternity,—
And Heaven just prove that I and she Ride, ride together, for ever ride ?

THE PATRIOT.

AN OLD STORY.

1.

It was roses, roses, all the way,
With myrtle mixed in my path like mad.
The house-roofs seemed to heave and sway,
The church-spires flamed, such flags they had,
A year ago on this very day !

2.

The air broke into a mist with bells,
The old walls rocked with the crowds and cries.
Had I said, " Good folks, mere noise repels—
But give me your sun from yonder skies ! "
They had answered, " And afterward, what else ? "

3.

Alack, it was I who leaped at the sun,
To give it my loving friends to keep.
Nought man could do, have I left undone
And you see my harvest, what I reap
This very day, now a year is run.

4.

There's nobody on the house-tops now—
Just a palsied few at the windows set—
For the best of the sight is, all allow,
At the Shambles' Gate—or, better yet,
By the very scaffold's foot, I trow.

5.

I go in the rain, and, more than needs,
A rope cuts both my wrists behind,
And I think, by the feel, my forehead bleeds,
For they fling, whoever has a mind,
Stones at me for my year's misdeeds.

6.

Thus I entered Brescia, and thus I go !
In such triumphs, people have dropped down dead.
“Thou, paid by the World,—what dost thou owe Me ? ” God might have questioned : but now instead
“The God shall requite ! I am safer so.

MASTER HUGUES OF SAXE-GOTHA.

1.

HIST, but a word, fair and soft !

Forth and be judged, Master Hugues !
Answer the question I've put you so oft—

What do you mean by your mountainous fugues ?
See, we're alone in the loft,

2.

I, the poor organist here,

Hugues, the composer of note—
Dead, though, and done with, this many a year—
Let's have a colloquy, something to quote,
Make the world prick up its ear !

3.

See, the church empties a-pace.

Fast they extinguish the lights—
Hallo, there, sacristan ! five minutes' grace !

Here's a crank pedal wants setting to rights,
Baulks one of holding the base.

4.

See, our huge house of the sounds

Hushing its hundreds at once,
Bids the last loiterer back to his bounds

—Oh, you may challenge them, not a response
Get the church saints on their rounds !

5.

(Saints go their rounds, who shall doubt ?
—March, with the moon to admire,
Up nave, down chancel, turn transept about,
Supervise all betwixt pavement and spire,
Put rats and mice to the rout—

6.

Aloys and Jurien and Just—
Order things back to their place,
Have a sharp eye lest the candlesticks rust,
Rub the church plate, darn the sacrament lace,
Clear the desk velvet of dust.)

7.

Here's your book, younger folks shelve !
Played I not off-hand and runningly,
Just now, your masterpiece, hard number twelve ?
Here's what should strike,—could one handle it
Help the axe, give it a helve ! [cunningly.

8.

Page after page as I played,
Every bar's rest where one wipes
Sweat from one's brow, I looked up and surveyed
O'er my three claviers, yon forest of pipes
Whence you still peeped in the shade.

9.

Sure you were wishful to speak,
You, with brow ruled like a score,
Yes, and eyes buried in pits on each cheek,
Like two great breves as they wrote them of yore
Each side that bar, your straight beak !

10.

Sure you said—" Good, the mere notes !
Still, couldst thou take my intent,
Know what procured me our Company's votes—
Masters being lauded and sciolists shent,
Parted the sheep from the goats ! "

11.

Well then, speak up, never flinch !
Quick, ere my candle's a snuff
—Burnt, do you see ? to its uttermost inch—
I believe in you, but that's not enough.
Give my conviction a clinch !

12.

First you deliver your phrase
—Nothing propound, that I see,
Fit in itself for much blame or much praise—
Answered no less, where no answer needs be :
Off start the Two on their ways !

13.

Straight must a Third interpose,
Volunteer needlessly help—
In strikes a Fourth, a Fifth thrusts in his nose,
So the cry's open, the kennel's a-yelp,
Argument's hot to the close !

14.

One disertates, he is candid—
Two must discept,—has distinguished !
Three helps the couple, if ever yet man did :
Four protests, Five makes a dart at the thing wished-
Back to One, goes the case bandied !

15.

One says his say with a difference—

More of expounding, explaining !

All now is wrangle, abuse, and vociferance—

Now there's a truce, all's subdued, self-restraining—

Five, though, stands out all the stiffer hence.

16.

One is incisive, corrosive—

Two retorts, nettled, curt, crepitant—

Three makes rejoinder, expansive, explosive—

Four overbears them all, strident and strepitant—

Five . . . O Danaides, O Sieve !

17.

Now, they ply axes and crowbars—

Now, they prick pins at a tissue

Fine as a skein of the casuist Escobar's

Worked on the bone of a lie. To what issue ?

Where is our gain at the Two-bars ?

18.

Est fuga, volvitur rota !

On we drift. Where looms the dim port ?

One, Two, Three, Four, Five, contribute their quota—

Something is gained, if one caught but the import—

Show it us, Hugues of Saxe-Gotha !

19.

What with affirming, denying,

Holding, risposting, subjoining,

All's like . . . it's like . . . for an instance I'm trying . . .

There ! See our roof, its gilt moulding and groining

Under those spider-webs lying !

20.

So your fugue broadens and thickens,
Greatens and deepens and lengthens,
Till one exclaims—" But where's music, the dickens ?
Blot ye the gold, while your spider-web strengthens,
Blackened to the stoutest of tickens ? "

21.

I for man's effort am zealous.
Prove me such censure's unfounded !
Seems it surprising a lover grows jealous—
Hopes 'twas for something his organ-pipes sounded,
Tiring three boys at the bellows ?

22.

Is it your moral of Life ?
Such a web, simple and subtle,
Weave we on earth here in impotent strife,
Backward and forward each throwing his shuttle,
Death ending all with a knife ?

23.

Over our heads Truth and Nature—
Still our life's zigzags and dodges,
Ins and outs weaving a new legislature—
God's gold just shining its last where that lodges,
Palled beneath Man's usurpature !

24.

So we o'ershroud stars and roses,
Cherub and trophy and garland.
Nothings grow something which quietly closes
Heaven's earnest eye,—not a glimpse of the far land
Gets through our comments and glozes.

25.

Ah, but traditions, inventions,
(Say we and make up a visage)

So many men with such various intentions

Down the past ages must know more than this age !
Leave the web all its dimensions !

26.

Who thinks Hugues wrote for the deaf ?

Proved a mere mountain in labour ?

Better submit—try again—what's the clef ?

'Faith, it's no trifle for pipe and for tabor—
Four flats—the minor in F.

27.

Friend, your fugue taxes the finger.

Learning it once, who would lose it ?

Yet all the while a misgiving will linger—

Truth's golden o'er us although we refuse it—
Nature, thro' dust-clouds we fling her !

28.

Hugues ! I advise meâ pænâ

(Counterpoint glares like a Gorgon)

Bid One, Two, Three, Four, Five, clear the arena !

Say the word, straight I unstop the Full-Organ,
Blare out the mode Palestrina.

29.

While in the roof, if I'm right there—

. . . Lo, you, the wick in the socket !

Hallo, you sacristan, show us a light there !

Down it dips, gone like a rocket !

What, you want, do you, to come unawares,

Sweeping the church up for first morning-prayers,

And find a poor devil at end of his cares

At the foot of your rotten-planked rat-riddled stairs ?

Do I carry the moon in my pocket ?

BISHOP BLOUGRAM'S APOLOGY.

No more wine ? then we'll push back chairs and talk.
A final glass for me, tho' : cool, i'faith !
We ought to have our Abbey back, you see.
It's different, preaching in basilicas,
And doing duty in some masterpiece
Like this of brother Pugin's, bless his heart !
I doubt if they're half baked, those chalk rosettes,
Ciphers and stucco-twiddlings everywhere ;
It's just like breathing in a lime-kiln : eh ?
These hot long ceremonies of our church 10
Cost us a little—oh, they pay the price,
You take me—amply pay it ! Now, we'll talk.

So, you despise me, Mr. Gigadibs.
No deprecation,—nay, I beg you, sir !
Beside 'tis our engagement : don't you know,
I promised, if you'd watch a dinner out,
We'd see truth dawn together ?—truth that peeps
Over the glass's edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop and holds its noise
And leaves soul free a little. Now's the time— 20

'Tis break of day ! You do despise me then.
 And if I say, "despise me,"—never fear—
 I know you do not in a certain sense—
 Not in my arm-chair for example : here,
 I well imagine you respect my place
 (Status, entourage, worldly circumstance)
 Quite to its value—very much indeed
 —Are up to the protesting eyes of you
 In pride at being seated here for once—
 You'll turn it to such capital account ! 30
 When somebody, through years and years to come,
 Hints of the bishop,—names me—that's enough—
 "Blougram ? I knew him"—(into it you slide)
 "Dined with him once, a Corpus Christi Day,
 All alone, we two—he's a clever man—
 And after dinner,—why, the wine you know,—
 Oh, there was wine, and good !—what with the wine . . .
 'Faith, we began upon all sorts of talk !
 He's no bad fellow, Blougram—he had seen
 Something of mine he relished—some review— 40
 He's quite above their humbug in his heart,
 Half-said as much, indeed—the thing's his trade—
 I warrant, Blougram's sceptical at times—
 How otherwise ? I liked him, I confess !"
Che ch'è, my dear sir, as we say at Rome,
 Don't you protest now ! It's fair give and take ;
 You have had your turn and spoken your home-truths—
 The hand's mine now, and here you follow suit.

Thus much conceded, still the first fact stays—
 You do despise me ; your ideal of life 50
 Is not the bishop's—you would not be I—

You would like better to be Goethe, now,
Or Buonaparte—or, bless me, lower still,
Count D'Orsay,—so you did what you preferred,
Spoke as you thought, and, as you cannot help,
Believed or disbelieved, no matter what,
So long as on that point, whate'er it was,
You loosed your mind, were whole and sole yourself.
—That, my ideal never can include,
Upon that element of truth and worth 60
Never be based ! for say they make me Pope
(They can't—suppose it for our argument)
Why, there I'm at my tether's end—I've reached
My height, and not a height which pleases you.
An unbelieving Pope won't do, you say.
It's like those eerie stories nurses tell,
Of how some actor played Death on a stage
With pasteboard crown, sham orb, and tinselled dart,
And called himself the monarch of the world,
Then going in the tire-room afterward 70
Because the play was done, to shift himself,
Got touched upon the sleeve familiarly
The moment he had shut the closet door
By Death himself. Thus God might touch a Pope
At unawares, ask what his baubles mean,
And whose part he presumed to play just now ?
Best be yourself, imperial, plain and true !

So, drawing comfortable breath again,
You weigh and find whatever more or less
I boast of my ideal realised 80
Is nothing in the balance when opposed
To your ideal, your grand simple life,

Of which you will not realise one jot.
 I am much, you are nothing ; you would be all,
 I would be merely much—you beat me there.

No, friend, you do not beat me,—hearken why.
 The common problem, yours, mine, every one's,
 Is not to fancy what were fair in life
 Provided it could be,—but, finding first
 What may be, then find how to make it fair 90
 Up to our means—a very different thing !
 No abstract intellectual plan of life
 Quite irrespective of life's plainest laws,
 But one, a man, who is man and nothing more,
 May lead within a world which (by your leave)
 Is Rome or London—not Fool's-paradise.
 Embellish Rome, idealise away,
 Make Paradise of London if you can,
 You're welcome, nay, you're wise.

A simile !

We mortals cross the ocean of this world 100
 Each in his average cabin of a life—
 The best's not big, the worst yields elbow-room.
 Now for our six months' voyage—how prepare ?
 You come on shipboard with a landsman's list
 Of things he calls convenient—so they are !
 An India screen is pretty furniture,
 A piano-forte is a fine resource,
 All Balzac's novels occupy one shelf,
 The new edition fifty volumes long ;
 And little Greek books with the funny type 110
 They get up well at Leipsic fill the next—

Go on ! slabbed marble, what a bath it makes !
And Parma's pride, the Jerome, let us add !
Twere pleasant could Correggio's fleeting glow
Hang full in face of one where'er one roams,
Since he more than the others brings with him
Italy's self,—the marvellous Modenese !
Yet 'twas not on your list before, perhaps.
—Alas ! friend, here's the agent . . . is't the name ?
The captain, or whoever's master here— 120
You see him screw his face up ; what's his cry
Ere you set foot on shipboard ? “ Six feet square ! ”
If you won't understand what six feet mean,
Compute and purchase stores accordingly—
And if in pique because he overhauls
Your Jerome, piano and bath, you come on board
Bare—why you cut a figure at the first
While sympathetic landsmen see you off ;
Not afterwards, when, long ere half seas o'er,
You peep up from your utterly naked boards 130
Into some snug and well-appointed berth
Like mine, for instance (try the cooler jug—
Put back the other, but don't jog the ice)
And mortified you mutter “ Well and good—
He sits enjoying his sea-furniture—
'Tis stout and proper, and there's store of it,
Though I've the better notion, all agree,
Of fitting rooms up ! hang the carpenter,
Neat ship-shape fixings and contrivances—
I would have brought my Jerome, frame and all ! ” 140
And meantime you bring nothing : never mind—
You've proved your artist-nature : what you don't,
You might bring, so despise me, as I say.

Now come, let's backward to the starting place.
 See my way : we're two college friends, suppose—
 Prepare together for our voyage, then,
 Each note and check the other in his work,—
 Here's mine, a bishop's outfit ; criticise !
 What's wrong ? why won't you be a bishop too ?

Why, first, you don't believe, you don't and can't, 150
 (Not statedly, that is, and fixedly
 And absolutely and exclusively)
 In any revelation called divine.
 No dogmas nail your faith—and what remains
 But say so, like the honest man you are ?
 First, therefore, overhaul theology !
 Nay, I too, not a fool, you please to think,
 Must find believing every whit as hard,
 And if I do not frankly say as much,
 The ugly consequence is clear enough. 160

Now, wait, my friend : well, I do not believe—
 If you'll accept no faith that is not fixed,
 Absolute and exclusive, as you say.
 (You're wrong—I mean to prove it in due time)
 Meanwhile, I know where difficulties lie
 I could not, cannot solve, nor ever shall,
 So give up hope accordingly to solve—
 (To you, and over the wine). Our dogmas then
 With both of us, tho' in unlike degree,
 Missing full credence—overboard with them ! 170
 I mean to meet you on your own premise—
 Good, there go mine in company with yours !

And now what are we ? unbelievers both,
 Calm and complete, determinately fixed
 To-day, to-morrow, and for ever, pray ?
 You'll guarantee me that ? Not so, I think.
 In no-wise ! all we've gained is, that belief,
 As unbelief before, shakes us by fits,
 Confounds us like its predecessor. Where's
 The gain ? how can we guard our unbelief, 180
 Make it bear fruit to us ?—the problem here.
 Just when we are safest, there's a sunset-touch,
 A fancy from a flower-bell, some one's death,
 A chorus-ending from Euripides,—
 And that's enough for fifty hopes and fears
 As old and new at once as Nature's self,
 To rap and knock and enter in our soul,
 Take hands and dance there, a fantastic ring,
 Round the ancient idol, on his base again,—
 The grand Perhaps ! we look on helplessly,— 190
 There the old misgivings, crooked questions are—
 This good God,—what he could do, if he would,
 Would, if he could—then must have done long since :
 If so, when, where, and how ? some way must be,—
 Once feel about, and soon or late you hit
 Some sense, in which it might be, after all.
 Why not, " The Way, the Truth, the Life ? "

—That way

Over the mountain, which who stands upon
 Is apt to doubt if it's indeed a road ;
 While if he views it from the waste itself, 200
 Up goes the line there, plain from base to brow,
 Not vague, mistakeable ! what's a break or two

Seen from the unbroken desert either side ?
 And then (to bring in fresh philosophy)
 What if the breaks themselves should prove at last
 The most consummate of contrivances
 To train a man's eye, teach him what is faith,—
 And so we stumble at truth's very test ?
 What have we gained then by our unbelief
 But a life of doubt diversified by faith, 210
 For one of faith diversified by doubt.
 We called the chess-board white,—we call it black.

“ Well,” you rejoin, “ the end's no worse, at least,
 We've reason for both colours on the board.
 Why not confess, then, where I drop the faith
 And you the doubt, that I'm as right as you ? ”

Because, friend, in the next place, this being so,
 And both things even,—faith and unbelief
 Left to a man's choice,—we'll proceed a step,
 Returning to our image, which I like. 220

A man's choice, yes—but a cabin-passenger's—
 The man made for the special life of the world—
 Do you forget him ? I remember though !
 Consult our ship's conditions and you find
 One and but one choice suitable to all,
 The choice that you unluckily prefer
 Turning things topsy-turvy—they or it
 Going to the ground. Belief or unbelief
 Bears upon life, determines its whole course,
 Begins at its beginning. See the world 230
 Such as it is,—you made it not, nor I ;

I mean to take it as it is,—and you
Not so you'll take it,—though you get nought else.
I know the special kind of life I like,
What suits the most my idiosyncrasy,
Brings out the best of me and bears me fruit
In power, peace, pleasantness, and length of days.
I find that positive belief does this
For me, and unbelief, no whit of this.
—For you, it does, however—that we'll try ! 240
'Tis clear, I cannot lead my life, at least
Induce the world to let me peaceably,
Without declaring at the outset, " Friends,
I absolutely and peremptorily
Believe ! "—I say faith is my waking life.
One sleeps, indeed, and dreams at intervals,
We know, but waking's the main point with us,
And my provision's for life's waking part.
Accordingly, I use heart, head and hands
All day, I build, scheme, study and make friends ; 250
And when night overtakes me, down I lie,
Sleep, dream a little, and get done with it,
The sooner the better, to begin afresh.
What's midnight's doubt before the dayspring's faith ?
You, the philosopher, that disbelieve,
That recognise the night, give dreams their weight—
To be consistent you should keep your bed,
Abstain from healthy acts that prove you a man,
For fear you drowse perhaps at unawares !
And certainly at night you'll sleep and dream, 260
Live through the day and bustle as you please.
And so you live to sleep as I to wake,
To unbelieve as I to still believe ?

Well, and the common sense of the world calls you
 Bed-ridden,—and its good things come to me.
 Its estimation, which is half the fight,
 That's the first cabin-comfort I secure—
 The next . . . but you perceive with half an eye !
 Come, come, it's best believing, if we can—
 You can't but own that.

Next, concede again— 270

If once we choose belief, on all accounts
 We can't be too decisive in our faith,
 Conclusive and exclusive in its terms,
 To suit the world which gives us the good things.
 In every man's career are certain points
 Whereon he dares not be indifferent ;
 The world detects him clearly, if he is,
 As baffled at the game, and losing life.
 He may care little or he may care much
 For riches, honour, pleasure, work, repose, 280
 Since various theories of life and life's
 Success are extant which might easily
 Comport with either estimate of these,
 And whoso chooses wealth or poverty,
 Labour or quiet, is not judged a fool
 Because his fellows would choose otherwise.
 We let him choose upon his own account
 So long as he's consistent with his choice.
 But certain points, left wholly to himself,
 When once a man has arbitrated on, 290
 We say he must succeed there or go hang.
 Thus, he should wed the woman he loves most
 Or needs most, whatsoe'er the love or need—

For he can't wed twice. Then, he must avouch
 Or follow, at the least, sufficiently,
 The form of faith his conscience holds the best,
 Whate'er the process of conviction was.
 For nothing can compensate his mistake
 On such a point, the man himself being judge—
 He cannot wed twice, nor twice lose his soul. 300

Well now—there's one great form of Christian faith
 I happened to be born in—which to teach
 Was given me as I grew up, on all hands,
 As best and readiest means of living by ;
 The same on examination being proved
 The most pronounced moreover, fixed, precise
 And absolute form of faith in the whole world —
 Accordingly, most potent of all forms
 For working on the world. Observe, my friend,
 Such as you know me, I am free to say, 310
 In these hard latter days which hamper one,
 Myself, by no immoderate exercise
 Of intellect and learning, and the tact
 To let external forces work for me,
 Bid the street's stones be bread and they are bread.
 Bid Peter's creed, or, rather, Hildebrand's,
 Exalt me o'er my fellows in the world
 And make my life an ease and joy and pride,
 It does so,—which for me's a great point gained,
 Who have a soul and body that exact 320
 A comfortable care in many ways.
 There's power in me and will to dominate
 Which I must exercise, they hurt me else :
 In many ways I need mankind's respect,

Obedience, and the love that's born of fear :
 While at the same time, there's a taste I have,
 A toy of soul, a titillating thing,
 Refuses to digest these dainties crude.
 The naked life is gross till clothed upon :
 I must take what men offer, with a grace 330
 As though I would not, could I help it, take !
 A uniform to wear though over-rich—
 Something imposed on me, no choice of mine ;
 No fancy-dress worn for pure fashion's sake
 And despicable therefore ! now men kneel
 And kiss my hand—of course the Church's hand.
 Thus I am made, thus life is best for me,
 And thus that it should be I have procured ;
 And thus it could not be another way,
 I venture to imagine.

You'll reply— 340

So far my choice, no doubt, is a success ;
 But were I made of better elements,
 With nobler instincts, purer tastes, like you,
 I hardly would account the thing success
 Though it do all for me I say.

But, friend,

We speak of what is—not of what might be,
 And how 'twere better if 'twere otherwise.
 I am the man you see here plain enough—
 Grant I'm a beast, why beasts must lead beasts' lives !
 Suppose I own at once to tail and claws— 350
 The tailless man exceeds me ; but being tailed I'll lash out lion-fashion, and leave apes

To dock their stump and dress their haunches up.
 My business is not to remake myself,
 But make the absolute best of what God made.
 Or—our first simile—though you proved me doomed
 To a viler berth still, to the steerage-hole,
 The sheep-pen or the pig-stye, I should strive
 To make what use of each were possible ;
 And as this cabin gets upholstery, 300
 That hutch should rustle with sufficient straw.

But, friend, I don't acknowledge quite so fast
 I fail of all your manhood's lofty tastes
 Enumerated so complacently,
 On the mere ground that you forsooth can find
 In this particular life I choose to lead
 No fit provision for them. Can you not ?
 Say you, my fault is I address myself
 To grosser estimators than I need,
 And that's no way of holding up the soul— 370
 Which, nobler, needs men's praise perhaps, yet knows
 One wise man's verdict outweighs all the fools',—
 Would like the two, but, forced to choose, takes that ?
 I pine among my million imbeciles
 (You think) aware some dozen men of sense
 Eye me and know me, whether I believe
 In the last winking Virgin, as I vow,
 And am a fool, or disbelieve in her
 And am a knave,—approve in neither case,
 Withhold their voices though I look their way : 380
 Like Verdi when, at his worst opera's end
 (The thing they gave at Florence,—what's its name ?)
 While the mad houseful's plaudits near out-bang

His orchestra of salt-box, tongs and bones,
 He looks through all the roaring and the wreaths
 Where sits Rossini patient in his stall.

Nay, friend, I meet you with an answer here—
 For even your prime men who appraise their kind
 Are men still, catch a thing within a thing,
 See more in a truth than the truth's simple self, 390
 Confuse themselves. You see lads walk the street
 Sixty the minute ; what's to note in that ?
 You see one lad o'erstride a chimney-stack ;
 Him you must watch—he's sure to fall, yet stands !
 Our interest's on the dangerous edge of things.
 The honest thief, the tender murderer,
 The superstitious atheist, demireps
 That love and save their souls in new French books—
 We watch while these in equilibrium keep
 The giddy line midway : one step aside, 400
 They're classed and done with. I, then, keep the line
 Before your sages,—just the men to shrink
 From the gross weights, coarse scales, and labels broad
 You offer their refinement. Fool or knave ?
 Why needs a bishop be a fool or knave
 When there's a thousand diamond weights between ?
 So I enlist them. Your picked Twelve, you'll find,
 Profess themselves indignant, scandalised
 At thus being held unable to explain
 How a superior man who disbelieves 410
 May not believe as well : that's Schelling's way !
 It's through my coming in the tail of time,
 Nicking the minute with a happy tact.
 Had I been born three hundred years ago

They'd say, "What's strange? Blougram of course believes ;"

And, seventy years since, "disbelieves of course."

But now, "He may believe ; and yet, and yet

How can he ?"—All eyes turn with interest.

Whereas, step off the line on either side—

You, for example, clever to a fault, 420

The rough and ready man that write apace,

Read somewhat seldomer, think perhaps even less—

You disbelieve ! Who wonders and who cares ?

Lord So-and-So—his coat bedropt with wax,

All Peter's chains about his waist, his back

Brave with the needlework of Noodledom,

Believes ! Again, who wonders and who cares ?

But I, the man of sense and learning too,

The able to think yet act, the this, the that,

I, to believe at this late time of day ! 430

Enough ; you see, I need not fear contempt.

—Except it's yours ! admire me as these may,

You don't. But what at least do you admire ?

Present your own perfections, your ideal,

Your pattern man for a minute—oh, make haste !

Is it Napoleon you would have us grow ?

Concede the means ; allow his head and hand,

(A large concession, clever as you are)

Good !—In our common primal element

Of unbelief (we can't believe, you know— 440

We're still at that admission, recollect)

Where do you find—apart from, towering-o'er

The secondary temporary aims

Which satisfy the gross tastes you despise—

Where do you find his star ?—his crazy trust
 God knows through what or in what ? it's alive
 And shines and leads him and that's all we want.
 Have we aught in our sober night shall point
 Such ends as his were, and direct the means
 Of working out our purpose straight as his, 450
 Nor bring a moment's trouble on success
 With after-care to justify the same ?
 —Be a Napoleon and yet disbelieve !
 Why, the man's mad, friend, take his light away.
 What's the vague good of the world for which you'd dare
 With comfort to yourself blow millions up ?
 We neither of us see it ! we do see
 The blown-up millions—spatter of their brains
 And writhing of their bowels and so forth,
 In that bewildering entanglement 460
 Of horrible eventualities
 Past calculation to the end of time !
 Can I mistake for some clear word of God
 (Which were my ample warrant for it all)
 His puff of hazy instincts, idle talk,
 "The state, that's I," quack-nonsense about kings,
 And (when one beats the man to his last hold)
 The vague idea of setting things to rights,
 Policing people efficaciously,
 More to their profit, most of all to his own ; 470
 The whole to end that dimmest of ends
 By an Austrian marriage, cant to us the church,
 And resurrection of the old régime.
 Would I, who hope to live a dozen years,
 Fight Austerlitz for reasons such and such ?
 No : for, concede me but the merest chance

Doubt may be wrong—there's judgment, life to come !
 With just that chance, I dare not. Doubt proves right ?
 This present life is all ? you offer me
 Its dozen noisy years with not a chance 480
 That wedding an Arch-Duchess, wearing lace,
 And getting called by divers new-coined names,
 Will drive off ugly thoughts and let me dine,
 Sleep, read and chat in quiet as I like !
 Therefore, I will not.

Take another case ;
 Fit up the cabin yet another way.
 What say you to the poet's ? shall we write
 Hamlets, Othellos—make the world our own,
 Without a risk to run of either sort ?
 I can't!—to put the strongest reason first. 490
 “ But try,” you urge, “ the trying shall suffice :
 The aim, if reached or not, makes great the life.
 Try to be Shakspeare, leave the rest to fate ! ”
 Spare my self-knowledge—there's no fooling me !
 If I prefer remaining my poor self,
 I say so not in self-dispraise but praise.
 If I'm a Shakspeare, let the well alone—
 Why should I try to be what now I am ?
 If I'm no Shakspeare, as too probable,—
 His power and consciousness and self-delight 500
 And all we want in common, shall I find—
 Trying for ever ? while on points of taste
 Wherewith, to speak it humbly, he and I
 Are dowered alike—I'll ask you, I or he,
 Which in our two lives realises most ?
 Much, he imagined—somewhat, I possess.

He had the imagination ; stick to that !
 Let him say " In the face of my soul's works
 Your world is worthless and I touch it not Lest I should wrong them "—I withdraw my plea. 510
 But does he say so ? look upon his life !
 Himself, who only can, gives judgment there.
 He leaves his towers and gorgeous palaces
 To build the trimmest house in Stratford town ;
 Saves money, spends it, owns the worth of things,
 Giulio Romano's pictures, Dowland's lute ;
 Enjoys a show, respects the puppets, too,
 And none more, had he seen its entry once,
 Than " Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal."
 Why then should I who play that personage, 520
 The very Pandulph Shakspeare's fancy made,
 Be told that had the poet chanced to start
 From where I stand now (some degree like mine
 Being just the goal he ran his race to reach)
 He would have run the whole race back, forsooth,
 And left being Pandulph, to begin write plays ?
 Ah, the earth's best can be but the earth's best !
 Did Shakspeare live, he could but sit at home
 And get himself in dreams the Vatican,
 Greek busts, Venetian paintings, Roman walls, 530
 And English books, none equal to his own,
 Which I read, bound in gold, (he never did).
 —Terni and Naples' bay and Gothard's top—
 Eh, friend ? I could not fancy one of these—
 But, as I pour this claret, there they are—
 I've gained them—crossed St. Gothard last July
 With ten mules to the carriage and a bed
 Slung inside ; is my hap the worse for that !

We want the same things, Shakspeare and myself,
And what I want, I have : he, gifted more, 540
Could fancy he too had it when he liked,
But not so thoroughly that if fate allowed
He would not have it also in my sense.
We play one game. I send the ball aloft
No less adroitly that of fifty strokes
Scarce five go o'er the wall so wide and high
Which sends them back to me : I wish and get.
He struck balls higher and with better skill,
But at a poor fence level with his head,
And hit—his Stratford house, a coat of arms, 550
Successful dealings in his grain and wool,—
While I receive heaven's incense in my nose
And style myself the cousin of Queen Bess.
Ask him, if this life's all, who wins the game ?

Believe—and our whole argument breaks up.
Enthusiasm's the best thing, I repeat ;
Only, we can't command it ; fire and life
Are all, dead matter's nothing, we agree :
And be it a mad dream or God's very breath,
The fact's the same,—belief's fire once in us, 560
Makes of all else mere stuff to show itself.
We penetrate our life with such a glow
As fire lends wood and iron—this turns steel,
That burns to ash—all's one, fire proves its power
For good or ill, since men call flare success.
But paint a fire, it will not therefore burn.
Light one in me, I'll find it food enough !
Why, to be Luther—that's a life to lead,
Incomparably better than my own.

He comes, reclaims God's earth for God, he says, 570
 Sets up God's rule again by simple means,
 Re-opens a shut book, and all is done.
 He flared out in the flaring of mankind ;
 Such Luther's luck was—how shall such be mine ?
 If he succeeded, nothing's left to do :
 And if he did not altogether—well,
 Strauss is the next advance. All Strauss should be
 I might be also. But to what result ?
 He looks upon no future : Luther did.
 What can I gain on the denying side ? 580
 Ice makes no conflagration. State the facts,
 Read the text right, emancipate the world—
 The emancipated world enjoys itself
 With scarce a thank-you—Blougram told it first
 It could not owe a farthing,—not to him
 More than St. Paul ! 'twould press its pay, you think ?
 Then add there's still that plaguey hundredth chance
 Strauss may be wrong. And so a risk is run—
 For what gain ? not for Luther's, who secured
 A real heaven in his heart throughout his life, 590
 Supposing death a little altered things !

“ Ay, but since really I lack faith,” you cry,
 “ I run the same risk really on all sides,
 In cool indifference as bold unbelief.
 As well be Strauss as swing 'twixt Paul and him.
 It's not worth having, such imperfect faith,
 Nor more available to do faith's work
 Than unbelief like yours. Whole faith, or none ! ”

Softly, my friend ! I must dispute that point.
 Once own the use of faith, I'll find you faith. 600

We're back on Christian ground. You call for faith :
I show you doubt, to prove that faith exists.
The more of doubt, the stronger faith, I say,
If faith o'ercomes doubt. How I know it does ?
By life and man's free will, God gave for that !
To mould life as we choose it, shows our choice :
That's our one act, the previous work's His own.
You criticise the soil ? it reared this tree—
This broad life and whatever fruit it bears !
What matter though I doubt at every pore, 610
Head-doubts, heart-doubts, doubts at my fingers' ends,
Doubts in the trivial work of every day,
Doubts at the very bases of my soul
In the grand moments when she probes herself—
If finally I have a life to show,
The thing I did, brought out in evidence
Against the thing done to me underground
By Hell and all its brood, for aught I know ?
I say, whence sprang this ? shows it faith or doubt ?
All's doubt in me ; where's break of faith in this ? 620
It is the idea, the feeling and the love
God means mankind should strive for and show forth,
Whatever be the process to that end,—
And not historic knowledge, logic sound,
And metaphysical acumen, sure !
“ What think ye of Christ,” friend ? when all's done and said,
You like this Christianity or not ?
It may be false, but will you wish it true ?
Has it your vote to be so if it can ?
Trust you an instinct silenced long ago 630
That will break silence and enjoin you love

What mortified philosophy is hoarse,
 And all in vain, with bidding you despise ?
 If you desire faith—then you've faith enough.
 What else seeks God—nay, what else seek ourselves ?
 You form a notion of me, we'll suppose,
 On hearsay ; it's a favourable one :
 " But still," (you add) " there was no such good man,

Because of contradictions in the facts.
 One proves, for instance, he was born in Rome, 640
 This Blougram—yet throughout the tales of him
 I see he figures as an Englishman."
 Well, the two things are reconcileable.
 But would I rather you discovered that,
 Subjoining—" Still, what matter though they be ?
 Blougram concerns me nought, born here or there."

Pure faith indeed—you know not what you ask !
 Naked belief in God the Omnipotent,
 Omniscient, Omnipresent, sears too much
 The sense of conscious creatures to be borne. 650
 It were the seeing him, no flesh shall dare.
 Some think, Creation's meant to show him forth :
 I say, it's meant to hide him all it can,
 And that's what all the blessed Evil's for.
 Its use in time is to environ us,
 Our breath, our drop of dew, with shield enough
 Against that sight till we can bear its stress.
 Under a vertical sun, the exposed brain
 And lidless eye and disemprisoned heart
 Less certainly would wither up at once 660
 Than mind, confronted with the truth of Him.

But time and earth case-harden us to live ;
 The feeblest sense is trusted most ; the child
 Feels God a moment, ichors o'er the place,
 Plays on and grows to be a man like us.
 With me, faith means perpetual unbelief
 Kept quiet like the snake 'neath Michael's foot
 Who stands calm just because he feels it writhe.
 Or, if that's too ambitious,—here's my box—
 I need the excitation of a pinch
 Threatening the torpor of the inside-nose
 Nigh on the imminent sneeze that never comes.
 "Leave it in peace" advise the simple folk—
 Make it aware of peace by itching-fits,
 Say I—let doubt occasion still more faith !

670

You'll say, once all believed, man, woman, child,
 In that dear middle-age these noodles praise.
 How you'd exult if I could put you back
 Six hundred years, blot out cosmogony,
 Geology, ethnology, what not,
 (Greek endings with the little passing-bell
 That signifies some faith's about to die)
 And set you square with Genesis again,—
 When such a traveller told you his last news,
 He saw the ark a-top of Ararat
 But did not climb there since 'twas getting dusk
 And robber-bands infest the mountain's foot !
 How should you feel, I ask, in such an age,
 How act ? As other people felt and did ;
 With soul more blank than this decanter's knob,
 Believe—and yet lie, kill, rob, fornicate
 Full in belief's face, like the beast you'd be !

680

690

No, when the fight begins within himself,
 A man's worth something. God stoops o'er his head,
 Satan looks up between his feet—both tug—
 He's left, himself, in the middle : the soul wakes
 And grows. Prolong that battle through his life !
 Never leave growing till the life to come !
 Here, we've got callous to the Virgin's winks
 That used to puzzle people wholesomely— 700
 Men have outgrown the shame of being fools.
 What are the laws of Nature, not to bend
 If the Church bid them, brother Newman asks.
 Up with the Immaculate Conception, then—
 On to the rack with faith—is my advice !
 Will not that hurry us upon our knees
 Knocking our breasts, " It can't be—yet it shall !
 Who am I, the worm, to argue with my Pope ?
 Low things confound the high things ! " and so forth.
 That's better than acquitting God with grace 710
 As some folks do. He's tried—no case is proved,
 Philosophy is lenient—He may go !

You'll say—the old system's not so obsolete
 But men believe still : ay, but who and where ?
 King Bomba's lazzaroni foster yet
 The sacred flame, so Antonelli writes ;
 But even of these, what ragamuffin-saint
 Believes God watches him continually,
 As he believes in fire that it will burn,
 Or rain that it will drench him ? Break fire's law, 720
 Sin against rain, although the penalty
 Be just a singe or soaking ? No, he smiles ;
 Those laws are laws that can enforce themselves.

The sum of all is—yes, my doubt is great,
My faith's the greater—then my faith's enough.
I have read much, thought much, experienced much,
Yet would die rather than avow my fear
The Naples' liquefaction may be false,
When set to happen by the palace-clock
According to the clouds or dinner-time. 730
I hear you recommend, I might at least
Eliminate, decrassify my faith
Since I adopt it ; keeping what I must
And leaving what I can—such points as this !
I won't—that is, I can't throw one away.
Supposing there's no truth in what I said
About the need of trials to man's faith,
Still, when you bid me purify the same,
To such a process I discern no end,
Clearing off one excrescence to see two ; 740
There's ever a next in size, now grown as big,
That meets the knife—I cut and cut again !
First cut the Liquefaction, what comes last
But Fichte's clever cut at God himself ?
Experimentalize on sacred things ?
I trust nor hand nor eye nor heart nor brain
To stop betimes : they all get drunk alike.
The first step, I am master not to take.

You'd find the cutting-process to your taste
As much as leaving growths of lies unpruned, 750
Nor see more danger in it, you retort.
Your taste's worth mine ; but my taste proves more wise
When we consider that the steadfast hold
On the extreme end of the chain of faith

Gives all the advantage, makes the difference,
 With the rough purblind mass we seek to rule.
 We are their lords, or they are free of us
 Just as we tighten or relax that hold.
 So, other matters equal, we'll revert
 To the first problem—which if solved my way 760
 And thrown into the balance turns the scale—
 How we may lead a comfortable life,
 How suit our luggage to the cabin's size.

Of course you are remarking all this time
 How narrowly and grossly I view life,
 Respect the creature-comforts, care to rule
 The masses, and regard complacently
 "The cabin," in our old phrase! Well, I do.
 I act for, talk for, live for this world now,
 As this world calls for action, life and talk— 770
 No prejudice to what next world may prove,
 Whose new laws and requirements my best pledge
 To observe then, is that I observe these now,
 Doing hereafter what I do meanwhile.
 Let us concede (gratuitously though)
 Next life relieves the soul of body, yields
 Pure spiritual enjoyments: well, my friend,
 Why lose this life in the meantime, since its use
 May be to make the next life more intense?

Do you know, I have often had a dream 780
 (Work it up in your next month's article)
 Of man's poor spirit in its progress still Losing true life for ever and a day
 Through ever trying to be and ever being

In the evolution of successive spheres,
 Before its actual sphere and place of life,
 Halfway into the next, which having reached,
 It shoots with corresponding foolery
 Halfway into the next still, on and off !
 As when a traveller, bound from north to south, 790
 Scouts fur in Russia—what's its use in France ?
 In France spurns flannel—where's its need in Spain ?
 In Spain drops cloth—too cumbrous for Algiers !
 Linen goes next, and last the skin itself,
 A superfluity at Timbuctoo.
 When, through his journey, was the fool at ease ?
 I'm at ease now, friend—worldly in this world
 I take and like its way of life ; I think
 My brothers who administer the means
 Live better for my comfort—that's good too ; 800
 And God, if he pronounce upon it all,
 Approves my service, which is better still.
 If He keep silence,—why for you or me
 Or that brute-beast pulled-up in to-day's " Times,"
 What odds is't, save to ourselves, what life we lead ?

You meet me at this issue—you declare,
 All special-pleading done with, truth is truth,
 And justifies itself by undreamed ways.
 You don't fear but it's better, if we doubt,
 To say so, acting up to our truth perceived 810
 However feebly. Do then,—act away !
 'Tis there I'm on the watch for you ! How one acts
 Is, both of us agree, our chief concern :
 And how you'll act is what I fain would see
 If, like the candid person you appear,

You dare to make the most of your life's scheme
As I of mine, live up to its full law
Since there's no higher law that counterchecks.
Put natural religion to the test
You've just demolished the revealed with—quick, 820
Down to the root of all that checks your will,
All prohibition to lie, kill, and thief
Or even to be an atheistic priest !
Suppose a pricking to incontinence—
Philosophers deduce you chastity
Or shame, from just the fact that at the first Whoso embraced a woman in the plain,
Threw club down, and forewent his brains beside,
So stood a ready victim in the reach
Of any brother-savage club in hand— 830
Hence saw the use of going out of sight
In wood or cave to prosecute his loves—
I read this in a French book t'other day.
Does law so analyzed coerce you much ?
Oh, men spin clouds of fuzz where matters end,
But you who reach where the first thread begins,
You'll soon cut that!—which means you can, but won't
Through certain instincts, blind, unreasoned-out,
You dare not set aside, you can't tell why,
But there they are, and so you let them rule. 840
Then, friend, you seem as much a slave as I,
A liar, conscious coward and hypocrite,
Without the good the slave expects to get,
Suppose he has a master after all !
You own your instincts—why what else do I,
Who want, am made for, and must have a God

Ere I can be aught, do aught ?—no mere name
 Want, but the true thing with what proves its truth,
 To wit, a relation from that thing to me,
 Touching from head to foot—which touch I feel, 850
 And with it take the rest, this life of ours !
 I live my life here ; yours you dare not live.

Not as I state it, who (you please subjoin)
 Disfigure such a life and call it names,
 While, in your mind, remains another way
 For simple men : knowledge and power have rights,
 But ignorance and weakness have rights too.
 There needs no crucial effort to find truth
 If here or there or anywhere about—
 We ought to turn each side, try hard and see, 860
 And if we can't, be glad we've earned at least
 The right, by one laborious proof the more,
 To graze in peace earth's pleasant pasturage.
 Men are not gods, but, properly, are brutes.
 Something we may see, all we cannot see—
 What need of lying ? I say, I see all,
 And swear to each detail the most minute
 In what I think a man's face—you, mere cloud :
 I swear I hear him speak and see him wink,
 For fear, if once I drop the emphasis, 870
 Mankind may doubt if there's a cloud at all.
 You take the simpler life—ready to see,
 Willing to see—for no cloud's worth a face—
 And leaving quiet what no strength can move,
 And which, who bids you move ? who has the right ?
 I bid you ; but you are God's sheep, not mine—
 "Pastor est tui Dominus." You find

In these the pleasant pastures of this life
 Much you may eat without the least offence,
 Much you don't eat because your maw objects, 880
 Much you would eat but that your fellow-flock
 Open great eyes at you and even butt,
 And thereupon you like your friends so much
 You cannot please yourself, offending them—
 Though when they seem exorbitantly sheep,
 You weigh your pleasure with their butts and kicks
 And strike the balance. Sometimes certain fears
 Restrain you—real checks since you find them so—
 Sometimes you please yourself and nothing checks ;
 And thus you graze through life with not one lie, 890
 And like it best.

But do you, in truth's name ?
 If so, you beat—which means—you are not I—
 Who needs must make earth mine and feed my fill
 Not simply unbuted at, unbickered with,
 But motioned to the velvet of the sword
 By those obsequious wethers' very selves.
 Look at me, sir ; my age is double yours.
 At yours, I knew beforehand, so enjoyed,
 What now I should be—as, permit the word,
 I pretty well imagine your whole range 900
 And stretch of tether twenty years to come.
 We both have minds and bodies much alike.
 In truth's name, don't you want my bishopric,
 My daily bread, my influence and my state ?
 You're young, I'm old, you must be old one day ;
 Will you find then, as I do hour by hour,
 Women their lovers kneel to, that cut curls

From your fat lap-dog's ears to grace a brooch—
Dukes, that petition just to kiss your ring—
With much beside you know or may conceive ? 910
Suppose we die to-night : well, here am I,
Such were my gains, life bore this fruit to me,
While writing all the same my articles
On music, poetry, the fictile vase
Found at Albano, or Anacreon's Greek.
But you—the highest honour in your life,
The thing you'll crown yourself with, all your days,
Is—dining here and drinking this last glass
I pour you out in sign of amity
Before we part for ever. Of your power 920
And social influence, worldly worth in short,
Judge what's my estimation by the fact—
I do not condescend to enjoin, beseech,
Hint secresy on one of all these words !
You're shrewd and know that should you publish it
The world would brand the lie—my enemies first,
“ Who'd sneer—the bishop's an arch-hypocrite,
And knave perhaps, but not so frank a fool.”
Whereas I should not dare for both my ears
Breathe one such syllable, smile one such smile, 930
Before my chaplain who reflects myself—
My shade's so much more potent than your flesh.
What's your reward, self-abnegating friend ?
Stood you confessed of those exceptional
And privileged great natures that dwarf mine—
A zealot with a mad ideal in reach,
A poet just about to print his ode,
A statesman with a scheme to stop this war,
An artist whose religion is his art,

I should have nothing to object ! such men 940
Carry the fire, all things grow warm to them,
Their drugget's worth my purple, they beat me.
But you,—you're just as little those as I—
You, Gigadibs, who, thirty years of age,
Write stately for Blackwood's Magazine,
Believe you see two points in Hamlet's soul
Unseized by the Germans yet—which view you'll print—
Meantime the best you have to show being still
That lively lightsome article we took Almost for the true Dickens,—what's the name ? 950
“ The Slum and Cellar—or Whitechapel life
Limned after dark ! ” it made me laugh, I know,
And pleased a month and brought you in ten pounds.
—Success I recognise and compliment,
And therefore give you, if you please, three words
(The card and pencil-scratch is quite enough)
Which whether here, in Dublin, or New York,
Will get you, prompt as at my eyebrow's wink,
Such terms as never you aspired to get
In all our own reviews and some not ours. 960
Go write your lively sketches—be the first “ Blougram, or The Eccentric Confidence ”—
Or better simply say, “ The Outward-bound.”
Why, men as soon would throw it in my teeth
As copy and quote the infamy chalked broad
About me on the church-door opposite.
You will not wait for that experience though,
I fancy, howsoever you decide,
To discontinue—not detesting, not
Defaming, but at least—despising me ! 970

Over his wine so smiled and talked his hour
 Sylvester Blougram, styled in partibus
Episcopus, nec non—(the deuce knows what It's changed to by our novel hierarchy)
 With Gigadibs the literary man,
 Who played with spoons, explored his plate's design
 And ranged the olive stones about its edge,
 While the great bishop rolled him out his mind.

For Blougram, he believed, say, half he spoke.
 The other portion, as he shaped it thus 980
 For argumentatory purposes,
 He felt his foe was foolish to dispute.
 Some arbitrary accidental thoughts
 That crossed his mind, amusing because new,
 He chose to represent as fixtures there,
 Invariable convictions (such they seemed
 Beside his interlocutor's loose cards
 Flung daily down, and not the same way twice)
 While certain hell-deep instincts, man's weak tongue
 Is never bold to utter in their truth 990
 Because styled hell-deep ('tis an old mistake
 To place hell at the bottom of the earth)
 He ignored these,—not having in readiness
 Their nomenclature and philosophy :
 He said true things, but called them by wrong names.
 "On the whole," he thought, "I justify myself
 On every point where cavillers like this
 Oppugn my life : he tries one kind of fence—
 I close—he's worsted, that's enough for him ;
 He's on the ground ! if the ground should break away
 I take my stand on, there's a firmer yet 1001

Beneath it, both of us may sink and reach.
His ground was over mine and broke the first.
So let him sit with me this many a year ! ”

He did not sit five minutes. Just a week
Sufficed his sudden healthy vehemence.
(Something had struck him in the “ Outward-bound ” Another way than Blougram's purpose was)
And having bought, not cabin-furniture
But settler's-implements (enough for three) 1010
And started for Australia—there, I hope,
By this time he has tested his first plough,
And studied his last chapter of St. John.

MEMORABILIA.

1.

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain,
And did he stop and speak to you ?
And did you speak to him again ?
How strange it seems, and new !

2.

But you were living before that,
And you are living after,
And the memory I started at—
My starting moves your laughter !

3.

I crossed a moor with a name of its own
And a use in the world no doubt,
Yet a hand's-breadth of it shines alone
'Mid the blank miles round about—

4.

For there I picked up on the heather
And there I put inside my breast
A moulted feather, an eagle-feather—
Well, I forget the rest.

MEN AND WOMEN.

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

LONDON:

CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193, PICCADILLY.

1855.

CONTENTS.

	Page
ANDREA DEL SARTO. (CALLED "THE FAULTLESS PAINTER")	167
BEFORE	176
AFTER	178
IN THREE DAYS	179
IN A YEAR	181
OLD PICTURES IN FLORENCE	185
ON A BALCONY.—FIRST PART	193
" SECOND PART	208
" THIRD PART	218
SAUL	231
"DE GUSTIBUS—"	252
WOMEN AND ROSES	254
PROTUS	257
HOLY-CROSS DAY. (ON WHICH THE JEWS WERE FORCED TO ATTEND AN ANNUAL CHRISTIAN SERMON IN ROME) .	260

	Page
THE GUARDIAN-ANGEL: A PICTURE AT FANO	266
CLEON	269
THE TWINS	281
POPULARITY	283
THE HERETIC'S TRAGEDY. A MIDDLE-AGE INTERLUDE	286
TWO IN THE CAMPAGNA	291
A GRAMMARIAN'S FUNERAL	294
ONE WAY OF LOVE	299
ANOTHER WAY OF LOVE	300
"TRANSCENDENTALISM:" A POEM IN TWELVE BOOKS	302
MISCONCEPTIONS	304
ONE WORD MORE. TO E. B. B	305

MEN AND WOMEN.

ANDREA DEL SARTO.

(CALLED "THE FAULTLESS PAINTER.")

BUT do not let us quarrel any more,
No, my Lucrezia ; bear with me for once :
Sit down and all shall happen as you wish.
You turn your face, but does it bring your heart ?
I'll work then for your friend's friend, never fear,
Treat his own subject after his own way,
Fix his own time, accept too his own price,
And shut the money into this small hand
When next it takes mine. Will it ? tenderly ?
Oh, I'll content him,—but to-morrow, Love ! 10
I often am much wearier than you think,
This evening more than usual, and it seems
As if—forgive now—should you let me sit
Here by the window with your hand in mine
And look a half hour forth on Fiesole,

Both of one mind, as married people use,
Quietly, quietly, the evening through,
I might get up to-morrow to my work
Cheerful and fresh as ever. Let us try.
To-morrow how you shall be glad for this ! 20
Your soft hand is a woman of itself,
And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.
Don't count the time lost, either ; you must serve
For each of the five pictures we require—
It saves a model. So ! keep looking so—
My serpentine beauty, rounds on rounds !
—How could you ever prick those perfect ears,
Even to put the pearl there ! oh, so sweet—
My face, my moon, my everybody's moon,
Which everybody looks on and calls his, 30
And, I suppose, is looked on by in turn,
While she looks—no one's : very dear, no less !
You smile ? why, there's my picture ready made.
There's what we painters call our harmony !
A common greyness silvers everything,—
All in a twilight, you and I alike
—You, at the point of your first pride in me
(That's gone you know),—but I, at every point ;
My youth, my hope, my art, being all toned down
To yonder sober pleasant Fiesole. 40
There's the bell clinking from the chapel-top ;
That length of convent-wall across the way
Holds the trees safer, huddled more inside ;
The last monk leaves the garden ; days decrease
And autumn grows, autumn in everything.
Eh ? the whole seems to fall into a shape
As if I saw alike my work and self

And all that I was born to be and do,
A twilight-piece. Love, we are in God's hand.
How strange now, looks the life he makes us lead ! 50
So free we seem, so fettered fast we are :
I feel he laid the fetter : let it lie !
This chamber for example—turn your head—
All that's behind us ! you don't understand
Nor care to understand about my art,
But you can hear at least when people speak ;
And that cartoon, the second from the door
—It is the thing, Love ! so such things should be—
Behold Madonna, I am bold to say.
I can do with my pencil what I know, 60
What I see, what at bottom of my heart
I wish for, if I ever wish so deep—
Do easily, too—when I say perfectly
I do not boast, perhaps : yourself are judge
Who listened to the Legate's talk last week,
And just as much they used to say in France.
At any rate 'tis easy, all of it,
No sketches first, no studies, that's long past—
I do what many dream of all their lives —Dream ? strive to do, and agonise to do, 70
And fail in doing. I could count twenty such
On twice your fingers, and not leave this town,
Who strive—you don't know how the others strive
To paint a little thing like that you smeared
Carelessly passing with your robes afloat,
Yet do much less, so much less, some one says,
(I know his name, no matter) so much less !
Well, less is more, Lucrezia ! I am judged.
There burns a truer light of God in them,

In their vexed, beating, stuffed and stopped-up brain, 80
Heart, or whate'er else, than goes on to prompt
This low-pulsed forthright craftsman's hand of mine.
Their works drop groundward, but themselves, I know,
Reach many a time a heaven that's shut to me,
Enter and take their place there sure enough,
Though they come back and cannot tell the world.
My works are nearer heaven, but I sit here.
The sudden blood of these men ! at a word—
Praise them, it boils, or blame them, it boils too.
I, painting from myself and to myself, 90
Know what I do, am unmoved by men's blame
Or their praise either. Somebody remarks
Morello's outline there is wrongly traced,
His hue mistaken—what of that ? or else,
Rightly traced and well ordered—what of that ?
Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's a Heaven for ? all is silver-grey
Placid and perfect with my art—the worse !
I know both what I want and what might gain—
And yet how profitless to know, to sigh 100
“ Had I been two, another and myself,
Our head would have o'erlooked the world ! ” No doubt.
Yonder's a work, now, of that famous youth
The Urbinate who died five years ago.
('Tis copied, George Vasari sent it me).
Well, I can fancy how he did it all,
Pouring his soul, with kings and popes to see,
Reaching, that Heaven might so replenish him,
Above and through his art—for it gives way ;
That arm is wrongly put—and there again— 110
A fault to pardon in the drawing's lines,

Its body, so to speak ! its soul is right,
He means right—that, a child may understand.
Still, what an arm ! and I could alter it.
But all the play, the insight and the stretch—
Out of me ! out of me ! And wherefore out ?
Had you enjoined them on me, given me soul,
We might have risen to Rafael, I and you.
Nay, Love, you did give all I asked, I think—
More than I merit, yes, by many times. 120
But had you—oh, with the same perfect brow,
And perfect eyes, and more than perfect mouth,
And the low voice my soul hears, as a bird
The fowler's pipe, and follows to the snare—
Had you, with these the same, but brought a mind !
Some women do so. Had the mouth there urged “ God and the glory ! never care for gain.
The present by the future, what is that ?
Live for fame, side by side with Angelo—
Rafael is waiting. Up to God all three ! ” 130
I might have done it for you. So it seems—
Perhaps not. All is as God over-rules.
Beside, incentives come from the soul's self :
The rest avail not. Why do I need you ?
What wife had Rafael, or has Angelo ?
In this world, who can do a thing, will not—
And who would do it, cannot, I perceive :
Yet the will's somewhat—somewhat, too, the power—
And thus we half-men struggle. At the end,
God, I conclude, compensates, punishes. 140
"Tis safer for me, if the award be strict,
That I am something underrated here,
Poor this long while, despised, to speak the truth.

I dared not, do you know, leave home all day,
For fear of chancing on the Paris lords.
The best is when they pass and look aside ;
But they speak sometimes ; I must bear it all.
Well may they speak ! That Francis, that first time,
And that long festal year at Fontainebleau !
I surely then could sometimes leave the ground, 150
Put on the glory, Rafael's daily wear,
In that humane great monarch's golden look,—
One finger in his beard or twisted curl
Over his mouth's good mark that made the smile,
One arm about my shoulder, round my neck,
The jingle of his gold chain in my ear,
You painting proudly with his breath on me,
All his court round him, seeing with his eyes,
Such frank French eyes, and such a fire of souls
Profuse, my hand kept plying by those hearts,— 160
And, best of all, this, this, this face beyond,
This in the back-ground, waiting on my work,
To crown the issue with a last reward !
A good time, was it not, my kingly days ?
And had you not grown restless—but I know—
'Tis done and past ; 'twas right, my instinct said ;
Too live the life grew, golden and not grey—
And I'm the weak-eyed bat no sun should tempt
Out of the grange whose four walls make his world.
How could it end in any other way ? 170
You called me, and I came home to your heart.
The triumph was to have ended there—then if
I reached it ere the triumph, what is lost ?
Let my hands frame your face in your hair's gold,
You beautiful Lucrezia that are mine !

“ Rafael did this, Andrea painted that—
The Roman’s is the better when you pray,
But still the other’s Virgin was his wife—”
Men will excuse me. I am glad to judge
Both pictures in your presence ; clearer grows 180
My better fortune, I resolve to think.
For, do you know, Lucrezia, as God lives,
Said one day Angelo, his very self,
To Rafael . . . I have known it all these years . . .
(When the young man was flaming out his thoughts
Upon a palace-wall for Rome to see,
Too lifted up in heart because of it)
“ Friend, there’s a certain sorry little scrub
Goes up and down our Florence, none cares how,
Who, were he set to plan and execute 190
As you are pricked on by your popes and kings,
Would bring the sweat into that brow of yours ! ”
To Rafael’s !—And indeed the arm is wrong.
I hardly dare—yet, only you to see,
Give the chalk here—quick, thus the line should go !
Ay, but the soul ! he’s Rafael ! rub it out !
Still, all I care for, if he spoke the truth,
(What he ? why, who but Michael Angelo ?
Do you forget already words like those ?)
If really there was such a chance, so lost, 200
Is, whether you’re—not grateful—but more pleased.
Well, let me think so. And you smile indeed !
This hour has been an hour ! Another smile ?
If you would sit thus by me every night
I should work better, do you comprehend ?
I mean that I should earn more, give you more.
See, it is settled dusk now ; there’s a star ;

Morello's gone, the watch-lights shew the wall,
The cue-owls speak the name we call them by.
Come from the window, Love,—come in, at last, 210
Inside the melancholy little house
We built to be so gay with. God is just.
King Francis may forgive me. Oft at nights
When I look up from painting, eyes tired out,
The walls become illumined, brick from brick
Distinct, instead of mortar fierce bright gold,
That gold of his I did cement them with !
Let us but love each other. Must you go ?
That Cousin here again ? he waits outside ?
Must see you—you, and not with me ? Those loans ! 220
More gaming debts to pay ? you smiled for that ?
Well, let smiles buy me ! have you more to spend ?
While hand and eye and something of a heart
Are left me, work's my ware, and what's it worth ?
I'll pay my fancy. Only let me sit
The grey remainder of the evening out,
Idle, you call it, and muse perfectly
How I could paint were I but back in France,
One picture, just one more—the Virgin's face,
Not your's this time ! I want you at my side 230
To hear them—that is, Michael Angelo—
Judge all I do and tell you of its worth.
Will you ? To-morrow, satisfy your friend.
I take the subjects for his corridor,
Finish the portrait out of hand—there, there,
And throw him in another thing or two
If he demurs ; the whole should prove enough
To pay for this same Cousin's freak. Beside,
What's better and what's all I care about,

Get you the thirteen scudi for the ruff. 240
Love, does that please you ? Ah, but what does he,
The Cousin ! what does he to please you more ?

I am grown peaceful as old age to-night.
I regret little, I would change still less.
Since there my past life lies, why alter it ?
The very wrong to Francis ! it is true
I took his coin, was tempted and complied,
And built this house and sinned, and all is said.
My father and my mother died of want.
Well, had I riches of my own ? you see 250
How one gets rich ! Let each one bear his lot.
They were born poor, lived poor, and poor they died :
And I have laboured somewhat in my time
And not been paid profusely. Some good son
Paint my two hundred pictures—let him try !
No doubt, there's something strikes a balance. Yes,
You loved me quite enough, it seems to-night.
This must suffice me here. What would one have ?
In heaven, perhaps, new chances, one more chance —
Four great walls in the New Jerusalem 260
Meted on each side by the angel's reed,
For Leonard, Rafael, Angelo and me
To cover—the three first without a wife,
While I have mine ! So—still they overcome
Because there's still Lucrezia,—as I choose.

Again the Cousin's whistle ! Go, my Love.

BEFORE.

1.

LET them fight it out, friend ! things have gone too far.
God must judge the couple ! leave them as they are —Whichever one's the guiltless, to his glory,
And whichever one the guilt's with, to my story.

2.

Why, you would not bid men, sunk in such a slough,
Strike no arm out further, stick and stink as now,
Leaving right and wrong to settle the embroilment,
Heaven with snaky Hell, in torture and entoilment ?

3.

Which of them's the culprit, how must he conceive
God's the queen he caps to, laughing in his sleeve !
'Tis but decent to profess oneself beneath her.
Still, one must not be too much in earnest either.

4.

Better sin the whole sin, sure that God observes,
Then go live his life out ! life will try his nerves,
When the sky which noticed all, makes no disclosure,
And the earth keeps up her terrible composure.

5.

Let him pace at pleasure, past the walls of rose,
 Pluck their fruits when grape-trees graze him as he goes.
 For he 'gins to guess the purpose of the garden,
 With the sly mute thing beside there for a warden.

6.

What's the leopard-dog-thing, constant to his side,
 A leer and lie in every eye on its obsequious hide ?
 When will come an end of all the mock obeisance,
 And the price appear that pays for the misfeasance ?

7.

So much for the culprit. Who's the martyred man ?
 Let him bear one stroke more, for be sure he can.
 He that strove thus evil's lump with good to leaven,
 Let him give his blood at last and get his heaven.

8.

All or nothing, stake it ! trusts he God or no ?
 Thus far and no farther ? farther ? be it so.
 Now, enough of your chicane of prudent pauses,
 Sage provisos, sub-intents, and saving-clauses.

9.

Ah, "forgive" you bid him ? While God's champion lives,
 Wrong shall be resisted : dead, why he forgives.
 But you must not end my friend ere you begin him ;
 Evil stands not crowned on earth, while breath is in him.

10.

Once more—Will the wronger, at this last of all,
 Dare to say "I did wrong," rising in his fall ?
 No ?—Let go, then—both the fighters to their places—
 While I count three, step you back as many paces.

AFTER.

TAKE the cloak from his face, and at first
Let the corpse do its worst.

How he lies in his rights of a man !
Death has done all death can.
And absorbed in the new life he leads,
He recks not, he heeds
Nor his wrong nor my vengeance—both strike
On his senses alike,
And are lost in the solemn and strange
Surprise of the change.
Ha, what avails death to erase
His offence, my disgrace ?
I would we were boys as of old
In the field, by the fold—
His outrage, God's patience, man's scorn
Were so easily borne.

I stand here now, he lies in his place—
Cover the face.

IN THREE DAYS.

1.

So, I shall see her in three days
And just one night, but nights are short,
Then two long hours, and that is morn.
See how I come, unchanged, unworn—
Feel, where my life broke off from thine,
How fresh the splinters keep and fine,—
Only a touch and we combine !

2.

Too long, this time of year, the days !
But nights—at least the nights are short.
As night shows where her one moon is,
A hand's-breadth of pure light and bliss,
So, life's night gives my lady birth
And my eyes hold her ! what is worth
The rest of heaven, the rest of earth ?

3.

O loaded curls, release your store
Of warmth and scent as once before

The tingling hair did, lights and darks
Out-breaking into fairy sparks
When under curl and curl I pried
After the warmth and scent inside
Thro' lights and darks how manifold—
The dark inspired, the light controlled !
As early Art embrowned the gold.

4.

What great fear—should one say, “ Three days
That change the world, might change as well
Your fortune ; and if joy delays,
Be happy that no worse befell.”
What small fear—if another says,
“ Three days and one short night beside
May throw no shadow on your ways ;
But years must teem with change untried,
With chance not easily defied,
With an end somewhere undescried.”
No fear !—or if a fear be born
This minute, it dies out in scorn.
Fear ? I shall see her in three days
And one night, now the nights are short,
Then just two hours, and that is morn.

IN A YEAR.

1.

NEVER any more
While I live,
Need I hope to see his face
As before.
Once his love grown chill,
Mine may strive—
Bitterly we re-embrace,
Single still.

2.

Was it something said,
Something done,
Vexed him ? was it touch of hand,
Turn of head ?
Strange ! that very way
Love begun.
I as little understand
Love's decay.

3.

When I sewed or drew.
I recall

How he looked as if I sang,
—Sweetly too.
If I spoke a word,
First of all
Up his cheek the color sprang,
Then he heard.

4.

Sitting by my side,
At my feet,
So he breathed the air I breathed,
Satisfied !
I, too, at love's brim
Touched the sweet :
I would die if death bequeathed
Sweet to him.

5.

" Speak, I love thee best ! "
He exclaimed.
" Let thy love my own foretell,— '
I confessed :
" Clasp my heart on thine
Now unblamed,
Since upon thy soul as well
Hangeth mine ! "

6.

Was it wrong to own,
Being truth ?
Why should all the giving prove
His alone ?

I had wealth and ease,
Beauty, youth—
Since my lover gave me love,
I gave these.

7.

That was all I meant,
—To be just,
And the passion I had raised
To content.
Since he chose to change
Gold for dust,
If I gave him what he praised
Was it strange?

8.

Would he loved me yet,
On and on,
While I found some way undreamed
—Paid my debt!
Gave more life and more,
Till, all gone,
He should smile “She never seemed Mine before.

9.

“What—she felt the while,
Must I think?
Love’s so different with us men,”
He should smile.
“Dying for my sake—
White and pink!
Can’t we touch these bubbles then
But they break?”

10.

Dear, the pang is brief.

Do thy part,

Have thy pleasure. How perplex
Grows belief !

Well, this cold clay clod

Was man's heart.

Crumble it—and what comes next ?

Is it God ?

OLD PICTURES IN FLORENCE.

1.

THE morn when first it thunders in March,
The eel in the pond gives a leap, they say.
As I leaned and looked over the aloed arch
Of the villa-gate, this warm March day,
No flash snapt, no dumb thunder rolled
In the valley beneath, where, white and wide,
Washed by the morning's water-gold,
Florence lay out on the mountain-side.

2.

River and bridge and street and square
Lay mine, as much at my beck and call,
Through the live translucent bath of air,
As the sights in a magic crystal ball.
And of all I saw and of all I praised,
The most to praise and the best to see,
Was the startling bell-tower Giotto raised :
But why did it more than startle me ?

3.

Giotto, how, with that soul of yours,
Could you play me false who loved you so ?
Some slights if a certain heart endures
It feels, I would have your fellows know !

'Faith—I perceive not why I should care
To break a silence that suits them best,
But the thing grows somewhat hard to bear
When I find a Giotto join the rest.

4.

On the arch where olives overhead
Print the blue sky with twig and leaf,
(That sharp-curved leaf they never shed)
'Twixt the aloes I used to lean in chief,
And mark through the winter afternoons,
By a gift God grants me now and then,
In the mild decline of those suns like moons,
Who walked in Florence, besides her men.

5.

They might chirp and chaffer, come and go
For pleasure or profit, her men alive—
My business was hardly with them, I trow,
But with empty cells of the human hive :
—With the chapter-room, the cloister-porch,
The church's apsis, aisle or nave,
Its crypt, one fingers along with a torch—
Its face, set full for the sun to shave.

6.

Wherever a fresco peels and drops,
Wherever an outline weakens and wanes
Till the latest life in the painting stops,
Stands One whom each fainter pulse-tick pains !
One, wishful each scrap should clutch its brick,
Each tinge not wholly escape the plaster,
—A lion who dies of an ass's kick,
The wronged great soul of an ancient Master.

7.

For oh, this world and the wrong it does !

They are safe in heaven with their backs to it,
The Michaels and Rafaels, you hum and buzz

Round the works of, you of the little wit !
Do their eyes contract to the earth's old scope,

Now that they see God face to face,
And have all attained to be poets, I hope ?

'Tis their holiday now, in any case.

8.

Much they reckon of your praise and you !

But the wronged great souls—can they be quit
Of a world where all their work is to do,

Where you style them, you of the little wit,
Old Master this and Early the other,

Not dreaming that Old and New are fellows,
That a younger succeeds to an elder brother,
Da Vincis derive in good time from Dellos.

9.

And here where your praise would yield returns

And a handsome word or two give help,
Here, after your kind, the mastiff grins
And the puppy pack of poodles yelp.

What, not a word for Stefano there

—Of brow once prominent and starry,
Called Nature's ape and the world's despair
For his peerless painting (see Vasari) ?

10.

There he stands now. Study, my friends,

What a man's work comes to ! so he plans it,
Performs it, perfects it, makes amends

For the toiling and moiling, and there's its transit !

Happier the thrifty blind-folk labour,
With upturned eye while the hand is busy,
Not sidling a glance at the coin of their neighbour !
'Tis looking downward makes one dizzy.

11.

If you knew their work you would deal your dole.
May I take upon me to instruct you ?
When Greek Art ran and reached the goal,
Thus much had the world to boast in fructu—
The truth of Man, as by God first spoken,
Which the actual generations garble,
Was re-uttered,—and Soul (which Limbs betoken)
And Limbs (Soul informs) were made new in marble.

12.

So you saw yourself as you wished you were,
As you might have been, as you cannot be ;
And bringing your own shortcomings there,
You grew content in your poor degree
With your little power, by those statues' godhead,
And your little scope, by their eyes' full sway,
And your little grace, by their grace embodied,
And your little date, by their forms that stay.

13.

You would fain be kinglier, say than I am ?
Even so, you will not sit like Theseus.
You'd fain be a model ? the Son of Priam
Has yet the advantage in arms' and knees' use.
You're wroth—can you slay your snake like Apollo ?
You're grieved—still Niobe's the grander !
You live—there's the Racers' frieze to follow—
You die—there's the dying Alexander.

14.

So, testing your weakness by their strength,
Your meagre charms by their rounded beauty,
Measured by Art in your breadth and length,
You learn—to submit is the worsted's duty.
—When I say “you” 'tis the common soul,
The collective, I mean—the race of Man
That receives life in parts to live in a whole,
And grow here according to God's own plan.

15.

Growth came when, looking your last on them all,
You turned your eyes inwardly one fine day
And cried with a start—What if we so small
Are greater, ay, greater the while than they !
Are they perfect of lineament, perfect of stature ?
In both, of such lower types are we
Precisely because of our wider nature ;
For time, theirs—ours, for eternity.

16.

To-day's brief passion limits their range,
It seethes with the morrow for us and more.
They are perfect—how else ? they shall never change :
We are faulty—why not ? we have time in store.
The Artificer's hand is not arrested
With us—we are rough-hewn, no-wise polished :
They stand for our copy, and, once invested
With all they can teach, we shall see them abolished.

17.

'Tis a life-long toil till our lump be leaven—
The better ! what's come to perfection perishes.
Things learned on earth, we shall practise in heaven.
Works done least rapidly, Art most cherishes.

Thyself shall afford the example, Giotto !

Thy one work, not to decrease or diminish,
Done at a stroke, was just (was it not ?) " O ! "

Thy great Campanile is still to finish.

18.

Is it true, we are now, and shall be hereafter,

And what—is depending on life's one minute ?

Hails heavenly cheer or infernal laughter

Our first step out of the gulf or in it ?

And Man, this step within his endeavour,

His face, have no more play and action

Than joy which is crystallized for ever,

Or grief, an eternal petrification !

19.

On which I conclude, that the early painters,

To cries of " Greek Art and what more wish you ? "—

Replied, " Become now self-acquainters,

And paint man, man,—whatever the issue !

Make the hopes shine through the flesh they fray,

New fears aggrandise the rags and tatters.

So bring the invisible full into play,

Let the visible go to the dogs—what matters ? "

20.

Give these, I say, full honour and glory

For daring so much, before they well did it.

The first of the new, in our race's story,

Beats the last of the old, 'tis no idle quiddit.

The worthies began a revolution

Which if on the earth we intend to acknowledge

Honour them now—(ends my allocution)

Nor confer our degree when the folks leave college.

21.

There's a fancy some lean to and others hate—

That, when this life is ended, begins

New work for the soul in another state,

Where it strives and gets weary, loses and wins—

Where the strong and the weak, this world's congeries,

Repeat in large what they practised in small,

Through life after life in unlimited series ;

Only the scale's to be changed, that's all.

22.

Yet I hardly know. When a soul has seen

By the means of Evil that Good is best, [serene,—

And through earth and its noise, what is heaven'.

When its faith in the same has stood the test—

Why, the child grown man, you burn the rod,

The uses of labour are surely done.

There remaineth a rest for the people of God,

And I have had troubles enough for one.

23.

But at any rate I have loved the season

Of Art's spring-birth so dim and dewy,

My sculptor is Nicolo the Pisan ;

My painter—who but Cimabue ?

Nor ever was man of them all indeed,

From these to Ghiberti and Ghirlandajo,

Could say that he missed my critic-meed.

So now to my special grievance—heigh ho !

24.

Their ghosts now stand, as I said before,

Watching each fresco flaked and rasped,

Blocked up, knocked out, or whitewashed o'er

—No getting again what the church has grasped !

The works on the wall must take their chance,
“ Works never conceded to England’s thick clime ! ”
(I hope they prefer their inheritance
Of a bucketful of Italian quick-lime.)

25.

When they go at length, with such a shaking
Of heads o’er the old delusions, sadly
Each master his way through the black streets taking,
Where many a lost work breathes though badly—
Why don’t they bethink them of who has merited ?
Why not reveal, while their pictures dree
Such doom, that a captive’s to be out-ferreted ?
Why do they never remember me ?

26.

Not that I expect the great Bigordi
Nor Sandro to hear me, chivalric, bellicose ;
Nor wronged Lippino—and not a word I
Say of a scrap of Fra Angelico’s.
But are you too fine, Taddeo Gaddi,
To grant me a taste of your intonaco—
Some Jerome that seeks the heaven with a sad eye ?
No churlish saint, Lorenzo Monaco ?

27.

Could not the ghost with the close red cap,
My Pollajolo, the twice a craftsman,
Save me a sample, give me the hap
Of a muscular Christ that shows the draughtsman ?
No Virgin by him, the somewhat petty,
Of finical touch and tempera crumbly—
Could not Alesso Baldovinetti
Contribute so much, I ask him humbly ?

28.

Margheritone of Arezzo,
 With the grave-clothes garb and swaddling barret,
 (Why purse up mouth and beak in a pet so,
 You bald, saturnine, poll-clawed parrot ?)
 No poor glimmering Crucifixion,
 Where in the foreground kneels the donor ?
 If such remain, as is my conviction,
 The hoarding does you but little honour.

29.

They pass : for them the panels may thrill,
 The tempera grow alive and tinglysh—
 Rot or are left to the mercies still
 Of dealers and stealers, Jews and the English !
 Seeing mere money's worth in their prize,
 Who sell it to some one calm as Zeno
 At naked Art, and in ecstasies
 Before some clay-cold, vile Carlino !

30.

No matter for these ! But Giotto, you,
 Have you allowed, as the town-tongues babble it,
 Never ! it shall not be counted true—
 That a certain precious little tablet
 Which Buonarroto eyed like a lover,—
 Buried so long in oblivion's womb,
 Was left for another than I to discover,— Turns up at last, and to whom ?—to whom ?

31.

I, that have haunted the dim San Spirito,
 (Or was it rather the Ognissanti ?)
 Stood on the altar-steps, patient and weary too !
 Nay, I shall have it yet, detur amanti !
 R. M. & W. O

My Koh-i-noor—or (if that's a platitude)
Jewel of Giamschid, the Persian Sofi's eye !
So, in anticipative gratitude,
What if I take up my hope and prophesy ?

32.

When the hour is ripe, and a certain dotard
Pitched, no parcel that needs invoicing,
To the worse side of the Mont St. Gothard,
Have, to begin by way of rejoicing,
None of that shooting the sky (blank cartridge),
No civic guards, all plumes and lacquer,
Hunting Radetzky's soul like a partridge
Over Morello with squib and cracker.

33.

We'll shoot this time better game and bag 'em hot—
No display at the stone of Dante,
But a kind of Witan-agemot
(" Casa Guidi," quod videas ante)
To ponder Freedom restored to Florence,
How Art may return that departed with her.
Go, hated house, go each trace of the Lorraine's !
And bring us the days of Orgagna hither.

34.

How we shall prologuise, how we shall perorate,
Say fit things upon art and history—
Set truth at blood-heat and the false at a zero-rate,
Make of the want of the age no mystery !
Contrast the fructuous and sterile eras,
Show, monarchy its uncouth cub licks
Out of the bear's shape to the chimæra's—
Pure Art's birth being still the republic's !

35.

Then one shall propose (in a speech, curt Tuscan, Sober, expurgate, spare of an "issimo,")
Ending our half-told tale of Cambuscan,
Turning the Bell-tower's altaltissimo.
And fine as the beak of a young beccaccia
The Campanile, the Duomo's fit ally,
Soars up in gold its full fifty braccia,
Completing Florence, as Florence, Italy.

36.

Shall I be alive that morning the scaffold
Is broken away, and the long-pent fire
Like the golden hope of the world unbaflled
Springs from its sleep, and up goes the spire—
As, "God and the People" plain for its motto,
Thence the new tricolor flaps at the sky?
Foreseeing the day that vindicates Giotto
And Florence together, the first am I!

IN A BALCONY.

FIRST PART

CONSTANCE and NORBERT.

NORBERT.

Now.

CONSTANCE.

Not now.

NORBERT.

Give me them again, those hands—
Put them upon my forehead, how it throbs !
Press them before my eyes, the fire comes through.
You cruellest, you dearest in the world,
Let me ! the Queen must grant whate'er I ask—
How can I gain you and not ask the Queen ?
There she stays waiting for me, here stand you.
Some time or other this was to be asked,
Now is the one time—what I ask, I gain—
Let me ask now, Love !

CONSTANCE.

Do, and ruin us.

10

NORBERT.

Let it be now, Love ! All my soul breaks forth.
How I do love you ! give my love its way !
A man can have but one life and one death.

One heaven, one hell. Let me fulfil my fate—
 Grant me my heaven now. Let me know you mine,
 Prove you mine, write my name upon your brow,
 Hold you and have you, and then die away
 If God please, with completion in my soul.

CONSTANCE.

I am not yours then ? how content this man ?
 I am not his, who change into himself, 20
 Have passed into his heart and beat its beats,
 Who give my hands to him, my eyes, my hair,
 Give all that was of me away to him
 So well, that now, my spirit turned his own,
 Takes part with him against the woman here,
 Bids him not stumble at so mere a straw
 As caring that the world be cognisant
 How he loves her and how she worships him.
 You have this woman, not as yet that world.
 Go on, I bid, nor stop to care for me 30
 By saving what I cease to care about,
 The courtly name and pride of circumstance—
 The name you'll pick up and be cumbered with Just for the poor parade's sake, nothing more ;
 Just that the world may slip from under you—
 Just that the world may cry " So much for him--
 The man predestined to the heap of crowns !
 There goes his chance of winning one, at least."

NORBERT.

The world !

CONSTANCE.

You love it. Love me quite as well,
 And see if I shall pray for this in vain ! 40
 Why must you ponder what it knows or thinks ?

NORBERT.

You pray for—what, in vain ?

CONSTANCE.

Oh my heart's heart,
How I do love you, Norbert !—that is right !
But listen, or I take my hands away.
You say, “ let it be now ”—you would go now
And tell the Queen, perhaps six steps from us,
You love me—so you do, thank God !

NORBERT.

Thank God !

CONSTANCE.

Yes, Norbert,—but you fain would tell your love,
And, what succeeds the telling, ask of her
My hand. Now take this rose and look at it, 50
Listening to me. You are the minister,
The Queen's first favourite, nor without a cause.
To-night completes your wonderful year's-work
(This palace-feast is held to celebrate)
Made memorable by her life's success,
That junction of two crowns on her sole head
Her house had only dreamed of anciently.
That this mere dream is grown a stable truth
To-night's feast makes authentic. Whose the praise ?
Whose genius, patience, energy, achieved 60
What turned the many heads and broke the hearts ?
You are the fate—your minute's in the heaven.
Next comes the Queen's turn. Name your own reward !
With leave to clench the past, chain the to-come,
Put out an arm and touch and take the sun
And fix it ever full-faced on your earth,
Possess yourself supremely of her life,

You choose the single thing she will not grant—
 The very declaration of which choice
 Will turn the scale and neutralise your work. 70
 At best she will forgive you, if she can.
 You think I'll let you choose—her cousin's hand ?

NORBERT.

Wait. First, do you retain your old belief
 The Queen is generous,—nay, is just ?

CONSTANCE.

There, there !

So men make women love them, while they know
 No more of women's hearts than . . . look you here,
 You that are just and generous beside,
 Make it your own case. For example now,
 I'll say—I let you kiss me and hold my hands—
 Why ? do you know why ? I'll instruct you, then— 80
 The kiss, because you have a name at court,
 This hand and this, that you may shut in each
 A jewel, if you please to pick up such.
 That's horrible ! Apply it to the Queen—
 Suppose, I am the Queen to whom you speak.
 " I was a nameless man : you needed me :
 Why did I proffer you my aid ? there stood
 A certain pretty Cousin at your side.
 Why did I make such common cause with you ?
 Access to her had not been easy else. 90
 You give my labours here abundant praise :
 'Faith, labour, while she overlooked, grew play.
 How shall your gratitude discharge itself ?
 Give me her hand ! "

NORBERT.

And still I urge the same.

Is the Queen just ? just—generous or no !

CONSTANCE.

Yes, just. You love a rose—no harm in that—
But was it for the rose's sake or mine
You put it in your bosom ? mine, you said—
Then mine you still must say or else be false.
You told the Queen you served her for herself : 100
If so, to serve her was to serve yourself
She thinks, for all your unbelieving face !
I know her. In the hall, six steps from us,
One sees the twenty pictures—there's a life
Better than life—and yet no life at all ;
Conceive her born in such a magic dome,
Pictures all round her ! why, she sees the world,
Can recognise its given things and facts,
The fight of giants or the feast of gods,
Sages in senate, beauties at the bath, 110
Chaces and battles, the whole earth's display,
Landscape and sea-piece, down to flowers and fruit—
And who shall question that she knows them all
In better semblance than the things outside ?
Yet bring into the silent gallery
Some live thing to contrast in breath and blood,
Some lion, with the painted lion there—
You think she'll understand composedly ?
—Say, “ that's his fellow in the hunting-piece
Yonder, I've turned to praise a hundred times ? ” 120
Not so. Her knowledge of our actual earth,
Its hopes and fears, concerns and sympathies,
Must be too far, too mediate, too unreal.
The real exists for us outside, not her—
How should it, with that life in these four walls,
That father and that mother, first to last

No father and no mother—friends, a heap,
 Lovers, no lack—a husband in due time,
 And everyone of them alike a lie !
 Things painted by a Rubens out of nought 130
 Into what kindness, friendship, love should be ;
 All better, all more grandiose than life,
 Only no life ; mere cloth and surface-paint
 You feel while you admire. How should she feel ?
 And now that she has stood thus fifty years
 The sole spectator in that gallery,
 You think to bring this warm real struggling love
 In to her of a sudden, and suppose
 She'll keep her state untroubled ? Here's the truth—
 She'll apprehend its value at a glance, 140
 Prefer it to the pictured loyalty !
 You only have to say " so men are made,
 For this they act, the thing has many names
 But this the right one—and now, Queen, be just ! "
 And life slips back—you lose her at the word—
 You do not even for amends gain me.
 He will not understand ! oh, Norbert, Norbert,
 Do you not understand ?

NORBERT.

The Queen's the Queen,
 I am myself—no picture, but alive
 In every nerve and every muscle, here 150
 At the palace-window or in the people's street,
 As she in the gallery where the pictures glow.
 The good of life is precious to us both.
 She cannot love—what do I want with rule ?
 When first I saw your face a year ago
 I knew my life's good—my soul heard one voice

“ The woman yonder, there’s no use of life
But just to obtain her ! heap earth’s woes in one
And bear them—make a pile of all earth’s joys
And spurn them, as they help or help not here ; 160
Only, obtain her ! ”—How was it to be ?
I found she was the cousin of the Queen ;
I must then serve the Queen to get to her—
No other way. Suppose there had been one,
And I by saying prayers to some white star
With promise of my body and my soul
Might gain you,—should I pray the star or no ?
Instead, there was the Queen to serve ! I served,
And did what other servants failed to do.
Neither she sought nor I declared my end. 170
Her good is hers, my recompense be mine,
And let me name you as that recompense.
She dreamed that such a thing could never be ?
Let her wake now. She thinks there was some cause—
The love of power, of fame, pure loyalty ?
—Perhaps she fancies men wear out their lives
Chasing such shades. Then I’ve a fancy too.
I worked because I want you with my soul—
I therefore ask your hand. Let it be now.

CONSTANCE.

Had I not loved you from the very first, 180
Were I not yours, could we not steal out thus
So wickedly, so wildly, and so well,
You might be thus impatient. What’s conceived
Of us without here, by the folks within ?
Where are you now ? immersed in cares of state—
Where am I now ?—intent on festal robes—
We two, embracing under death’s spread hand !

What was this thought for, what this scruple of yours
 Which broke the council up, to bring about
 One minute's meeting in the corridor ? 190
 And then the sudden sleights, long secresies,
 The plots inscrutable, deep telegraphs,
 Long-planned chance-meetings, hazards of a look,
 " Does she know ? does she not know ? saved or lost ? "
 A year of this compression's ecstasy
 All goes for nothing ? you would give this up
 For the old way, the open way, the world's,
 His way who beats, and his who sells his wife ?
 What tempts you ? their notorious happiness,
 That you're ashamed of ours ? The best you'll get 200
 Will be, the Queen grants all that you require,
 Concedes the cousin, and gets rid of you
 And her at once, and gives us ample leave
 To live as our five hundred happy friends.
 The world will show us with officious hand
 Our chamber-entry and stand sentinel,
 When we so oft have stolen across her traps !
 Get the world's warrant, ring the falcon's foot,
 And make it duty to be bold and swift,
 When long ago 'twas nature. Have it so ! 210
 He never hawked by rights till flung from fist ?
 Oh, the man's thought !—no woman's such a fool.

NORBERT.

Yes, the man's thought and my thought, which is more—
 One made to love you, let the world take note.
 Have I done worthy work ? be love's the praise,
 Though hampered by restrictions, barred against
 By set forms, blinded by forced secresies.
 Set free my love, and see what love will do

Shown in my life—what work will spring from that !
The world is used to have its business done 220
On other grounds, find great effects produced
For power's sake, fame's sake, motives you have named.
So good. But let my low ground shame their high.
Truth is the strong thing. Let man's life be true !
And love's the truth of mine. Time prove the rest !
I choose to have you stamped all over me,
Your name upon my forehead and my breast,
You, from the sword's blade to the ribbon's edge,
That men may see, all over, you in me—
That pale loves may die out of their pretence 230
In face of mine, shames thrown on love fall off—
Permit this, Constance ! Love has been so long Subdued in me, eating me through and through,
That now it's all of me and must have way.
Think of my work, that chaos of intrigues,
Those hopes and fears, surprises and delays,
That long endeavour, earnest, patient, slow
Trembling at last to its assured result—
Then think of this revulsion. I resume
Life, after death, (it is no less than life 240
After such long unlovely labouring days)
And liberate to beauty life's great need
Of the beautiful, which, while it prompted work,
Suppress itself erewhile. This eve's the time—
This eve intense with yon first trembling star
We seem to pant and reach ; scarce aught between
The earth that rises and the heaven that bends—
All nature self-abandoned—every tree
Flung as it will, pursuing its own thoughts
And fixed so, every flower and every weed, 250

No pride, no shame, no victory, no defeat :
 All under God, each measured by itself !
 These statues round us, each abrupt, distinct,
 The strong in strength, the weak in weakness fixed,
 The Muse for ever wedded to her lyre,
 The Nymph to her fawn, the Silence to her rose,
 And God's approval on his universe !
 Let us do so—aspire to live as these
 In harmony with truth, ourselves being true.
 Take the first way, and let the second come. 260
 My first is to possess myself of you ;
 The music sets the march-step—forward then !
 And there's the Queen, I go to claim you of,
 The world to witness, wonder and applaud.
 Our flower of life breaks open. No delay !

CONSTANCE.

And so shall we be ruined, both of us.
 Norbert, I know her to the skin and bone—
 You do not know her, were not born to it,
 To feel what she can see or cannot see.
 Love, she is generous,—ay, despite your smile, 270
 Generous as you are. For, in that thin frame
 Pain-twisted, punctured through and through with cares,
 There lived a lavish soul until it starved
 Debarred all healthy food. Look to the soul—
 Pity that, stoop to that, ere you begin
 (The true man's way) on justice and your rights,
 Exactions and acquittance of the past.
 Begin so—see what justice she will deal !
 We women hate a debt as men a gift.
 Suppose her some poor keeper of a school 280
 Whose business is to sit thro' summer-months

And dole out children's leave to go and play,
Herself superior to such lightness—she
In the arm-chair's state and pædagogic pomp,
To the life, the laughter, sun and youth outside—
We wonder such an one looks black on us ?
I do not bid you wake her tenderness,
—That were vain truly—none is left to wake—
But, let her think her justice is engaged
To take the shape of tenderness, and mark 290
If she'll not coldly do its warmest deed !
Does she love me, I ask you ? not a whit.
Yet, thinking that her justice was engaged
To help a kinswoman, she took me up—
Did more on that bare ground than other loves
Would do on greater argument. For me,
I have no equivalent of that cold kind
To pay her with ; my love alone to give
If I give anything. I give her love.
I feel I ought to help her, and I will. 300
So for her sake, as yours, I tell you twice
That women hate a debt as men a gift.
If I were you, I could obtain this grace—
Would lay the whole I did to love's account,
Nor yet be very false as courtiers go—
Declare that my success was recompense ;
It would be so, in fact : what were it else ?
And then, once loosed her generosity
As you will mark it—then,—were I but you
To turn it, let it seem to move itself, 310
And make it give the thing I really take,
Accepting so, in the poor cousin's hand,
All value as the next thing to the queen—

Since none loves her directly, none dares that !
 A shadow of a thing, a name's mere echo
 Suffices those who miss the name and thing ;
 You pick up just a ribbon she has worn
 To keep in proof how near her breath you came.
 Say I'm so near I seem a piece of her—
 Ask for me that way—(oh, you understand) 320
 And find the same gift yielded with a grace,
 Which if you make the least shew to extort
 —You'll see ! and when you have ruined both of us,
 Disertate on the Queen's ingratitude !

NORBERT.

Then, if I turn it that way, you consent ?
 'Tis not my way ; I have more hope in truth.
 Still if you won't have truth—why, this indeed,
 Is scarcely false, I'll so express the sense.
 Will you remain here ?

CONSTANCE.

O best heart of mine,
 How I have loved you ! then, you take my way ? 330
 Are mine as you have been her minister,
 Work out my thought, give it effect for me,
 Paint plain my poor conceit and make it serve ?
 I owe that withered woman everything—
 Life, fortune, you, remember ! Take my part—
 Help me to pay her ! Stand upon your rights ?
 You, with my rose, my hands, my heart on you ?
 Your rights are mine—you have no rights but mine.

NORBERT.

Remain here. How you know me !

CONSTANCE.

Ah, but still——

(He breaks from her : she remains Dance-must from within.)

SECOND PART.

Enter the QUEEN.

QUEEN.

Constance !—She is here as he said. Speak ! quick ! 340
Is it so ? is it true—or false ? One word !

CONSTANCE.

True.

QUEEN.

Mercifullest Mother, thanks to thee !

CONSTANCE.

Madam !

QUEEN.

I love you, Constance, from my soul.
Now say once more, with any words you will,
'Tis true—all true—as true as that I speak.

CONSTANCE.

Why should you doubt it ?

QUEEN.

Ah, why doubt ? why doubt ?

Dear, make me see it. Do you see it so ?
None see themselves—another sees them best.
You say “ why doubt it ? ”—you see him and me.
It is because the Mother has such grace 350
That if we had but faith—wherein we fail—
Whate'er we yearn for would be granted us ;
Howbeit we let our whims prescribe despair,
Our very fancies thwart and cramp our will,
And so accepting life, abjure ourselves !

Constance, I had abjured the hope of love
And of being loved, as truly as yon palm
The hope of seeing Egypt from that turf.

CONSTANCE.

Heaven !

QUEEN.

But it was so, Constance, it was so.
Men say—or do men say it ? fancies say— 360
“ Stop here, your life is set, you are grown old.
Too late—no love for you, too late for love—
Leave love to girls. Be queen—let Constance love ! ”
One takes the hint—half meets it like a child,
Ashamed at any feelings that oppose.
“ Oh, love, true, never think of love again !
I am a queen—I rule, not love, indeed.”
So it goes on ; so a face grows like this,
Hair like this hair, poor arms as lean as these,
Till,—nay, it does not end so, I thank God ! 370

CONSTANCE.

I cannot understand——

QUEEN.

The happier you !
Constance, I know not how it is with men.
For women, (I am a woman now like you)
There is no good of life but love—but love !
What else looks good, is some shade flung from love—
Love gilds it, gives it worth. Be warned by me,
Never you cheat yourself one instant. Love,
Give love, ask only love, and leave the rest !
O Constance, how I love you !

CONSTANCE.

I love you.

QUEEN.

I do believe that all is come through you. 380
I took you to my heart to keep it warm
When the last chance of love seemed dead in me ;
I thought your fresh youth warmed my withered heart.
Oh, I am very old now, am I not ?
Not so ! it is true and it shall be true !

CONSTANCE.

Tell it me ! let me judge if true or false.

QUEEN.

Ah, but I fear you—you will look at me
And say “ she’s old, she’s grown unlovely quite Who ne’er was beauteous ! men want beauty still.”
Well, so I feared—the curse ! so I felt sure. 390

CONSTANCE.

Be calm. And now you feel not sure, you say ?

QUEEN.

Constance, he came, the coming was not strange—
Do not I stand and see men come and go ?
I turned a half-look from my pedestal
Where I grow marble—“ one young man the more !
He will love some one,—that is nought to me—
What would he with my marble stateliness ? ”
Yet this seemed somewhat worse than heretofore ;
The man more gracious, youthful, like a god,
And I still older, with less flesh to change— 400
We two those dear extremes that long to touch.
It seemed still harder when he first began
Absorbed to labour at the state-affairs
The old way for the old end, interest.
Oh, to live with a thousand beating hearts
Around you, swift eyes, serviceable hands,

Professing they've no care but for your cause,
 Thought but to help you, love but for yourself,
 And you the marble statue all the time
 They praise and point at as preferred to life, 410
 Yet leave for the first breathing woman's cheek,
 First dancer's, gypsy's, or street baladine's !
 Why, how I have ground my teeth to hear men's speech
 Stuffed for fear it should alarm my ear,
 Their gait subdued lest step should startle me,
 Their eyes declined, such queendom to respect,
 Their hands alert, such treasure to preserve,
 While not a man of these broke rank and spoke,
 (Or wrote me a vulgar letter all of love,
 Or caught my hand and pressed it like a hand. 420
 There have been moments, if the sentinel
 Lowering his halbert to salute the queen,
 Had flung it brutally and clasped my knees,
 I would have stooped and kissed him with my soul.

CONSTANCE.

Who could have comprehended !

QUEEN.

Ay, who—who ?

Why, no one, Constance, but this one who did.
 Not they, not you, not I. Even now perhaps
 It comes too late—would you but tell the truth.

CONSTANCE.

I wait to tell it.

QUEEN.

Well, you see, he came,
 Outfaced the others, did a work this year 430
 Exceeds in value all was ever done
 You know—it is not I who say it—all
 Say it. And so (a second pang and worse)

I grew aware not only of what he did,
But why so wondrously. Oh, never work
Like his was done for work's ignoble sake—
It must have finer aims to spur it on !
I felt, I saw he loved—loved somebody.
And Constance, my dear Constance, do you know,
I did believe this while 'twas you he loved. 440

CONSTANCE.

Me, madam ?

QUEEN.

It did seem to me your face
Met him where'er he looked : and whom but you
Was such a man to love ? it seemed to me
You saw he loved you, and approved the love,
And that you both were in intelligence.
You could not loiter in the garden, step
Into this balcony, but I straight was stung
And forced to understand. It seemed so true,
So right, so beautiful, so like you both
That all this work should have been done by him 450
Not for the vulgar hope of recompense,
But that at last—suppose some night like this—
Borne on to claim his due reward of me
He might say, " Give her hand and pay me so."
And I (O Constance, you shall love me now)
I thought, surmounting all the bitterness,
—" And he shall have it. I will make her blest,
My flower of youth, my woman's self that was,
My happiest woman's self that might have been !
These two shall have their joy and leave me here." 460
Yes—yes—

CONSTANCE.

Thanks !

QUEEN.

And the word was on my lips
 When he burst in upon me. I looked to hear
 A mere calm statement of his just desire
 In payment of his labour. When, O Heaven,
 How can I tell you ? cloud was on my eyes
 And thunder in my ears at that first word
 Which told 'twas love of me, of me, did all—
 He loved me—from the first step to the last,
 Loved me !

CONSTANCE.

You did not hear . . . you thought he spoke
 Of love ? what if you should mistake ?

QUEEN.

No, no— 470

No mistake ! Ha, there shall be no mistake !
 He had not dared to hint the love he felt—
 You were my reflex—how I understood !
 He said you were the ribbon I had worn,
 He kissed my hand, he looked into my eyes,
 And love, love was the end of every phrase.
 Love is begun—this much is come to pass,
 The rest is easy. Constance, I am yours—
 I will learn, I will place my life on you,
 But teach me how to keep what I have won. 480
 Am I so old ? this hair was early grey ;
 But joy ere now has brought hair brown again,
 And joy will bring the cheek's red back, I feel.
 I could sing once too ; that was in my youth.
 Still, when men paint me, they declare me . . . yes,
 Beautiful—for the last French painter did !
 I know they flatter somewhat ; you are frank—

I trust you. How I loved you from the first !
Some queens would hardly seek a cousin out
And set her by their side to take the eye : 490
I must have felt that good would come from you.
I am not generous—like him—like you !
But he is not your lover after all—
It was not you he looked at. Saw you him ?
You have not been mistaking words or looks ?
He said you were the reflex of myself—
And yet he is not such a paragon
To you, to younger women who may choose
Among a thousand Norberts. Speak the truth !
You know you never named his name to me— 500
You know, I cannot give him up—ah God,
Not up now, even to you !

CONSTANCE.

Then calm yourself.

QUEEN.

See, I am old—look here, you happy girl,
I will not play the fool, deceive myself ;
'Tis all gone—put your cheek beside my cheek—
Ah, what a contrast does the moon behold !
But then I set my life upon one chance,
The last chance and the best—am I not left,
My soul, myself ? All women love great men
If young or old—it is in all the tales— 510
Young beauties love old poets who can love—
Why should not he the poems in my soul,
The love, the passionate faith, the sacrifice,
The constancy ? I throw them at his feet.
Who cares to see the fountain's very shape
And whether it be a Triton's or a Nymph's

That pours the foam, makes rainbows all around ?
 You could not praise indeed the empty conch ;
 But I'll pour floods of love and hide myself.
 How I will love him ! cannot men love love ? 520
 Who was a queen and loved a poet once
 Humpbacked, a dwarf ? ah, women can do that !
 Well, but men too ! at least, they tell you so.
 They love so many women in their youth,
 And even in age they all love whom they please ;
 And yet the best of them confide to friends
 That 'tis not beauty makes the lasting love—
 They spend a day with such and tire the next ;
 They like soul,—well then, they like phantasy,
 Novelty even. Let us confess the truth 530
 Horrible though it be—that prejudice,
 Prescription . . . Curses ! they will love a queen.
 They will—they do. And will not, does not—he?

CONSTANCE.

How can he ? You are wedded—'tis a name
 We know, but still a bond. Your rank remains,
 His rank remains. How can he, nobly souled
 As you believe and I incline to think,
 Aspire to be your favourite, shame and all ?

QUEEN.

Hear her ! there, there now—could she love like me ?
 What did I say of smooth-cheeked youth and grace ? 540
 See all it does or could do ! so, youth loves !
 Oh, tell him, Constance, you could never do
 What I will—you, it was not born in ! I
 Will drive these difficulties far and fast
 As yonder mists curdling before the moon.
 I'll use my light too, gloriously retrieve

My youth from its enforced calamity,
 Dissolve that hateful marriage, and be his,
 His own in the eyes alike of God and man.

CONSTANCE.

You will do—dare do—Pause on what you say ! 550

QUEEN.

Hear her ! I thank you, Sweet, for that surprise.
 You have the fair face : for the soul, see mine !
 I have the strong soul : let me teach you, here.
 I think I have borne enough and long enough,
 And patiently enough, the world remarks,
 To have my own way now, unblamed by all.

It does so happen, I rejoice for it,
 This most unhopèd-for issue cuts the knot.
 There's not a better way of settling claims
 Than this ; God sends the accident express ; 560
 And were it for my subjects' good, no more,
 'Twere best thus ordered. I am thankful now,
 Mute, passive, acquiescent. I receive,
 And bless God simply, or should almost fear
 To walk so smoothly to my ends at last.
 Why, how I baffle obstacles, spurn fate !
 How strong I am ! could Norbert see me now !

CONSTANCE.

Let me consider. It is all too strange.

QUEEN.

You, Constance, learn of me ; do you, like me.
 You are young, beautiful : my own, best girl, 570
 You will have many lovers, and love one—
 Light hair, not hair like Norbert's, to suit yours,
 And taller than he is, for you are tall.
 Love him like me ! give all away to him ;
 Think never of yourself ; throw by your pride,

Hope, fear,—your own good as you saw it once,
 And love him simply for his very self.
 Remember, I (and what am I to you ?)
 Would give up all for one, leave throne, lose life,
 Do all but just unlove him ! he loves me.

530

CONSTANCE.

He shall.

QUEEN.

You, step inside my inmost heart.
 Give me your own heart—let us have one heart—
 I'll come to you for counsel ; “ This he says,
 This he does, what should this amount to, pray ?
 Beseech you, change it into current coin.
 Is that worth kisses ? shall I please him there ? ”
 And then we'll speak in turn of you—what else ?
 Your love (according to your beauty's worth)
 For you shall have some noble love, all gold—
 Whom choose you ? we will get him at your choice. 590
 —Constance, I leave you. Just a minute since
 I felt as I must die or be alone
 Breathing my soul into an ear like yours.
 Now, I would face the world with my new life,
 With my new crown. I'll walk around the rooms,
 And then come back and tell you how it feels.
 How soon a smile of God can change the world !
 How we are all made for happiness—how work
 Grows play, adversity a winning fight !
 True, I have lost so many years. What then ? 600
 Many remain—God has been very good.
 You, stay here. 'Tis as different from dreams,—
 From the mind's cold calm estimate of bliss,
 As these stone statues from the flesh and blood.
 The comfort thou hast caused mankind, God's moon !

[She goes out. Dance-music from within.]

PART THIRD.

— + —

NORBERT enters.

NORBERT.

Well ! we have but one minute and one word——

CONSTANCE.

I am yours, Norbert !

NORBERT.

Yes, mine.

CONSTANCE.

Not till now !

You were mine. Now I give myself to you.

NORBERT.

Constance !

CONSTANCE.

Your own ! I know the thriftier way
 Of giving—haply, 'tis the wiser way.
 Meaning to give a treasure, I might dole
 Coin after coin out (each, as that were all,
 With a new largess still at each despair)
 And force you keep in sight the deed, reserve
 Exhaustless till the end my part and yours,
 My giving and your taking, both our joys
 Dying together. Is it the wiser way ?
 I choose the simpler ; I give all at once.
 Know what you have to trust to, trade upon.
 Use it, abuse it,—anything but say
 Hereafter, “ Had I known she loved me so,

610

620

And what my means, I might have thriven with it."
This is your means. I give you all myself.

NORBERT.

I take you and thank God.

CONSTANCE.

Look on through years !
We cannot kiss a second day like this,
Else were this earth, no earth.

NORBERT.

With this day's heat
We shall go on through years of cold.

CONSTANCE.

So best.

I try to see those years—I think I see.
You walk quick and new warmth comes ; you look back
And lay all to the first glow—not sit down 630
For ever brooding on a day like this
While seeing the embers whiten and love die.
Yes, love lives best in its effect ; and mine,
Full in its own life, yearns to live in yours.

NORBERT.

Just so. I take and know you all at once.
Your soul is disengaged so easily,
Your face is there, I know you ; give me time,
Let me be proud and think you shall know me.
My soul is slower : in a life I roll
The minute out in which you condense yours— 640
The whole slow circle round you I must move
To be just you. I look to a long life
To decompose this minute, prove its worth.
'Tis the sparks' long succession one by one
Shall show you in the end what fire was crammed

In that mere stone you struck : you could not know,
If it lay ever unproved in your sight,
As now my heart lies ? your own warmth would hide
Its coldness, were it cold.

CONSTANCE.

But how prove, how ?

NORBERT.

Prove in my life, you ask ?

CONSTANCE.

Quick, Norbert—how ? 650

NORBERT.

That's easy told. I count life just a stuff
To try the soul's strength on, educe the man.
Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve.
As with the body—he who hurls a lance
Or heaps up stone on stone, shews strength alike,
So I will seize and use all means to prove
And shew this soul of mine you crown as yours,
And justify us both.

CONSTANCE.

Could you write books,
Paint pictures ! one sits down in poverty
And writes or paints, with pity for the rich. 660

NORBERT.

And loves one's painting and one's writing too,
And not one's mistress ! All is best, believe,
And we best as no other than we are.
We live, and they experiment on life
Those poets, painters, all who stand aloof
To overlook the farther. Let us be
The thing they look at ! I might take that face
And write of it and paint it—to what end ?

For whom ? what pale dictatress in the air
 Feeds, smiling sadly, her fine ghost-like form 670
 With earth's real blood and breath, the beauteous life
 She makes despised for ever ? You are mine,
 Made for me, not for others in the world,
 Nor yet for that which I should call my art,
 That cold calm power to see how fair you look.
 I come to you—I leave you not, to write
 Or paint. You are, I am. Let Rubens there
 Paint us.

CONSTANCE.

So best !

NORBERT.

I understand your soul.

You live, and rightly sympathise with life,
 With action, power, success : this way is straight. 680
 And days were short beside, to let me change
 The craft my childhood learnt ; my craft shall serve.
 Men set me here to subjugate, enclose,
 Manure their barren lives and force the fruit
 First for themselves, and afterward for me
 In the due tithe ; the task of some one man,
 By ways of work appointed by themselves.
 I am not bid create, they see no star
 Transfiguring my brow to warrant that—
 But bind in one and carry out their wills. 690
 So I began : to-night sees how I end.
 What if it see, too, my first outbreak here
 Amid the warmth, surprise and sympathy,
 The instincts of the heart that teach the head ?
 What if the people have discerned in me
 The dawn of the next nature, the new man

Whose will they venture in the place of theirs,
 And whom they trust to find them out new ways
 To the new heights which yet he only sees ?
 I felt it when you kissed me. See this Queen, 700
 This people—in our phrase, this mass of men—
 See how the mass lies passive to my hand
 And how my hand is plastic, and you by
 To make the muscles iron ! Oh, an end
 Shall crown this issue as this crowns the first.
 My will be on this people ! then, the strain,
 The grappling of the potter with his clay,
 The long uncertain struggle,—the success
 In that uprising of the spirit-work,
 The vase shaped to the curl of the god's lip, 710
 While rounded fair for lower men to see
 The Graces in a dance they recognise
 With turbulent applause and laughs of heart !
 So triumph ever shall renew itself ;
 Ever to end in efforts higher yet,
 Ever begun——

CONSTANCE.

I ever helping ?

NORBERT.

Thus !

[As he embraces her, enter the QUEEN.]

CONSTANCE.

Hist, madam—so I have performed my part.
 You see your gratitude's true decency,
 Norbert ? a little slow in seeing it !
 Begun to end the sooner. What's a kiss ? 720

NORBERT.

Constance !

CONSTANCE

Why, must I teach it you again ?

You want a witness to your dullness, sir ?

What was I saying these ten minutes long ?

Then I repeat—when some young handsome man

Like you has acted out a part like yours,

Is pleased to fall in love with one beyond,

So very far beyond him, as he says—

So hopelessly in love, that but to speak

Would prove him mad, he thinks judiciously,

And makes some insignificant good soul 730

Like me, his friend, adviser, confidant

And very stalking-horse to cover him

In following after what he dares not face—

When his end's gained—(sir, do you understand ?)

When she, he dares not face, has loved him first,

—May I not say so, madam ?—tops his hope,

And overpasses so his wildest dream,

With glad consent of all, and most of her

The confidant who brought the same about—

Why, in the moment when such joy explodes, 740

I do say that the merest gentleman

Will not start rudely from the stalking-horse,

Dismiss it with a “ There, enough of you ! ”

Forget it, show his back unmannerly ;

But like a liberal heart will rather turn

And say, “ A tingling time of hope was ours—

Betwixt the fears and falterings—we two lived

A chanceful time in waiting for the prize.

The confidant, the Constance, served not ill ;

And though I shall forget her in due time, 750

Her use being answered now, as reason bids,

Nay as herself bids from her heart of hearts,
Still, she has rights, the first thanks go to her,
The first good praise goes to the prosperous tool,
And the first—which is the last—thankful kiss.”

NORBERT.

—Constance ? it is a dream—ah see you smile !

CONSTANCE.

So, now his part being properly performed,
Madam, I turn to you and finish mine
As duly—I do justice in my turn.
Yes, madam, he has loved you—long and well— 760
He could not hope to tell you so—’twas I
Who served to prove your soul accessible.
I led his thoughts on, drew them to their place,
When oft they had wandered out into despair,
And kept love constant toward its natural aim.
Enough—my part is played ; you stoop half-way
And meet us royally and spare our fears—
’Tis like yourself—he thanks you, so do I.
Take him—with my full heart ! my work is praised
By what comes of it. Be you happy, both ! 770
Yourself—the only one on earth who can—
Do all for him, much more than a mere heart
Which though warm is not useful in its warmth
As the silk vesture of a queen ! fold that Around him gently, tenderly. For him—
For him,—he knows his own part.

NORBERT.

Have you done ?

I take the jest at last. Should I speak now ?
Was yours the wager, Constance, foolish child,
Or did you but accept it ? Well—at least,
You lose by it.

CONSTANCE.

Now madam, 'tis your turn. 780

Restrain him still from speech a little more
 And make him happier and more confident !
 Pity him, madam, he is timid yet.
 Mark, Norbert ! do not shrink now ! Here I yield
 My whole right in you to the Queen, observe !
 With her go put in practice the great schemes
 You teem with, follow the career else closed—
 Be all you cannot be except by her !
 Behold her.—Madam, say for pity's sake
 Anything—frankly say you love him. Else 790
 He'll not believe it : there's more earnest in
 His fear than you conceive—I know the man.

NORBERT.

I know the woman somewhat, and confess
 I thought she had jested better—she begins
 To overcharge her part. I gravely wait
 Your pleasure, madam : where is my reward ?

QUEEN.

Norbert, this wild girl (whom I recognise
 Scarce more than you do, in her fancy-fit,
 Eccentric speech and variable mirth,
 Not very wise perhaps and somewhat bold 800
 Yet suitable, the whole night's work being strange)
 —May still be right : I may do well to speak
 And make authentic what appears a dream
 To even myself. For, what she says, is true—
 Yes, Norbert—what you spoke but now of love,
 Devotion, stirred no novel sense in me,
 But justified a warmth felt long before.
 Yes, from the first—I loved you, I shall say,—

Strange ! but I do grow stronger, now 'tis said,
Your courage helps mine : you did well to speak 810
To-night, the night that crowns your twelvemonths' toil—
But still I had not waited to discern
Your heart so long, believe me ! From the first
The source of so much zeal was almost plain,
In absence even of your own words just now
Which opened out the truth. 'Tis very strange,
But takes a happy ending—in your love
Which mine meets : be it so—as you choose me,
So I choose you.

NORBERT

And worthily you choose !

I will not be unworthy your esteem, 820
No, madam. I do love you ; I will meet
Your nature, now I know it ; this was well,
I see,—you dare and you are justified :
But none had ventured such experiment,
Less versed than you in nobleness of heart,
Less confident of finding it in me.
I like that thus you test me ere you grant
The dearest, richest, beauteousest and best
Of women to my arms ! 'tis like yourself !
So—back again into my part's set words— 830
Devotion to the uttermost is yours,
But no, you cannot, madam, even you,
Create in me the love our Constance does.
Or—something truer to the tragic phrase—
Not yon magnolia-bell superb with scent
Invites a certain insect—that's myself—
But the small eye-flower nearer to the ground :
I take this lady !

CONSTANCE.

Stay—not her's, the trap—
 Stay, Norbert—that mistake were worst of all.
 (He is too cunning, madam !) it was I. 840
 I, Norbert, who . . .

NORBERT.

You, was it, Constance ? Then,
 But for the grace of this divinest hour
 Which gives me you, I should not pardon here.
 I am the Queen's : she only knows my brain—
 She may experiment therefore on my heart
 And I instruct her too by the result ;
 But you, sweet, you who know me, who so long
 Have told my heart-beats over, held my life
 In those white hands of yours,—it is not well !

CONSTANCE.

Tush ! I have said it, did I not say it all ? 850
 The life, for her—the heart-beats, for her sake !

NORBERT.

Enough ! my cheek grows red, I think. Your test !
 There's not the meanest woman in the world,
 Not she I least could love in all the world,
 Whom, did she love me, did love prove itself,
 I dared insult as you insult me now.
 Constance, I could say, if it must be said,
 " Take back the soul you offer—I keep mine "
 But—" Take the soul still quivering on your hand,
 The soul so offered, which I cannot use, 860
 And, please you, give it to some friend of mine,
 For—what's the trifle he requites me with " "
 I, tempt a woman, to amuse a man,
 That two may mock her heart if it succumb ?

No ! fearing God and standing 'neath his heaven,
 I would not dare insult a woman so,
 Were she the meanest woman in the world,
 And he, I cared to please, ten emperors !

CONSTANCE.

Norbert !

NORBERT.

I love once as I live but once.
 What case is this to think or talk about ? 870
 I love you. Would it mend the case at all
 Should such a step as this kill love in me ?
 Your part were done : account to God for it.
 But mine—could murdered love get up again,
 And kneel to whom you pleased to designate
 And make you mirth ? It is too horrible.
 You did not know this, Constance ? now you know
 That body and soul have each one life, but one :
 And here's my love, here, living, at your feet.

CONSTANCE.

See the Queen Norbert—this one more last word— 880
 If thus you have taken jest for earnest—thus Loved me in earnest . . .

NORBERT.

Ah, no jest holds here !
 Where is the laughter in which jests break up ?
 And what this horror that grows palpable ?
 Madam—why grasp you thus the balcony ?
 Have I done ill ? Have I not spoken the truth ?
 How could I other ? Was it not your test,
 To try me, and what my love for Constance meant ?
 Madam, your royal soul itself approves,

The first, that I should choose thus ! so one takes 890
 A beggar—asks him what would buy his child,
 And then approves the expected laugh of scorn
 Returned as something noble from the rags.
 Speak, Constance, I'm the beggar ! Ha, what's this ?
 You two glare each at each like panthers now.
 Constance—the world fades ; only you stand there !
 You did not in to-night's wild whirl of things
 Sell me—your soul of souls, for any price ?
 No—no—'tis easy to believe in you.
 Was it your love's mad trial to o'ertop 900
 Mine by this vain self-sacrifice ? well, still—
 Though I should curse, I love you. I am love
 And cannot change ! love's self is at your feet.

[QUEEN goes out.]

CONSTANCE.

Feel my heart ; let it die against your own.

NORBERT.

Against my own ! explain not ; let this be.
 This is life's height.

CONSTANCE.

Yours ! Yours ! Yours !

NORBERT.

You and I—

Why care by what meanders we are here
 In the centre of the labyrinth ? men have died
 Trying to find this place out, which we have found.

CONSTANCE.

Found, found !

NORBERT.

Sweet, never fear what she can do— 910
 We are past harm now.

CONSTANCE.

On the breast of God.

I thought of men—as if you were a man.

Tempting him with a crown !

NORBERT.

This must end here—

It is too perfect !

CONSTANCE.

There's the music stopped.

What measured heavy tread ? it is one blaze

About me and within me.

NORBERT.

Oh, some death

Will run its sudden finger round this spark.

And sever us from the rest—

CONSTANCE.

And so do well.

Now the doors open—

NORBERT.

'Tis the guard comes.

CONSTANCE.

Kiss !

SAUL,

1.

SAID Abner, "At last thou art come! Ere I tell, ere thou speak,

Kiss my cheek, wish me well!" Then I wished it, and did kiss his cheek.

And he, "Since the King, O my friend, for thy countenance sent,

Neither drunken nor eaten have we; nor until from his tent

Thou return with the joyful assurance the King liveth yet, Shall our lip with the honey be bright, with the water be wet.

For out of the black mid-tent's silence, a space of three days,

Not a sound hath escaped to thy servants, of prayer or of praise,

To betoken that Saul and the Spirit have ended their strife,

And that, faint in his triumph, the monarch sinks back upon life.

2.

Yet now my heart leaps, O beloved ! God's child, with his dew
On thy gracious gold hair, and those lilies still living and blue
Just broken to twine round thy harp-strings, as if no wild heat
Were now raging to torture the desert ! ”

3.

Then I, as was meet,
Knelt down to the God of my fathers, and rose on my feet,
And ran o'er the sand burnt to powder. The tent was unlooped ;
I pulled up the spear that obstructed, and under I stooped ;
Hands and knees on the slippery grass-patch, all withered
and gone,
That extends to the second enclosure, I groped my way on Till I felt where the foldskirts fly open. Then once more I prayed,
And opened the foldskirts and entered, and was not afraid,
But spoke, “ Here is David, thy servant ! ” And no voice replied.
At the first I saw nought but the blackness ; but soon
I descried
A something more black than the blackness—the vast the upright
Main prop which sustains the pavilion : and slow into sight

Grew a figure against it, gigantic and blackest of all ;—
Then a sunbeam, that burst thro' the tent-roof,— showed Saul.

4.

He stood as erect as that tent-prop ; both arms stretched out wide
On the great cross-support in the centre, that goes to each side :
He relaxed not a muscle, but hung there,—as, caught in his pangs
And waiting his change the king-serpent all heavily hangs,
Far away from his kind, in the pine, till deliverance come
With the spring-time,—so agonized Saul, drear and stark, blind and dumb.

5.

Then I tuned my harp,—took off the lilies we twine round its chords
Lest they snap 'neath the stress of the noontide—those sunbeams like swords !
And I first played the tune all our sheep know, as, one after one,
So docile they come to the pen-door, till folding be done.
They are white and untorn by the bushes, for lo, they have fed
Where the long grasses stifle the water within the stream's bed ;
And now one after one seeks its lodging, as star follows star
Into eve and the blue far above us,—so blue and so far !

6.

—Then the tune, for which quails on the cornland will each leave his mate
To fly after the player ; then, what makes the crickets elate,
Till for boldness they fight one another : and then, what has weight
To set the quick jerboa a-musing outside his sand house—
There are none such as he for a wonder, half bird and half mouse !—
God made all the creatures and gave them our love and our fear,
To give sign, we and they are his children, one family here.

7.

Then I played the help-tune of our reapers, their wine-song, when hand
Grasps at hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand
And grow one in the sense of this world's life.—And then, the last song
When the dead man is praised on his journey—" Bear, bear him along
With his few faults shut up like dead flowerets ! are balm-seeds not here
To console us ? The land has none left, such as he on the bier.
Oh, would we might keep thee, my brother !"—And then, the glad chaunt
Of the marriage,—first go the young maidens, next, she whom we vaunt

As the beauty, the pride of our dwelling.—And then, the great march
Wherein man runs to man to assist him and buttress an arch
Nought can break ; who shall harm them, our friends ?
—Then, the chorus intoned
As the Levites go up to the altar in glory enthroned . . .
But I stopped here—for here in the darkness, Saul groaned.

8.

And I paused, held my breath in such silence, and listened apart ;
And the tent shook, for mighty Saul shuddered,—and sparkles 'gan dart
From the jewels that woke in his turban at once with a start—
All its lordly male-sapphires, and rubies courageous at heart.
So the head—but the body still moved not, still hung there erect.
And I bent once again to my playing, pursued it unchecked,
As I sang,—

9.

“ Oh, our manhood’s prime vigour ! no spirit feels waste,
Not a muscle is stopped in its playing, nor sinew un-braced.
Oh, the wild joys of living ! the leaping from rock up to rock—
The strong rending of boughs from the fir-tree,—the cool silver shock

Of the plunge in a pool's living water,—the hunt of the bear,
And the sultriness shewing the lion is couched in his lair.
And the meal—the rich dates—yellowed over with gold dust divine,
And the locust's-flesh steeped in the pitcher ; the full draught of wine,
And the sleep in the dried river-channel where bull-rushes tell
That the water was wont to go warbling so softly and well.
How good is man's life, the mere living ! how fit to employ
All the heart and the soul and the senses, for ever in joy !
Hast thou loved the white locks of thy father, whose sword thou didst guard
When he trusted thee forth with the armies, for glorious reward ?
Didst thou see the thin hands of thy mother, held up as men sung
The low song of the nearly-departed, and heard her faint tongue
Joining in while it could to the witness, ' Let one more attest,
I have lived, seen God's hand thro' a lifetime, and all was for best . . . '
Then they sung thro' their tears in strong triumph, not much,—but the rest.
And thy brothers, the help and the contest, the working whence grew
Such result as from seething grape-bundles, the spirit strained true !

And the friends of thy boyhood—that boyhood of wonder and hope,
Present promise, and wealth of the future beyond the eye's scope,—
Till lo, thou art grown to a monarch ; a people is thine ;
And all gifts which the world offers singly, on one head combine !
On one head, all the beauty and strength, love and rage,
like the throe
That, a-work in the rock, helps its labour, and lets the gold go :
High ambition and deeds which surpass it, fame crowning it,—all
Brought to blaze on the head of one creature—King Saul ! ”

10.

And lo, with that leap of my spirit, heart, hand, harp and voice,
Each lifting Saul's name out of sorrow, each bidding rejoice
Saul's fame in the light it was made for—as when, dare
I say,
The Lord's army in rapture of service, strains through its array,
And upsoareth the cherubim-chariot—“ Saul ! ” cried
I, and stopped,
And waited the thing that should follow. Then Saul, who hung propt
By the tent's cross-support in the centre, was struck by his name.
Have ye seen when Spring's arrowy summons goes right to the aim,

To their place what new objects should enter : 'twas
Saul as before.
I looked up and dared gaze at those eyes, nor was hurt any more
Than by slow pallid sunsets in autumn, ye watch from the shore
At their sad level gaze o'er the ocean—a sun's slow decline
Over hills which, resolved in stern silence, o'erlap and entwine
Base with base to knit strength more intense : so, arm folded in arm
O'er the chest whose slow heavings subsided.

11.

What spell or what charm,
(For, awhile there was trouble within me) what next should I urge
To sustain him where song had restored him ?—Song filled to the verge
His cup with the wine of this life, pressing all that it yields
Of mere fruitage, the strength and the beauty ! Beyond, on what fields,
Glean a vintage more potent and perfect to brighten the eye
And bring blood to the lip, and commend them the cup they put by ?
He saith, “ It is good ; ” still he drinks not—he lets me
praise life,
Gives assent, yet would die for his own part.

12.

Then fancies grew rife
Which had come long ago on the pastures, when round me the sheep
Fed in silence—above, the one eagle wheeled slow as in sleep,
And I lay in my hollow, and mused on the world that might lie
'Neath his ken, though I saw but the strip 'twixt the hill and the sky :
And I laughed—"Since my days are ordained to be passed with my flocks,
Let me people at least with my fancies, the plains and the rocks,
Dream the life I am never to mix with, and image the show
Of mankind as they live in those fashions I hardly shall know !
Schemes of life, its best rules and right uses, the courage that gains,
And the prudence that keeps what men strive for."
And now these old trains
Of vague thought came again ; I grew surer ; so once more the string
Of my harp made response to my spirit, as thus—

13.

" Yea, my king,"
I began—"thou dost well in rejecting mere comforts that spring
From the mere mortal life held in common by man and by brute :

In our flesh grows the branch of this life, in our soul it bears fruit.

Thou hast marked the slow rise of the tree,—how its stem trembled first

Till it passed the kid's lip, the stag's antler ; then safely outburst

The fan-branches all round ; and thou mindedst when these too, in turn

Broke a-bloom and the palm-tree seemed perfect ; yet more was to learn,

Ev'n the good that comes in with the palm-fruit. Our dates shall we slight,

When their juice brings a cure for all sorrow ? or care for the plight

Of the palm's self whose slow growth produced them ?
Not so ! stem and branch

Shall decay, nor be known in their place, while the palm-wine shall staunch

Every wound of man's spirit in winter. I pour thee such wine.

Leave the flesh to the fate it was fit for ! the spirit be thine !
By the spirit, when age shall o'ercome thee, thou still shalt enjoy

More indeed, than at first when unconscious, the life of a boy.
Crush that life, and behold its wine running ! each deed
thou hast done

Dies, revives, goes to work in the world ; until e'en as the sun

Looking down on the earth, though clouds spoil him,
though tempests efface,

Can find nothing his own deed produced not, must every where trace

The results of his past summer-prime,—so, each ray of thy will,
Every flash of thy passion and prowess, long over, shall thrill
Thy whole people the countless, with ardour, till they too give forth
A like cheer to their sons, who in turn, fill the south and the north
With the radiance thy deed was the germ of. Carouse in the past.
But the license of age has its limit; thou diest at last.
As the lion when age dims his eye-ball, the rose at her height,
So with man—so his power and his beauty for ever take flight.
No! again a long draught of my soul-wine! look forth o'er the years—
Thou hast done now with eyes for the actual; begin with the seer's!
Is Saul dead? in the depth of the vale make his tomb
—bid arise
A grey mountain of marble heaped four-square, till built to the skies.
Let it mark where the great First King slumbers—whose fame would ye know?
Up above see the rock's naked face, where the record shall go
In great characters cut by the scribe,—Such was Saul,
so he did;
With the sages directing the work, by the populace
chid,—

For not half, they'll affirm, is comprised there ! Which fault to amend,
 In the grove with his kind grows the cedar, whereon they shall spend (See, in tablets 'tis level before them) their praise, and record
 With the gold of the graver, Saul's story,—the statesman's great word
 Side by side with the poet's sweet comment. The river's a-wave
 With smooth paper-reeds grazing each other when prophet winds rave :
 So the pen gives unborn generations their due and their part
 In thy being ! Then, first of the mighty, thank God that thou art."

14.

And behold while I sang . . But O Thou who didst grant me that day,
 And before it not seldom hast granted, thy help to essay Carry on and complete an adventure,—my Shield and my Sword
 In that act where my soul was thy servant, thy word was my word,—
 Still be with me, who then at the summit of human endeavour
 And scaling the highest man's thought could, gazed hopeless as ever
 On the new stretch of Heaven above me—till, Mighty to save,
 Just one lift of thy hand cleared that distance—God's throne from man's grave !

Let me tell out my tale to its ending—my voice to my heart,
Which can scarce dare believe in what marvels that night I took part,
As this morning I gather the fragments, alone with my sheep,
And still fear lest the terrible glory evanish like sleep !
For I wake in the grey dewy covert, while Hebron upheaves
The dawn struggling with night on his shoulder, and Kidron retrieves
Slow the damage of yesterday's sunshine.

15.

I say then,—my song
While I sang thus, assuring the monarch, and ever more strong
Made a proffer of good to console him—he slowly resumed
His old motions and habitudes kingly. The right hand replumed
His black locks to their wonted composure, adjusted the swathes
Of his turban, and see—the huge sweat that his countenance bathes,
He wipes off with the robe ; and he girds now his loins
as of yore,
And feels slow for the armlets of price, with the clasp set before.
He is Saul, ye remember in glory,—ere error had bent
The broad brow from the daily communion ; and still, though much spent

Be the life and the bearing that front you, the same
God did choose,
To receive what a man may waste, desecrate, never quite lose.
So sank he along by the tent-prop, till, stayed by the pile
Of his armour and war-cloak and garments, he leaned
there awhile,
And so sat out my singing,—one arm round the tent-prop, to raise
His bent head, and the other hung slack—till I touched on the praise
I foresaw from all men in all times, to the man patient
there,
And thus ended, the harp falling forward. Then first
I was 'ware
That he sat, as I say, with my head just above his vast knees
Which were thrust out on each side around me, like oak-roots which please
To encircle a lamb when it slumbers. I looked up to know
If the best I could do had brought solace : he spoke not,
but slow
Lifted up the hand slack at his side, till he laid it with care
Soft and grave, but in mild settled will, on my brow :
thro' my hair
The large fingers were pushed, and he bent back my head, with kind power—
All my face back, intent to peruse it, as men do a flower.

Thus held he me there with his great eyes that scrutinised mine—

And oh, all my heart how it loved him ! but where was the sign ?

I yearned—" Could I help thee, my father, inventing
a bliss,

I would add to that life of the past, both the future and this.
I would give thee new life altogether, as good, ages hence,
As this moment,—had love but the warrant, love's heart to dispense ! "

16.

Then the truth came upon me. No harp more—no song more ! out-broke—

17.

" I have gone the whole round of Creation : I saw and I spoke !

I, a work of God's hand for that purpose, received in my brain

And pronounced on the rest of his handwork—returned him again

His creation's approval or censure : I spoke as I saw.

I report, as a man may of God's work—all's love, yet
all's law !

Now I lay down the judgeship he lent me. Each faculty tasked

To perceive him, has gained an abyss, where a dew-drop was asked.

Have I knowledge ? confounded it shrivels at wisdom laid bare.

Have I forethought ? how purblind, how blank, to the Infinite care !

Do I task any faculty highest, to image success ?

I but open my eyes,—and perfection, no more and no less,
In the kind I imagined, full-fronts me, and God is seen God
In the star, in the stone, in the flesh, in the soul and the clod.

And thus looking within and around me, I ever renew (With that stoop of the soul which in bending upraises it too)

The submission of Man's nothing-perfect to God's All-Complete,

As by each new obeisance in spirit, I climb to his feet !
Yet with all this abounding experience, this Deity known,
I shall dare to discover some province, some gift of my own.

There's one faculty pleasant to exercise, hard to hood-wink.

I am fain to keep still in abeyance, (I laugh as I think)
Lest, insisting to claim and parade in it, wot ye, I worst E'en the Giver in one gift.—Behold! I could love if I durst!

But I sink the pretension as fearing a man may o’ertake God’s own speed in the one way of love : I abstain, for love’s sake !

—What, my soul? see thus far and no farther? when doors great and small,

Nine-and-ninety flew ope at our touch, should the hundredth appal ?

In the least things, have faith, yet distrust in the greatest of all ?

Do I find love so full in my nature, God's ultimate gift,
That I doubt his own love can compete with it ? here,
the parts shift ?

Here, the creature surpass the Creator, the end, what Began ?—

Would I fain in my impotent yearning do all for this man,
And dare doubt He alone shall not help him, who yet alone can ?

Would it ever have entered my mind, the bare will,
much less power,

To bestow on this Saul what I sang of, the marvellous dower

Of the life he was gifted and filled with ? to make such a soul,

Such a body, and then such an earth for insphering the whole ?

And doth it not enter my mind (as my warm tears attest)
These good things being given, to go on, and give one more, the best ?

Ay, to save and redeem and restore him, maintain at the height

This perfection,—succeed with life's dayspring, death's minute of night ?

Interpose at the difficult minute, snatch Saul, the mistake,

Saul, the failure, the ruin he seems now,—and bid him
awake

From the dream, the probation, the prelude, to find himself set

Clear and safe in new light and new life,—a new harmony yet

To be run, and continued, and ended—who knows ?—or endure !

The man taught enough by life's dream, of the rest to make sure.

By the pain-throb, triumphantly winning intensified bliss,
And the next world's reward and repose, by the struggle in this.

18.

"I believe it! 'tis Thou, God, that givest, 'tis I who receive :

In the first is the last, in thy will is my power to believe.
All's one gift : thou canst grant it moreover, as prompt to my prayer

As I breathe out this breath, as I open these arms to the air.

From thy will, stream the worlds, life and nature, thy dread Sabaoth :

I will ?—the mere atoms despise me ! and why am I loth
To look that, even that in the face too ? why is it I dare

Think but lightly of such impuissance ? what stops my despair ?

This ;—'tis not what man Does which exalts him, but what man Would do !

See the king—I would help him but cannot, the wishes fall through.

Could I wrestle to raise him from sorrow, grow poor to enrich,

To fill up his life, starve my own out, I would—knowing which,

I know that my service is perfect.—Oh, speak through me now !

Would I suffer for him that I love ? So wilt Thou—so wilt Thou !

So shall crown thee the topmost, ineffablest, uttermost
Crown—

And thy love fill infinitude wholly, nor leave up nor down
One spot for the creature to stand in ! It is by no breath,

Turn of eye, wave of hand, that Salvation joins issue with death !

As thy Love is discovered almighty, almighty be proved
Thy power, that exists with and for it, of Being beloved !
He who did most, shall bear most ; the strongest shall stand the most weak.

'Tis the weakness in strength that I cry for ! my flesh, that I seek

In the Godhead ! I seek and I find it. O Saul, it shall be
A Face like my face that receives thee : a Man like to me, Thou shalt love and be loved by, for ever ! a Hand like this hand

Shall throw open the gates of new life to thee ! See the Christ stand ! ”

19.

I know not too well how I found my way home in the night.

There were witnesses, cohorts about me, to left and to right,

Angels, powers, the unuttered, unseen, the alive—the aware—

I repressed, I got through them as hardly, as strugglingly
there,

As a runner beset by the populace famished for news—
Life or death. The whole earth was awakened, hell loosed with her crews ;

And the stars of night beat with emotion, and tingled
and shot
Out in fire the strong pain of pent knowledge: but I fainted not.
For the Hand still impelled me at once and supported—suppressed
All the tumult, and quenched it with quiet, and holy behest,
Till the rapture was shut in itself, and the earth sank to rest.
Anon at the dawn, all that trouble had withered from earth—
Not so much, but I saw it die out in the day's tender birth;
In the gathered intensity brought to the grey of the hills;
In the shuddering forests' new awe; in the sudden wind-
thrills;
In the startled wild beasts that bore off, each with eye sidling still
Tho' averted, in wonder and dread; and the birds stiff and chill
That rose heavily, as I approached them, made stupid with awe!
E'en the serpent that slid away silent,—he felt the new Law.
The same stared in the white humid faces upturned by the flowers;
The same worked in the heart of the cedar, and moved the vine-bowers.
And the little brooks witnessing murmured, persistent and low,
With their obstinate, all but hushed voices—E'en so! it is so.

“DE GUSTIBUS—”

1.

YOUR ghost will walk, you lover of trees,
 (If loves remain)
 In an English lane,
By a cornfield-side a-flutter with poppies.
Hark, those two in the hazel coppice—
A boy and a girl, if the good fates please,
 Making love, say,—
 The happier they !
Draw yourself up from the light of the moon,
And let them pass, as they will too soon,
 With the beanflowers' boon,
 And the blackbird's tune,
 And May, and June !

2.

What I love best in all the world,
Is, a castle, precipice-encurled,
In a gash of the wind-grieved Apennine.
Or look for me, old fellow of mine,
(If I get my head from out the mouth

O' the grave, and loose my spirit's bands,
 And come again to the land of lands)—
 In a sea-side house to the farther south,
 Where the baked cicalas die of drouth,
 And one sharp tree ('tis a cypress) stands
 By the many hundred years red-rusted,
 Rough iron-spiked, ripe fruit-o'ercrusted,
 My sentinel to guard the sands
 To the water's edge. For, what expands
 Without the house, but the great opaque
 Blue breadth of sea, and not a break ?
 While, in the house, for ever crumbles
 Some fragment of the frescoed walls,
 From blisters where a scorpion sprawls.
 A girl bare-footed brings and tumbles
 Down on the pavement, green-flesh melons,
 And says there's news to-day—the king
 Was shot at, touched in the liver-wing,
 Goes with his Bourbon arm in a sling.
 —She hopes they have not caught the felons.

Italy, my Italy !

Queen Mary's saying serves for me—

(When fortune's malice

Lost her, Calais.)

Open my heart and you will see

Graved inside of it, "Italy."

Such lovers old are I and she ;

So it always was, so it still shall be !

WOMEN AND ROSES.

—•—

1.

I DREAM of a red-rose tree.
And which of its roses three
Is the dearest rose to me ?

2.

Round and round, like a dance of snow
In a dazzling drift, as its guardians, go
Floating the women faded for ages,
Sculptured in stone, on the poet's pages.
Then follow the women fresh and gay,
Living and loving and loved to-day.
Last, in the rear, flee the multitude of maidens,
Beauties unborn. And all, to one cadence,
They circle their rose on my rose tree.

3.

Dear rose, thy term is reached,
Thy leaf hangs loose and bleached :
Bees pass it unimpeached.

4.

Stay then, stoop, since I cannot climb,
You, great shapes of the antique time !
How shall I fix you, fire you, freeze you,
Break my heart at your feet to please you ?
Oh ! to possess, and be possessed !
Hearts that beat 'neath each pallid breast !
But once of love, the poesy, the passion,
Drink once and die !—In vain, the same fashion,
They circle their rose on my rose tree.

5.

Dear rose, thy joy's undimmed ;
Thy cup is ruby-rimmed,
Thy cup's heart nectar-brimmed.

6.

Deep as drops from a statue's plinth
The bee sucked in by the hyacinth,
So will I bury me while burning,
Quench like him at a plunge my yearning,
Eyes in your eyes, lips on your lips !
Fold me fast where the cincture slips,
Prison all my soul in eternities of pleasure !
Girdle me once ! But no—in their old measure
They circle their rose on my rose tree.

7.

Dear rose without a thorn,
Thy bud's the babe unborn :
First streak of a new morn.

8.

Wings, lend wings for the cold, the clear !
What's far conquers what is near.
Roses will bloom nor want beholders,
Sprung from the dust where our own flesh moulders.
What shall arrive with the cycle's change ?
A novel grace and a beauty strange.
I will make an Eve, be the artist that began her
Shaped her to his mind !—Alas ! in like manner
They circle their rose on my rose tree.

PROTUS.

AMONG these latter busts we count by scores,
Half-emperors and quarter-emperors,
Each with his bay-leaf fillet, loose-thonged vest,
Loric and low-browed Gorgon on the breast
One loves a baby face, with violets there,
Violets instead of laurel in the hair,
As those were all the little locks could bear.

Now read here. "Protus ends a period
Of empery beginning with a god :
Born in the porphyry chamber at Byzant ;
Queens by his cradle, proud and ministrant.
And if he quickened breath there, 'twould like fire
Pantingly through the dim vast realm transpire.
A fame that he was missing, spread afar—
The world, from its four corners, rose in war,
Till he was borne out on a balcony
To pacify the world when it should see.
The captains ranged before him, one, his hand
Made baby points at, gained the chief command.

10

And day by day more beautiful he grew 20
 In shape, all said, in feature and in hue,
 While young Greek sculptors gazing on the child
 Were, so, with old Greek sculpture, reconciled.
 Already sages laboured to condense
 In easy tomes a life's experience :
 And artists took grave counsel to impart
 In one breath and one hand-sweep, all their art—
 To make his graces prompt as blossoming
 Of plentifully-watered palms in spring :
 Since well beseems it, whoso mounts the throne, 30
 For beauty, knowledge, strength, should stand alone,
 And mortals love the letters of his name."

—Stop ! Have you turned two pages ? Still the same.
 New reign, same date. The scribe goes on to say
 How that same year, on such a month and day,
 " John the Pannonian, groundedly believed
 A blacksmith's bastard, whose hard hand reprieved
 The Empire from its fate the year before,—
 Came, had a mind to take the crown, and wore
 The same for six years, (during which the Huns 40 Kept off their fingers from us) till his sons
 Put something in his liquor"—and so forth.
 Then a new reign. Stay—"Take at its just worth" (Subjoins an annotator) "what I give
 As hearsay. Some think John let Protus live
 And slip away. 'Tis said, he reached man's age
 At some blind northern court ; made first a page,
 Then, tutor to the children—last, of use
 About the hunting-stables. I deduce
 He wrote the little tract ' On worming dogs,' 50

Whereof the name in sundry catalogues
Is extant yet. A Protus of the Race
Is rumoured to have died a monk in Thrace,—
And if the same, he reached senility.”

Here's John the Smith's rough-hammered head. Great eye
Gross jaw and griped lips do what granite can
To give you the crown-grasper. What a man!

HOLY-CROSS DAY.

ON WHICH THE JEWS WERE FORCED TO ATTEND AN ANNUAL CHRISTIAN SERMON IN ROME.

["Now was come about Holy-Cross Day, and now must my lord preach his first sermon to the Jews: as it was of old cared for in the merciful bowels of the Church, that, so to speak, a crumb at least from her conspicuous table here in Rome, should be, though but once yearly, cast to the famishing dogs, under-trampled and bespitten-upon beneath the feet of the guests. And a moving sight in truth, this, of so many of the besotted, blind, restive and ready-to-perish Hebrews! now paternally brought—nay, (for He saith, 'Compel them to come in') haled, as it were, by the head and hair, and against their obstinate hearts, to partake of the heavenly grace. What awakening, what striving with tears, what working of a yeasty conscience! Nor was my lord wanting to himself on so apt an occasion; witness the abundance of conversions which did incontinently reward him: though not to my lord be altogether the glory."—Diary by the Bishop's Secretary, 1600.]

Though what the Jews really said, on thus being driven to church, was rather to this effect:

1.

FEE, faw, fum! bubble and squeak!
Blessedest Thursday's the fat of the week.
Rumble and tumble, sleek and rough,
Stinking and savoury, smug and gruff,
Take the church-road, for the bell's due chime
Gives us the summons—'tis sermon-time.

2.

Boh, here's Barnabas ! Job, that's you ?
Up stumps Solomon—bustling too ?
Shame, man ! greedy beyond your years
To handsel the bishop's shaving-shears ?
Fair play's a jewel ! leave friends in the lurch ?
Stand on a line ere you start for the church.

3.

Higgledy piggledy, packed we lie,
Rats in a hamper, swine in a sty,
Wasps in a bottle, frogs in a sieve,
Worms in a carcase, fleas in a sleeve.
Hist ! square shoulders, settle your thumbs
And buzz for the bishop—here he comes.

4.

Bow, wow, wow—a bone for the dog !
I liken his Grace to an acorned hog.
What, a boy at his side, with the bloom of a lass,
To help and handle my lord's hour-glass !
Didst ever behold so lithe a chine ?
His cheek hath laps like a fresh-singed swine.

5.

Aaron's asleep—shove hip to haunch,
Or somebody deal him a dig in the paunch !
Look at the purse with the tassel and knob,
And the gown with the angel and thingumbob.
What's he at, quotha ? reading his text !
Now you've his curtesy—and what comes next ?

6.

See to our converts—you doomed black dozen—
No stealing away—nor cog nor cozen !
You five that were thieves, deserve it fairly ;
You seven that were beggars, will live less sparely
You took your turn and dipped in the hat,
Got fortune—and fortune gets you ; mind that !

7.

Give your first groan—compunction's at work ;
And soft ! from a Jew you mount to a Turk.
Lo, Micah,—the selfsame beard on chin
He was four times already converted in !
Here's a knife, clip quick—it's a sign of grace—
Or he ruins us all with his hanging-face.

8.

Whom now is the bishop a-leering at ?
I know a point where his text falls p.t.
I'll tell him to-morrow, a word just now
Went to my heart and made me vow
I meddle no more with the worst of trades—
Let somebody else pay his serenades.

9.

Groan all together now, whee—hee—hee !
It's a-work, it's a-work, ah, woe is me !
It began, when a herd of us, picked and placed,
Were spurred through the Corso, stripped to the waist ;
Jew-brutes, with sweat and blood well spent
To usher in worthily Christian Lent.

10.

It grew, when the hangman entered our bounds,
Yelled, pricked us out to this church like hounds.
It got to a pitch, when the hand indeed
Which gutted my purse, would throttle my creed.
And it overflows, when, to even the odd,
Men I helped to their sins, help me to their God.

11.

But now, while the scapegoats leave our flock,
And the rest sit silent and count the clock,
Since forced to muse the appointed time
On these precious facts and truths sublime,—
Let us fitly employ it, under our breath,
In saying Ben Ezra's Song of Death.

12.

For Rabbi Ben Ezra, the night he died,
Called sons and sons' sons to his side,
And spoke, "This world has been harsh and strange,
Something is wrong, there needeth a change.
But what, or where ? at the last, or first ?
In one point only we sinned, at worst.

13.

"The Lord will have mercy on Jacob yet,
And again in his border see Israel set.
When Judah beholds Jerusalem,
The stranger-seed shall be joined to them :
To Jacob's House shall the Gentiles cleave.
So the Prophet saith and his sons believe.

14.

" Ay, the children of the chosen race
Shall carry and bring them to their place :
In the land of the Lord shall lead the same,
Bondsmen and handmaids. Who shall blame,
When the slaves enslave, the oppressed ones o'er
The oppressor triumph for evermore ?

15.

" God spoke, and gave us the word to keep :
Bade never fold the hands nor sleep
'Mid a faithless world,—at watch and ward,
Till the Christ at the end relieve our guard.
By his servant Moses the watch was set :
Though near upon cock-crow—we keep it yet.

16.

" Thou ! if thou wast He, who at mid-watch came,
By the starlight naming a dubious Name !
And if we were too heavy with sleep—too rash
With fear—O Thou, if that martyr-gash
Fell on thee coming to take thine own,
And we gave the Cross, when we owed the Throne—

17.

" Thou art the Judge. We are bruised thus.
But, the judgment over, join sides with us !
Thine too is the cause ! and not more thine
Than ours, is the work of these dogs and swine,
Whose life laughs through and spits at their creed,
Who maintain thee in word, and defy thee in deed !

18.

" We withstood Christ then ? be mindful how
At least we withstand Barabbas now !
Was our outrage sore ? but the worst we spared,
To have called these—Christians,—had we dared !
Let defiance to them, pay mistrust of thee,
And Rome make amends for Calvary !

19.

" By the torture, prolonged from age to age,
By the infamy, Israel's heritage,
By the Ghetto's plague, by the garb's disgrace,
By the badge of shame, by the felon's place,
By the branding-tool, the bloody whip,
And the summons to Christian fellowship,

20.

" We boast our proofs, that at least the Jew
Would wrest Christ's name from the Devil's crew
Thy face took never so deep a shade
But we fought them in it, God our aid !
A trophy to bear, as we march, a band
South, east, and on to the Pleasant Land ! "

[The present Pope abolished this bad business of the sermon.—R. B.]

THE GUARDIAN-ANGEL:

A PICTURE AT FANO.

—•—

1.

DEAR and great Angel, wouldst thou only leave
That child, when thou hast done with him, for me !
Let me sit all the day here, that when eve
Shall find performed thy special ministry
And time come for departure, thou, suspending
Thy flight, mayst see another child for tending,
Another still, to quiet and retrieve.

2.

Then I shall feel thee step one step, no more,
From where thou standest now, to where I gaze,
And suddenly my head be covered o'er
With those wings, white above the child who prays
Now on that tomb—and I shall feel thee guarding
Me, out of all the world ; for me, discarding
Yon heaven thy home, that waits and opes its door :

3.

I would not look up thither past thy head
Because the door opes, like that child, I know,
For I should have thy gracious face instead,
Thou bird of God ! And wilt thou bend me low
Like him, and lay, like his, my hands together,
And lift them up to pray, and gently tether
Me, as thy lamb there, with thy garment's spread ?

4.

If this was ever granted, I would rest
My head beneath thine, while thy healing hands
Close-covered both my eyes beside thy breast,
Pressing the brain, which too much thought expands,
Back to its proper size again, and smoothing
Distortion down till every nerve had soothing,
And all lay quiet, happy and supprest.

5.

How soon all worldly wrong would be repaired !
I think how I should view the earth and skies
And sea, when once again my brow was bared
After thy healing, with such different eyes.
O, world, as God has made it ! all is beauty :
And knowing this, is love, and love is duty.
What further may be sought for or declared ?

6.

Guercino drew this angel I saw teach
(Alfred, dear friend)—that little child to pray,
Holding the little hands up, each to each
Pressed gently,—with his own head turned away

Over the earth where so much lay before him
Of work to do, though heaven was opening o'er him,
And he was left at Fano by the beach.

7.

We were at Fano, and three times we went
To sit and see him in his chapel there,
And drink his beauty to our soul's content
—My angel with me too : and since I care
For dear Guercino's fame, (to which in power
And glory comes this picture for a dower, Fraught with a pathos so magnificent)

8.

And since he did not work so earnestly
At all times, and has else endured some wrong,—
I took one thought his picture struck from me,
And spread it out, translating it to song.
My Love is here. Where are you, dear old friend ?
How rolls the Wairoa at your world's far end ?
This is Ancona, yonder is the sea.

Commends to me the strainer and the cup
Thy lip hath bettered ere it blesses mine.

Well-counselled, king, in thy munificence !
For so shall men remark, in such an act 20
Of love for him whose song gives life its joy,
Thy recognition of the use of life :
Nor call thy spirit barely adequate
To help on life in straight ways, broad enough
For vulgar souls, by ruling and the rest.
Thou, in the daily building of thy tower,
Whether in fierce and sudden spasms of toil,
Or through dim lulls of unapparent growth,
Or when the general work 'mid good acclaim
Climbed with the eye to cheer the architect, 30
Didst ne'er engage in work for mere work's sake—
Hadst ever in thy heart the luring hope
Of some eventual rest a-top of it,
Whence, all the tumult of the building hushed,
Thou first of men mightst look out to the east.
The vulgar saw thy tower ; thou sawest the sun.
For this, I promise on thy festival
To pour libation, looking o'er the sea,
Making this slave narrate thy fortunes, speak
Thy great words, and describe thy royal face— 40
Wishing thee wholly where Zeus lives the most
Within the eventual element of calm.

Thy letter's first requirement meets me here.
It is as thou hast heard : in one short life
I, Cleon, have effected all those things
Thou wonderingly dost enumerate.

That epos on thy hundred plates of gold
 Is mine,—and also mine the little chaunt,
 So sure to rise from every fishing-bark
 When, lights at prow, the seamen haul their nets. 50
 The image of the sun-god on the phare
 Men turn from the sun's self to see, is mine ;
 The Pœcile, o'er-storied its whole length,
 As thou didst hear, with painting, is mine too.
 I know the true proportions of a man
 And woman also, not observed before ;
 And I have written three books on the soul,
 Proving absurd all written hitherto,
 And putting us to ignorance again.
 For music,—why, I have combined the moods, 60
 Inventing one. In brief, all arts are mine ;
 Thus much the people know and recognise,
 Throughout our seventeen islands. Marvel not.
 We of these latter days, with greater mind
 Than our forerunners, since more composite,
 Look not so great (beside their simple way)
 To a judge who only sees one way at once,
 One mind-point, and no other at a time,—
 Compares the small part of a man of us
 With some whole man of the heroic age, 70
 Great in his way,—not ours, nor meant for ours,
 And ours is greater, had we skill to know.
 Yet, what we call this life of men on earth,
 This sequence of the soul's achievements here,
 Being, as I find much reason to conceive,
 Intended to be viewed eventually
 As a great whole, not analysed to parts,
 But each part having reference to all,—

How shall a certain part, pronounced complete,
Endure effacement by another part ? 80
Was the thing done ?—Then what's to do again ?
See, in the chequered pavement opposite,
Suppose the artist made a perfect rhomb,
And next a lozenge, then a trapezoid—
He did not overlay them, superimpose
The new upon the old and blot it out,
But laid them on a level in his work,
Making at last a picture ; there it lies.
So, first the perfect separate forms were made,
The portions of mankind—and after, so, 90
Occurred the combination of the same.
Or where had been a progress, otherwise ?
Mankind, made up of all the single men,—
In such a synthesis the labour ends.
Now, mark me—those divine men of old time
Have reached, thou sayest well, each at one point
The outside verge that rounds our faculty ;
And where they reached, who can do more than reach ?
It takes but little water just to touch
At some one point the inside of a sphere, 100
And, as we turn the sphere, touch all the rest
In due succession : but the finer air
Which not so palpably nor obviously,
Though no less universally, can touch
The whole circumference of that emptied sphere,
Fills it more fully than the water did ;
Holds thrice the weight of water in itself
Resolved into a subtler element.
And yet the vulgar call the sphere first full
Up to the visible height—and after, void ; 110

Not knowing air's more hidden properties.
 And thus our soul, misknown, cries out to Zeus
 To vindicate his purpose in its life—
 Why stay we on the earth unless to grow ?
 Long since, I imaged, wrote the fiction out,
 That he or other God, descended here
 And, once for all, showed simultaneously
 What, in its nature, never can be shown
 Piecemeal or in succession ;—showed, I say,
 The worth both absolute and relative 120
 Of all His children from the birth of time,
 His instruments for all appointed work.
 I now go on to image,—might we hear
 The judgment which should give the due to each,
 Shew where the labour lay and where the ease,
 And prove Zeus' self, the latent, everywhere !
 This is a dream. But no dream, let us hope,
 That years and days, the summers and the springs
 Follow each other with unwaning powers—
 The grapes which dye thy wine, are richer far 130
 Through culture, than the wild wealth of the rock ;
 The suave plum than the savage-tasted drupe ;
 The pastured honey-bee drops choicer sweet ;
 The flowers turn double, and the leaves turn flowers ;
 That young and tender crescent-moon, thy slave,
 Sleeping upon her robe as if on clouds,
 Refines upon the women of my youth.
 What, and the soul alone deteriorates ?
 I have not chanted verse like Homer's, no—
 Nor swept string like Terpander, no—nor carved 140
 And painted men like Phidias and his friend
 I am not great as they are, point by point :

But I have entered into sympathy
 With these four, running these into one soul,
 Who, separate, ignored each others' arts.
 Say, is it nothing that I know them all ?
 The wild flower was the larger—I have dashed
 Rose-blood upon its petals, pricked its cup's
 Honey with wine, and driven its seed to fruit,
 And show a better flower if not so large. 150
 I stand, myself. Refer this to the gods
 Whose gift alone it is ! which, shall I dare
 (All pride apart) upon the absurd pretext
 That such a gift by chance lay in my hand,
 Discourse of lightly or depreciate ?
 It might have fallen to another's hand—what then ?
 I pass too surely—let at least truth stay !

And next, of what thou followest on to ask.
 This being with me as I declare, O king,
 My works, in all these varicoloured kinds, 160
 So done by me, accepted so by men—
 Thou askest if (my soul thus in men's hearts)
 I must not be accounted to attain
 The very crown and proper end of life.
 Inquiring thence how, now life closeth up,
 I face death with success in my right hand :
 Whether I fear death less than dost thyself
 The fortunate of men. " For " (writest thou)
 " Thou leavest much behind, while I leave nought :
 Thy life stays in the poems men shall sing, 170
 The pictures men shall study ; while my life,
 Complete and whole now in its power and joy,
 Dies altogether with my brain and arm.

Is lost indeed ; since,—what survives myself ?
 The brazen statue that o'erlooks my grave,
 Set on the promontory which I named.
 And that—some supple courtier of my heir
 Shall use its robed and sceptred arm, perhaps,
 To fix the rope to, which best drags it down.
 I go, then : triumph thou, who dost not go ! ” 180

Nay, thou art worthy of hearing my whole mind.
 Is this apparent, when thou turn'st to muse
 Upon the scheme of earth and man in chief,
 That admiration grows as knowledge grows ?
 That imperfection means perfection hid,
 Reserved in part, to grace the after-time ?
 If, in the morning of philosophy,
 Ere aught had been recorded, aught perceived,
 Thou, with the light now in thee, couldst have looked
 On all earth's tenantry, from worm to bird, 190
 Ere man had yet appeared upon the stage—
 Thou wouldst have seen them perfect, and deduced
 The perfectness of others yet unseen.
 Conceding which,—had Zeus then questioned thee
 “ Wilt thou go on a step, improve on this,
 Do more for visible creatures than is done ? ”
 Thou wouldst have answered, “ Ay, by making each
 Grow conscious in himself—by that alone.
 All's perfect else : the shell sucks fast the rock,
 The fish strikes through the sea, the snake both swims 200
 And slides ; the birds take flight, forth range the beasts,
 Till life's mechanics can no further go—
 And all this joy in natural life, is put,
 Like fire from off Thy finger into each,

So exquisitely perfect is the same.
But 'tis pure fire—and they mere matter are ;
It has them, not they it : and so I choose,
For man, Thy last premeditated work
(If I might add a glory to this scheme)
That a third thing should stand apart from both, 210
A quality arise within the soul,
Which, intro-active, made to supervise
And feel the force it has, may view itself,
And so be happy." Man might live at first
The animal life : but is there nothing more ?
In due time, let him critically learn
How he lives ; and, the more he gets to know
Of his own life's adaptabilities,
The more joy-giving will his life become.
The man who hath this quality, is best. 220

But thou, king, hadst more reasonably said :
" Let progress end at once,—man make no step
Beyond the natural man, the better beast,
Using his senses, not the sense of sense."
In man there's failure, only since he left
The lower and unconscious forms of life.
We called it an advance, the rendering plain
A spirit might grow conscious of that life,
And, by new lore so added to the old,
Take each step higher over the brute's head. 230
This grew the only life, the pleasure-house,
Watch-tower and treasure-fortress of the soul,
Which whole surrounding flats of natural life
Seemed only fit to yield subsistence to ;
A tower that crowns a country. But alas !

The soul now climbs it just to perish there,
 For thence we have discovered ('tis no dream—
 We know this, which we had not else perceived)
 That there's a world of capability
 For joy, spread round about us, meant for us, 240
 Inviting us ; and still the soul craves all,
 And still the flesh replies, " Take no jot more
 Than ere you climbed the tower to look abroad !
 Nay, so much less, as that fatigue has brought Deduction to it." We struggle—fain to enlarge
 Our bounded physical recipiency,
 Increase our power, supply fresh oil to life,
 Repair the waste of age and sickness. No,
 It skills not : life's inadequate to joy,
 As the soul sees joy, tempting life to take. 250
 They praise a fountain in my garden here
 Wherein a Naiad sends the water-spurt
 Thin from her tube ; she smiles to see it rise.
 What if I told her, it is just a thread
 From that great river which the hills shut up,
 And mock her with my leave to take the same ?
 The artificer has given her one small tube
 Past power to widen or exchange—what boots
 To know she might spout oceans if she could ?
 She cannot lift beyond her first straight thread. 260
 And so a man can use but a man's joy
 While he sees God's. Is it, for Zeus to boast
 " See, man, how happy I live, and despair—
 That I may be still happier—for thy use ! "
 If this were so, we could not thank our Lord,
 As hearts beat on to doing : 'tis not so—
 Malice it is not. Is it carelessness ?

Still, no. If care—where is the sign, I ask—
 And get no answer : and agree in sum,
 O king, with thy profound discouragement, 276
 Who seest the wider but to sigh the more.
 Most progress is most failure ! thou sayest well.

The last point now :—thou dost except a case—
 Holding joy not impossible to one
 With artist-gifts—to such a man as I—
 Who leave behind me living works indeed ;
 For, such a poem, such a painting lives.
 What ? dost thou verily trip upon a word,
 Confound the accurate view of what joy is (Caught somewhat clearer by my eyes than thine) 280
 With feeling joy ? confound the knowing how
 And showing how to live (my faculty)
 With actually living ?—Otherwise
 Where is the artist's vantage o'er the king ?
 Because in my great epos I display
 How divers men young, strong, fair, wise, can act—
 Is this as though I acted ? if I paint,
 Carve the young Phœbus, am I therefore young ?
 Methinks I'm older that I bowed myself
 The many years of pain that taught me art ! 290
 Indeed, to know is something, and to prove
 How all this beauty might be enjoyed, is more :
 But, knowing nought, to enjoy is something too.
 Yon rower with the moulded muscles there
 Lowering the sail, is nearer it than I.
 I can write love-odes—thy fair slave's an ode.
 I get to sing of love, when grown too grey
 For being beloved : she turns to that young man

The muscles all a-ripple on his back.

I know the joy of kingship : well—thou art king ! 300

“ But,” sayest thou—(and I marvel, I repeat,
To find thee tripping on a mere word) “ what
Thou writest, paintest, stays : that does not die :
Sappho survives, because we sing her songs,
And Æschylus, because we read his plays ! ”

Why, if they live still, let them come and take Thy slave in my despite—drink from thy cup—
Speak in my place. Thou diest while I survive ?
Say rather that my fate is deadlier still,—

In this, that every day my sense of joy 310

Grows more acute, my soul (intensified
In power and insight) more enlarged, more keen ;
While every day my hairs fall more and more,
My hand shakes, and the heavy years increase—
The horror quickening still from year to year,
The consummation coming past escape

When I shall know most, and yet least enjoy—
When all my works wherein I prove my worth,
Being present still to mock me in men’s mouths,
Alive still, in the phrase of such as thou, 320

I, I, the feeling, thinking, acting man,
The man who loved his life so over much,
Shall sleep in my urn. It is so horrible,
I dare at times imagine to my need
Some future state revealed to us by Zeus,
Unlimited in capability

For joy, as this is in desire for joy,
To seek which, the joy-hunger forces us.
That, stung by straitness of our life, made strait

On purpose to make sweet the life at large— 330
Freed by the throbbing impulse we call death
We burst there as the worm into the fly,
Who, while a worm still, wants his wings. But, no !
Zeus has not yet revealed it ; and, alas !
He must have done so—were it possible !

Live long and happy, and in that thought die,
Glad for what was. Farewell. And for the rest,
I cannot tell thy messenger aright
Where to deliver what he bears of thine
To one called Paulus—we have heard his fame 340
Indeed, if Christus be not one with him—
I know not, nor am troubled much to know.
Thou canst not think a mere barbarian Jew,
As Paulus proves to be, one circumcised,
Hath access to a secret shut from us ?
Thou wrongest our philosophy, O king,
In stooping to inquire of such an one,
As if his answer could impose at all.
He writeth, doth he ? well, and he may write.
Oh, the Jew findeth scholars ! certain slaves 350
Who touched on this same isle, preached him and Christ ;
And (as I gathered from a bystander)
Their doctrines could be held by no sane man.

THE TWINS.

"Give" and "It-shall-be-given-unto-you."

1.

GRAND rough old Martin Luther
 Bloomed fables—flowers on furze,
The better the uncouth :
 Do roses stick like burrs ?

2.

A beggar asked an alms
 One day at an abbey-door,
Said Luther ; but, seized with qualms,
 The Abbot replied, " We're poor ! "

3.

" Poor, who had plenty once,
 " When gifts fell thick as rain :
" But they give us nought, for the nonce,
 " And how should we give again ? "

4.

Then the beggar, "See your sins !
"Of old, unless I err,
"Ye had brothers for inmates, twins,
"Date and Dabitur."

5.

"While Date was in good case
"Dabitur flourished too :
"For Dabitur's lenten face,
"No wonder if Date rue,"

6.

"Would ye retrieve the one ?
"Try and make plump the other !
"When Date's penance is done,
"Dabitur helps his brother."

7.

"Only, beware relapse !"
The Abbot hung his head.
This beggar might be, perhaps,
An angel, Luther said.

POPULARITY.

1.

STAND still, true poet that you are,
I know you ; let me try and draw you.
Some night you'll fail us. When afar
You rise, remember one man saw you,
Knew you, and named a star.

2.

My star, God's glow-worm ! Why extend
That loving hand of His which leads you,
Yet locks you safe from end to end
Of this dark world, unless He needs you—
Just saves your light to spend ?

3.

His clenched Hand shall uncloset at last
I know, and let out all the beauty.
My poet holds the future fast,
Accepts the coming ages' duty,
Their present for this past.

4.

That day, the earth's feast-master's brow
Shall clear, to God the chalice raising ;
" Others give best at first, but Thou
For ever set'st our table praising,— Keep'st the good wine till now."

5.

Meantime, I'll draw you as you stand,
With few or none to watch and wonder.
I'll say—a fisher (on the sand
By Tyre the Old) his ocean-plunder,
A netful, brought to land.

6.

Who has not heard how Tyrian shells
Enclosed the blue, that dye of dyes
Whereof one drop worked miracles,
And coloured like Astarte's eyes
Raw silk the merchant sells ?

7.

And each bystander of them all
Could criticise, and quote tradition
How depths of blue sublimed some pall,
To get which, pricked a king's ambition ;
Worth sceptre, crown and ball.

8.

Yet there's the dye,—in that rough mesh,
The sea has only just o'er-whispered !
Live whelks, the lip's-beard dripping fresh,
As if they still the water's lisp heard
Through foam the rock-weeds thresh.

9.

Enough to furnish Solomon
Such hangings for his cedar-house,
That when gold-robed he took the throne
In that abyss of blue, the Spouse
Might swear his presence shone

10.

Most like the centre-spike of gold
Which burns deep in the blue-bell's womb,
What time, with ardours manifold,
The bee goes singing to her groom,
Drunken and overbold.

11.

Mere conchs ! not fit for warp or woof !
Till art comes,—comes to pound and squeeze
And clarify,—refines to proof
The liquor filtered by degrees,
While the world stands aloof.

12

And there's the extract, flasked and fine,
And priced, and saleable at last !
And Hobbs, Nobbs, Stokes and Nokes combine
To paint the future from the past,
Put blue into their line.

13.

Hobbs hints blue,—straight he turtle eats.
Nobbs prints blue,—claret crowns his cup.
Nokes outdares Stokes in azure feats,—
Both gorge. Who fished the murex up ?
What porridge had John Keats ?

THE HERETIC'S TRAGEDY.

A MIDDLE-AGE INTERLUDE.

(In the original) ROSA MUNDI; SEU, FULCITE ME FLORIBUS. A CONCEIT OF MASTER GYSBRECHT, CANON-REGULAR OF SAINT JODOCUS-BY-THE-BAR, YPRES CITY. CANTUQUE, Virgilius. AND HATH OFTEN BEEN SUNG AT HOCK-TIDE AND FESTIVALS. GAVISUS ERAM, Jessides.

(It would seem to be a glimpse from the burning of Jacques du Bourg-Molay, at Paris, A.D. 1314; as distorted by the refraction from Flemish brain to brain, during the course of a couple of centuries.—R.B.)

1.

PREADMONISHETH THE ABBOT DEODAET.

THE Lord, we look to once for all,
Is the Lord we should look at, all at once :
He knows not to vary, saith St. Paul,
Nor the shadow of turning, for the nonce.
See Him no other than as he is ;
Give both the Infinites their due—
Infinite mercy, but, I wis,
As infinite a justice too.
As infinite a justice too.

[Organ : plagal-cadence.]

2.

ONE SINGETH.

John, Master of the Temple of God,
 Falling to sin the Unknown Sin,
 What he bought of Emperor Aldabrod,
 He sold it to Sultan Saladin—
 Till, caught by Pope Clement, a-buzzing there,
 Hornet-prince of the mad wasps' hive,
 And clipt of his wings in Paris square,
 They bring him now to be burned alive.

[And wanteth there grace of lute or clavicuthern, ye shall say to confirm him who singeth—]

We bring John now to be burned alive.

3.

In the midst is a goodly gallows built ;
 'Twixt fork and fork, a stake is stuck ;
 But first they set divers tumbrils a-tilt,
 Make a trench all round with the city muck,
 Inside they pile log upon log, good store ;
 Faggots not few, blocks great and small,
 Reach a man's mid-thigh, no less, no more,—
 For they mean he should roast in the sight of all.

CHORUS.

We mean he should roast in the sight of all.

4.

Good sappy bavins that kindle forthwith ;
 Billets that blaze substantial and slow ;
 Pine-stump split deftly, dry as pith ;
 Larch-heart that chars to a chalk-white glow :

Then up they hoist me John in a chafe,
 Sling him fast like a hog to scorch,
 Spit in his face, then leap back safe,
 Sing "Laudes" and bid clap-to the torch.

CHORUS.

Laus Deo—who bids clap-to the torch.

5.

John of the Temple, whose fame so bragged,
 Is burning alive in Paris square !
 How can he curse, if his mouth is gagged ?
 Or wriggle his neck, with a collar there ?
 Or heave his chest, while a band goes round ?
 Or threat with his fist, since his arms are spliced ?
 Or kick with his feet, now his legs are bound ?
 —Thinks John—I will call upon Jesus Christ.

[Here one crosseth himself.]

6.

Jesus Christ—John had bought and sold,
 Jesus Christ—John had eaten and drunk ;
 To him, the Flesh meant silver and gold.
 (Salva reverentia.)
 Now it was, "Saviour, bountiful lamb,
 I have roasted thee Turks, though men roast me.
 See thy servant, the plight wherein I am !
 Art thou a Saviour ? Save thou me !"

CHORUS.

'Tis John the mocker cries, Save thou me !

7.

Who maketh God's menace an idle word ?

—Saith, it no more means what it proclaims,
Than a damsel's threat to her wanton bird ?—
For she too prattles of ugly names.

—Saith, he knoweth but one thing,—what he knows ?
That God is good and the rest is breath ;
Why else is the same styled, Sharon's rose ?
Once a rose, ever a rose, he saith.

CHORUS.

O, John shall yet find a rose, he saith !

8.

Alack, there be roses and roses, John !

Some, honied of taste like your leman's tongue.
Some, bitter—for why ? (roast gaily on !)

Their tree struck root in devil's dung !
When Paul once reasoned of righteousness
And of temperance and of judgment to come,
Good Felix trembled, he could no less—
John, snickering, crook'd his wicked thumb.

CHORUS.

What cometh to John of the wicked thumb ?

9.

Ha ha, John plucks now at his rose

To rid himself of a sorrow at heart !
Lo,—petal on petal, fierce rays uncloset ;
Anther on anther, sharp spikes outstart ;

And with blood for dew, the bosom boils ;
And a gust of sulphur is all its smell ;
And lo, he is horribly in the toils
Of a coal-black giant flower of Hell !

CHORUS.

What maketh Heaven, that maketh Hell.

10.

So, as John called now, through the fire amain,
On the Name, he had cursed with, all his life—
To the Person, he bought and sold again—
For the Face, with his daily buffets rife—
Feature by feature It took its place !
And his voice like a mad dog's choking bark
At the steady Whole of the Judge's Face—
Died. Forth John's soul flared into the dark.

SUBJOINETH THE ABBOT DEODAET.

God help all poor souls lost in the dark !

TWO IN THE CAMPAGNA.

1.

I WONDER do you feel to-day
As I have felt, since, hand in hand,
We sat down on the grass, to stray
In spirit better through the land,
This morn of Rome and May ?

2.

For me, I touched a thought, I know,
Has tantalised me many times,
(Like turns of thread the spiders throw Mocking across our path) for rhymes
To catch at and let go.

3.

Help me to hold it : first it left
The yellowing fennel, run to seed
There, branching from the brickwork's cleft,
Some old tomb's ruin : yonder weed
Took up the floating weft,

4.

Where one small orange cup amassed
Five beetles,—blind and green they grope
Among the honey-meal,—and last
Everywhere on the grassy slope
I traced it. Hold it fast !

5.

The champaign with its endless fleece
Of feathery grasses everywhere !
Silence and passion, joy and peace,
An everlasting wash of air—
Rome's ghost since her decease.

6.

Such life there, through such lengths of hours,
Such miracles performed in play,
Such primal naked forms of flowers,
Such letting Nature have her way
While Heaven looks from its towers.

7.

How say you ? Let us, O my dove,
Let us be unashamed of soul,
As earth lies bare to heaven above.
How is it under our control
To love or not to love ?

8.

I would that you were all to me,
You that are just so much, no more—
Nor yours, nor mine,—nor slave nor free !
Where does the fault lie ? what the core
Of the wound, since wound must be ?

9.

I would I could adopt your will,
See with your eyes, and set my heart
Beating by yours, and drink my fill
At your soul's springs,—your part, my part
In life, for good and ill.

10.

No. I yearn upward—touch you close,
Then stand away. I kiss your cheek,
Catch your soul's warmth,—I pluck the rose
And love it more than tongue can speak—
Then the good minute goes.

11.

Already how am I so far
Out of that minute? Must I go
Still like the thistle-ball, no bar,
Onward, whenever light winds blow,
Fixed by no friendly star?

12.

Just when I seemed about to learn!
Where is the thread now? Off again!
The old trick! Only I discern—
Infinite passion and the pain
Of finite hearts that yearn.

A GRAMMARIAN'S FUNERAL

[Time—Shortly after the revival of learning in Europe.]

LET us begin and carry up this corpse,
Singing together.
Leave we the common crofts, the vulgar thorpes,
Each in its tether
Sleeping safe on the bosom of the plain,
Cared-for till cock-crow.
Look out if yonder's not the day again
Rimming the rock-row !
That's the appropriate country—there, man's thought,
Rarer, intenser, 10
Self-gathered for an outbreak, as it ought,
Chafes in the censer !
Leave we the unlettered plain its herd and crop ;
Seek we sepulture
On a tall mountain, citied to the top,
Crowded with culture !
All the peaks soar, but one the rest excels ;
Clouds overcome it ;
No, yonder sparkle is the citadel's
Circling its summit ! 20

Thither our path lies—wind we up the heights—

Wait ye the warning ?

Our low life was the level's and the night's ;

He's for the morning !

Step to a tune, square chests, erect the head,

'Ware the beholders !

This is our master, famous, calm, and dead,

Borne on our shoulders.

Sleep, crop and herd ! sleep, darkling thorpe and croft,

Safe from the weather !

30

He, whom we convoy to his grave aloft,

Singing together,

He was a man born with thy face and throat,

Lyric Apollo !

Long he lived nameless : how should spring take note

Winter would follow ?

Till lo, the little touch, and youth was gone !

Cramped and diminished,

Moaned he, " New measures, other feet anon !

My dance is finished ? "

40

No, that's the world's way ! (keep the mountain-side,

Make for the city.)

He knew the signal, and stepped on with pride

Over men's pity ;

Left play for work, and grappled with the world

Bent on escaping :

" What's in the scroll," quoth he, " thou keepest furled ?

Shew me their shaping,

Theirs, who most studied man, the bard and sage,—

Give ! "—So he gowned him,

50

Straight got by heart that book to its last page :

Learned, we found him !

Yea, but we found him bald too—eyes like lead,
 Accents uncertain :

“ Time to taste life,” another would have said,
 “ Up with the curtain ! ”

This man said rather, “ Actual life comes next !
 Patience a moment !

Grant I have mastered learning's crabbed text,
 Still, there's the comment. 69

Let me know all. Prate not of most or least,
 Painful or easy :

Even to the crumbs I'd fain eat up the feast,
 Ay, nor feel queasy ! ”

Oh, such a life as he resolved to live,
 When he had learned it,

When he had gathered all books had to give ;
 Sooner, he spurned it !

Image the whole, then execute the parts—
 Fancy the fabric 71

Quite, ere you build, ere steel strike fire from quartz,
 Ere mortar dab brick !

(Here's the town-gate reached : there's the market-place Gaping before us.)

Yea, this in him was the peculiar grace
 (Hearten our chorus)

Still before living he'd learn how to live—
 No end to learning.

Earn the means first—God surely will contrive
 Use for our earning. 81

Others mistrust and say—“ But time escapes,— “ Live now or never ! ”

He said, “ What's Time ? leave Now for dogs and apes !
 Man has For ever.”

Back to his book then : deeper drooped his head ;

Calculus racked him :

Leadén before, his eyes grew dross of lead ;

Tussis attacked him.

" Now, Master, take a little rest ! "—not he !

(Caution redoubled !

20

Step two a-breast, the way winds narrowly.)

Not a whit troubled,

Back to his studies, fresher than at first,

Fierce as a dragon

He, (soul-hydroptic with a sacred thirst)

Sucked at the flagon.

Oh, if we draw a circle premature,

Heedless of far gain,

Greedy for quick returns of profit, sure,

Bad is our bargain !

100

Was it not great ? did not he throw on God,

(He loves the burthen)—

God's task to make the heavenly period

Perfect the earthen ?

Did not he magnify the mind, shew clear

Just what it all meant ?

He would not discount life, as fools do here,

Paid by instalment !

He ventured neck or nothing—heaven's success

Found, or earth's failure :

110

" Wilt thou trust death or not ? " he answered " Yes.

" Hence with life's pale lure ! "

That low man seeks a little thing to do,

Sees it and does it :

This high man, with a great thing to pursue,

Dies ere he knows it.

That low man goes on adding one to one,
His hundred's soon hit :
This high man, aiming at a million,
Misses an unit. 120
That, has the world here—should he need the next,
Let the world mind him !
This, throws himself on God, and unperplexed
Seeking shall find Him.
So, with the throttling hands of Death at strife,
Ground he at grammar ;
Still, thro' the rattle, parts of speech were rife.
While he could stammer
He settled Hoti's business—let it be !—
Properly based Oun— 130
Gave us the doctrine of the enclitic De,
Dead from the waist down.
Well, here's the platform, here's the proper place.
Hail to your purlieus
All ye highfliers of the feathered race,
Swallows and curlews !
Here's the top-peak ! the multitude below
Live, for they can there.
This man decided not to Live but Know—
Bury this man there ? 140
Here—here's his place, where meteors shoot, clouds form,
Lightnings are loosened,
Stars come and go ! let joy break with the storm—
Peace let the dew send !
Lofty designs must close in like effects :
Loftily lying,
Leave him—still loftier than the world suspects,
Living and dying.

ONE WAY OF LOVE.

1.

ALL June I bound the rose in sheaves.
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves,
And strew them where Pauline may pass.
She will not turn aside ? Alas !
Let them lie. Suppose they die ?
The chance was they might take her eye.

2.

How many a month I strove to suit
These stubborn fingers to the lute !
To-day I venture all I know.
She will not hear my music ? So !
Break the string—fold music's wing.
Suppose Pauline had bade me sing !

3.

My whole life long I learned to love.
This hour my utmost art I prove
And speak my passion.—Heaven or hell ?
She will not give me heaven ? 'Tis well !
Lose who may—I still can say,
Those who win heaven, blest are they.

ANOTHER WAY OF LOVE.

1.

JUNE was not over,
Though past the full,
And the best of her roses
Had yet to blow,
When a man I know
(But shall not discover,
Since ears are dull,
And time discloses)
Turned him and said with a man's true air,
Half sighing a smile in a yawn, as 'twere,—
“ If I tire of your June, will she greatly care ? ”

2.

Well, Dear, in-doors with you !
True, serene deadness
Tries a man's temper.
What's in the blossom
June wears on her bosom ?

Can it clear scores with you ?

Sweetness and redness,

Eadem semper !

Go, let me care for it greatly or slightly !

If June mends her bowers now, your hand left unsightly

By plucking their roses,—my June will do rightly.

3.

And after, for pastime,

If June be refulgent

With flowers in completeness,

All petals, no prickles,

Delicious as trickles

Of wine poured at mass-time,—

And choose One indulgent

To redness and sweetness :

Or if, with experience of man and of spider,

She use my June-lightning, the strong insect-ridder,

To stop the fresh spinning,—why, June will consider.

“TRANSCENDENTALISM :”

A POEM IN TWELVE BOOKS.

STOP playing, poet ! may a brother speak ?
'Tis you speak, that's your error. Song's our art :
Whereas you please to speak these naked thoughts
Instead of draping them in sights and sounds.
—True thoughts, good thoughts, thoughts fit to treasure up !

But why such long prolusion and display,
Such turning and adjustment of the harp,
And taking it upon your breast at length,
Only to speak dry words across its strings ?
Stark-naked thought is in request enough— 10
Speak prose and holloa it till Europe hears !
The six-foot Swiss tube, braced about with bark,
Which helps the hunter's voice from Alp to Alp—
Exchange our harp for that,—who hinders you ?

But here's your fault ; grown men want thought, you think ;
Thought's what they mean by verse, and seek in verse :
Boys seek for images and melody,
Men must have reason—so you aim at men.
Quite otherwise ! Objects throng our youth, 'tis true,

We see and hear and do not wonder much. 20
 If you could tell us what they mean, indeed !
 As Swedish Bœhme never cared for plants
 Until it happened, a-walking in the fields,
 He noticed all at once that plants could speak,
 Nay, turned with loosened tongue to talk with him.
 That day the daisy had an eye indeed—
 Colloquised with the cowslip on such themes !
 We find them extant yet in Jacob's prose.
 But by the time youth slips a stage or two
 While reading prose in that tough book he wrote, 30
 (Collating, and emendating the same
 And settling on the sense most to our mind)
 We shut the clasps and find life's summer past.
 Then, who helps more, pray, to repair our loss—
 Another Bœhme with a tougher book
 And subtler meanings of what roses say,—
 Or some stout Mage like him of Halberstadt,
 John, who made things Bœhme wrote thoughts about ?
 He with a "look you !" vents a brace of rhymes,
 And in there breaks the sudden rose herself, 40
 Over us, under, round us every side,
 Nay, in and out the tables and the chairs
 And musty volumes, Bœhme's book and all,—
 Buries us with a glory, young once more,
 Pouring heaven into this shut house of life.

So come, the harp back to your heart again !
 You are a poem, though your poem's naught.
 The best of all you did before, believe,
 Was your own boy's-face o'er the finer chords
 Bent, following the cherub at the top 50
 That points to God with his paired half-moon wings.

MISCONCEPTIONS.

1.

THIS is a spray the Bird clung to,
Making it blossom with pleasure,
Ere the high tree-top she sprung to,
Fit for her nest and her treasure.
Oh, what a hope beyond measure
Was the poor spray's, which the flying feet hung to,—
So to be singled out, built in, and sung to !

2.

THIS is a heart the Queen leant on,
Thrilled in a minute erratic,
Ere the true bosom she bent on.
Meet for love's regal dalmatic.
Oh, what a fancy ecstatic
Was the poor heart's, ere the wanderer went on—
Love to be saved for it, proffered to, spent on !

ONE WORD MORE.

TO E. B. B.

1.

THERE they are, my fifty men and women
Naming me the fifty poems finished !
Take them, Love, the book and me together.
Where the heart lies, let the brain lie also.

2.

Rafael made a century of sonnets,
Made and wrote them in a certain volume
Dinted with the silver-pointed pencil
Else he only used to draw Madonnas :
These, the world might view—but One, the volume.
Who that one, you ask ? Your heart instructs you.
Did she live and love it all her life-time ?
Did she drop, his lady of the sonnets,
Die, and let it drop beside her pillow
Where it lay in place of Rafael's glory,
Rafael's cheek so duteous and so loving—
Cheek, the world was wont to hail a painter's,
Rafael's cheek, her love had turned a poet's ?

3.

You and I would rather read that volume,
(Taken to his beating bosom by it)
Lean and list the bosom-beats of Rafael,
Would we not ? than wonder at Madonnas—
Her, San Sisto names, and Her, Foligno,
Her, that visits Florence in a vision,
Her, that's left with lilies in the Louvre—
Seen by us and all the world in circle.

4.

You and I will never read that volume.
Guido Reni, like his own eye's apple
Guarded long the treasure-book and loved it
Guido Reni dying, all Bologna
Cried, and the world with it, " Ours—the treasure ! "
Suddenly, as rare things will, it vanished.

5.

Dante once prepared to paint an angel :
Whom to please ? You whisper " Beatrice."
While he mused and traced it and retraced it, (Peradventure with a pen corroded
Still by drops of that hot ink he dipped for,
When, his left-hand i' the hair o' the wicked,
Back he held the brow and pricked its stigma,
Bit into the live man's flesh for parchment,
Loosed him, laughed to see the writing rankle,
Let the wretch go festering thro' Florence)—
Dante, who loved well because he hated,
Hated wickedness that hinders loving,
Dante standing, studying his angel,—

In there broke the folk of his Inferno.
 Says he—"Certain people of importance"
 (Such he gave his daily, dreadful line to)
 Entered and would seize, forsooth, the poet.
 Says the poet—"Then I stopped my painting."

6.

You and I would rather see that angel,
 Painted by the tenderness of Dante.
 Would we not?—than read a fresh Inferno.

7.

You and I will never see that picture.
 While he mused on love and Beatrice,
 While he softened o'er his outlined angel,
 In they broke, those "people of importance :"
 We and Bice bear the loss forever.

8.

What of Rafael's sonnets, Dante's picture ?

9.

This : no artist lives and loves that longs not
 Once, and only once, and for One only,
 (Ah, the prize !) to find his love a language
 Fit and fair and simple and sufficient—
 Using nature that's an art to others,
 Not, this one time, art that's turned his nature.
 Ay, of all the artists living, loving,
 None but would forego his proper dowry,—
 Does he paint ? he fain would write a poem,—
 Does he write ? he fain would paint a picture,
 Put to proof art alien to the artist's,
 Once, and only once, and for One only,

So to be the man and leave the artist,
Save the man's joy, miss the artist's sorrow.

10.

Wherefore ? Heaven's gift takes earth's abatement !
He who smites the rock and spreads the water,
Bidding drink and live a crowd beneath him,
Even he, the minute makes immortal,
Proves, perchance, his mortal in the minute,
Desecrates, belike, the deed in doing.
While he smites, how can he but remember,
So he smote before, in such a peril,
When they stood and mocked—" Shall smiting help us ? "
When they drank and sneered—" A stroke is easy ! "
When they wiped their mouths and went their journey,
Throwing him for thanks—" But drought was pleasant."
Thus old memories mar the actual triumph ;
Thus the doing savours of disrelish ;
Thus achievement lacks a gracious somewhat ;
O'er-importuned brows becloud the mandate,
Carelessness or consciousness, the gesture.
For he bears an ancient wrong about him,
Sees and knows again those phalanxed faces,
Hears, yet one time more, the 'customed prelude—
" How should'st thou, of all men, smite, and save us ? "
Guesses what is like to prove the sequel—
" Egypt's flesh-pots—nay, the drought was better."

11.

Oh, the crowd must have emphatic warrant !
Theirs, the Sinai-forehead's cloven brilliance,
Right-arm's rod-sweep, tongue's imperial fiat.
Never dares the man put off the prophet.

12.

Did he love one face from out the thousands,
(Were she Jethro's daughter, white and wifely,
Were she but the Æthiopian bondslave,)
He would envy yon dumb patient camel,
Keeping a reserve of scanty water
Meant to save his own life in the desert ;
Ready in the desert to deliver
(Kneeling down to let his breast be opened)
Hoard and life together for his mistress.

13.

I shall never, in the years remaining,
Paint you pictures, no, nor carve you statues,
Make you music that should all-express me ;
So it seems : I stand on my attainment.
This of verse alone, one life allows me ;
Verse and nothing else have I to give you.
Other heights in other lives, God willing—
All the gifts from all the heights, your own, Love !

14.

Yet a semblance of resource avails us—
Shade so finely touched, love's sense must seize it.
Take these lines, look lovingly and nearly,
Lines I write the first time and the last time.
He who works in fresco, steals a hair-brush,
Curbs the liberal hand, subservient proudly,
Cramps his spirit, crowds its all in little,
Makes a strange art of an art familiar,
Fills his lady's missal-marge with flowerets.
He who blows thro' bronze, may breathe thro' silver,

Fitly serenade a slumbrous princess.
He who writes, may write for once, as I do.

15.

Love, you saw me gather men and women,
Live or dead or fashioned by my fancy,
Enter each and all, and use their service,
Speak from every mouth,—the speech, a poem.
Hardly shall I tell my joys and sorrows,
Hopes and fears, belief and disbelieving :
I am mine and yours—the rest be all men's,
Karshook, Cleon, Norbert and the fifty.
Let me speak this once in my true person,
Not as Lippo, Roland or Andrea,
Though the fruit of speech be just this sentence—
Pray you, look on these my men and women,
Take and keep my fifty poems finished ;
Where my heart lies, let my brain lie also !
Poor the speech ; be how I speak, for all things.

16.

Not but that you know me ! Lo, the moon's self !
Here in London, yonder late in Florence,
Still we find her face, the thrice-transfigured.
Curving on a sky imbrued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight,
Came she, our new crescent of a hair's-breadth.
Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato,
Rounder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.
Now, a piece of her old self, impoverished,
Hard to greet, she traverses the houseroofs,

Hurries with unhandsome thrift of silver,
Goes dispiritedly,—glad to finish.

17.

What, there's nothing in the moon note-worthy ?
Nay—for if that moon could love a mortal,
Use, to charm him (so to fit a fancy)
All her magic ('tis the old sweet mythos)
She would turn a new side to her mortal,
Side unseen of herdsman, huntsman, steersman—
Blank to Zoroaster on his terrace,
Blind to Galileo on his turret,
Dumb to Homer, dumb to Keats—him, even !
Think, the wonder of the moonstruck mortal—
When she turns round, comes again in heaven,
Opens out anew for worse or better ?
Proves she like some portent of an ice-berg
Swimming full upon the ship it founders,
Hungry with huge teeth of splintered chrystals ?
Proves she as the paved-work of a sapphire
Seen by Moses when he climbed the mountain ?
Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu
Climbed and saw the very God, the Highest,
Stand upon the paved-work of a sapphire.
Like the bodied heaven in his clearness
Shone the stone, the sapphire of that paved-work,
When they ate and drank and saw God also !

18.

What were seen ? None knows, none ever shall know.
Only this is sure—the sight were other,
Not the moon's same side, born late in Florence,

Dying now impoverished here in London.
God be thanked, the meanest of his creatures
Boasts two soul-sides, one to face the world with,
One to show a woman when he loves her.

19.

This I say of me, but think of you, Love !
This to you—yourself my moon of poets !
Ah, but that's the world's side—there's the wonder—
Thus they see you, praise you, think they know you.
There, in turn I stand with them and praise you,
Out of my own self, I dare to phrase it.
But the best is when I glide from out them,
Cross a step or two of dubious twilight,
Come out on the other side, the novel
Silent silver lights and darks undreamed of.
Where I hush and bless myself with silence.

20.

Oh, their Rafael of the dear Madonnas,
Oh, their Dante of the dread Inferno,
Wrote one song—and in my brain I sing it,
Drew one angel—borne, see, on my bosom !

THE END.

LONDON :

BRADBURY AND EVANS, PRINTERS, WHITEFRIARS

By the same Author.

POEMS

BY

ROBERT BROWNING.

A NEW EDITION.

In Two Vols., Foolsap. Price 16s.

CHRISTMAS-EVE AND EASTER-DAY.

A Poem.

BY ROBERT BROWNING.

Foolsap 8vo. Price 6s.

Poems by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

P O E M S

BY

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING.

THIRD EDITION.

In Two Vols., Foolscap 8vo. Price 16s.

CASA GUIDI WINDOWS.

A Poem.

BY

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

Foolscap 8vo. Price 6s.

INDEX OF FIRST LINES.

	PAGE
Ah, did you once see Shelley plain	162
All I believed is true!	70
All June I bound the rose in sheaves	299
All that I know	79
Among these latter busts we count by scores	257
Beautiful Evelyn Hope is dead	16
But do not let us quarrel any more	167
Clean the poet, (from the sprinkled isles	269
Dear and great Angel, wouldst thou only leave	266
Dear, had the world in its caprice	95
Escape me?	110
Fee, faw, fum! bubble and squeak!	260
Grand rough old Martin Luther	281
Had I but plenty of money, money enough and to spare	19
Hist, but a word, fair and soft!	122
How well I know what I mean to do	43
I am poor brother Lippo, by your leave!	26
I dream of a red-rose tree	254
I only knew one poet in my life	111
I said--Then, dearest, since 'tis so	115

	PAGE
I wonder do you feel to-day.	291
It was roses, roses, all the way	120
June was not over	300
Karshish, the picker-up of learning's crumbs	60
Let them fight it out, friend! things have gone too far	176
Let us begin and carry up this corpse	294
Let's contend no more, Love	24
My first thought was, he lied in every word.	87
My love, this is the bitterest, that thou	54
Never any more	181
No more wine? then we'll push back chairs and talk	128
Of the million or two, more or less	80
Oh, Galuppi, Baldassaro, this is very sad to find!	39
Oh, what a dawn of day!	9
Room after room.	109
Said Abner, "At last thou art come! Ere I tell, ere thou speak	231
So far as our story approaches the end.	96
So, I shall see her in three days	179
Stand still, true poet that you are	283
Stop playing, poet! may a brother speak '	302
Take the cloak from his face, and at first	178
That fawn-skin-dappled hair of hers	83
That was I, you heard last night.	76
The Lord, we look to once for all	286
The morn when first it thunders in March	185
There's a palace in Florence, the world knows well.	99
There they are, my fifty men and women	305
This is a spray the Bird clung to.	304
Where the quiet-coloured end of evening smiles	5
Your ghost will walk, you lover of trees	252

INDEX OF TITLES.

- After, 178.
 Andrea del Sarto (called "The Faultless Painter"), 167.
 Another Way of Love, 300.
 Any Wife to any Husband, 64.

 Before, 176.
 Bishop Blougram's Apology, 128.
 By the Fire-side, 43.
 "Child Roland to the Dark Tower came," 87.
 Cleon, 269.
 "De Gustibus—," 252.
 Epistle containing the Strange Medical Experiences of Kar-shish, the Arab Physician, 60.
 Evelyn Hope, 16.
 Fra Lippo Lippi, 26.

 Grammarian's Funeral, A, 294.
 Guardian Angel, The: a Picture at Fano, 266.

 Heretic's Tragedy, The. A Middle-age Interlude, 286.
 Holy Cross Day (on which the Jews were forced to attend an annual Christian sermon in Rome), 260.
 How it strikes a Contemporary, 111.

 In a Balcony, 196.
 In a Year, 181.
 In Three Days, 179.
 Instans Tyrannus, 80.

 Last Ride Together, The, 115.

 Life in a Love, 110.
 Light Woman, A, 96.
 Love among the Ruins, 5.
 Love in a Life, 109.
 Lover's Quarrel, A, 9.

 Master Hugues of Saxe-Gotha, 122.
 Memorabilia, 162.
 Mesmerism, 70.
 Misconceptions, 304.
 My Star, 79.

 Old Pictures in Florence, 185.
 One Way of Love, 299.
 One Word More. To E. B. R., 305.

 Patriot, The—An Old Story, 120.
 Popularity, 283.
 Pretty Woman, A, 83.
 Protus, 257.

 Respectability, 95.

 Saul, 231.
 Serenade at the Villa, A, 76.
 Statue and the Bust, The, 99.

 Toccata of Galuppi's, A, 39.
 "Transcendentalism:" a Poem in Twelve Books, 302.
 Twins, The, 281.
 Two in the Campagna, 291.

 Up at a Villa—Down in the City. (As distinguished by an Italian person of quality), 19.

 Woman's Last Word, A, 24.
 Women and Roses, 254.

NOTES

PAGE 5. Love Among the Ruins. In the later edition there are seven stanzas instead of fourteen, two of these being written as one.

PAGE 17. l. 3. The good stars met in your horoscope. In earlier days great weight was attached to the position of the stars at the time of a child's birth—hence the expression 'to be born under a lucky star'. A horoscope is a plan of the heavens showing the position of the stars at any given moment.

PAGE 19. Up at a Villa. Nowhere does Browning's dramatic power of projecting himself into another character show itself more clearly than in this poem. Though not a nature poet in the ordinary sense of the phrase, he had a keen appreciation of the beauties of earth and sea and sky, and not Wordsworth himself observed more minutely the details of plant or rock; but here he gives us the point of view of the man to whom all wild-flowers are included under the generic term 'Rubbish of the fields', and whose highest praise for a rose or lily is that 'it might be artificial'. Browning delights in studying antitheses, and many of his poems fall into groups. Place Up at a Villa beside David's great hymn of Nature in Saul or Home Thoughts from Abroad; there can be no doubt which expresses the poet's own feeling, and yet his sympathy with the city-bred Italian who finds is genuine. He neither condemns nor despises; he simply presents him.

All the year long at the villa, nothing 's to see . . .

PAGE 21. l. 12. cicala, an insect, very common in Italy, which makes a noise something like a grasshopper. In late summer the whole air quivers with their incessant sound.

PAGE 22. 1. 5. Pulcinello: the original 'Punch' of Punch and Judy shows.

1. 11. Dante: Dante Alighieri (1265-1321), author of the Divina Commedia, and greatest of all the poets of Italy. The Divine Comedy is divided into three parts and describes the poet's vision of life hereafter in Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise. His descriptions are so vivid, that it is said as he passed along the streets women would call their children to them and say, 'Look at the man who has been in hell.'

Boccaccio (1313-75), noted both as poet and story-teller. His most famous work, the Decameron, describes how a number of ladies and gentlemen flee from the plague at Florence, and, shutting themselves up in a beautiful garden, beguile the time by telling each other witty and romantic tales. It was this which probably first gave Chaucer the idea of the Canterbury Tales, and his Knight's Tale is taken from another work of Boccaccio's, a romance in twelve books called the Teseide.

Petrarca (1304-74), noted for his learning and for his exquisite love-poems. He also had considerable influence on Chaucer, whose Tale of Griselda was

Lerned at Padowe of a worthy clerk

Frauncis Petrark, the laureat poet.

Saint Jerome (c. 340-420 A.D.): one of the Fathers of the Church, noted for his learning and austerity of life. He translated the Old Testament from Hebrew into Latin, thus producing the version known as the Vulgate. He was a great controversialist, and towards the end of his life provoked such bitter hostility that he was compelled to flee for his life and to remain in concealment for two years. Tradition says that a lion became his faithful companion, and in pictures St. Jerome is usually represented sitting reading, with the lion at his feet.

PAGE 26. Fra Lippo Lippi (1412-69). To the mind of the mediaeval Churchman beauty was a snare, and the flesh existed merely that it might be subdued. Relics and images were venerated for their sacred properties: their appearance was beside the question. But in the thirteenth century came the dawn of that marvellous era of art which placed Italy among the great nations of the world. Cimabue's Madonna carried in triumph through the street which was called 'Glad' in her honour, marks the beginning of a period when, as Mr. J. A. Symonds puts it, art was to regulate men's modes of thought. Instead of contenting themselves with religious symbols, painters turned with passionate interest to the world around them, and this interest led on the one hand to a keen appreciation of beauty for beauty's sake, and on the other to a care for the actualities of life which made it worth while to paint street-urchin and contadino.

This world's no blot for us
Nor blank—it means intensely, and means good:
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

The greatest artists of all found in this a nobler means of expressing that love and awe which form the soul of all religion, but in many cases, as in that of Fra Lippo Lippi, the connexion between art and religion became purely formal. 'In proportion as painters fortified themselves by study of the natural world, their art became more secular. Mysticism gave way to realism. It was felt that much beside religious sentiment was worthy of expression.'¹

You've seen the world
The beauty and the wonder and the power,
The shapes of things, their colours, lights, and shades,
Changes, surprises—and God made it all.

.
But why not do as well as say—paint these
Just as they are, careless what comes of it?
God's works—paint any one, and count it crime
To let a truth slip.

¹ J. A. Symonds, Renaissance in Italy, p. 135.

For don't you mark, we're made so that we love
 First when we see them painted, things we have passed
 Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see.

Filippo Lippi, the son of a butcher, left an orphan at an early age, and picking up a living about the streets of Florence, until at eight years old he was registered in the Community of the Carmelite friars of the Carmine, was a representative of the new order of things. He was a friar, not from religious conviction, but because it was easier to take the vows than to starve. He painted because he could not help it, and he painted saints and martyrs because pictures of that type paid best. The revival of learning, and the strange blending of paganism and Christianity which resulted from it, affected him far less than it affected his pupil Botticelli. It was the actual world around him in which he was interested, and he saw no incongruity in painting a runaway nun as the Madonna, or calling the prior's niece 'St. Lucy'. The defence which Browning puts into his mouth is far more religious in tone than we should expect; but in this, as in many other instances, the poet is expressing his own point of view as well as that of the subject of the poem. He is giving us at once a dramatic presentation of a complex and passionate character, and his own conception of one side of renaissance art. Cf. Introduction, p. xvii.

1. 17. Cosimo of the Medici (1389-1464). The Medici were a family of merchant princes who made themselves masters of Florence from the fourteenth century to the eighteenth century. Cosimo was noted not only for his administrative ability, but also for his love of literature and art. He was the patron of Fra Lippo Lippi.

PAGE 30. l. 121. The Eight: 'the Eight of War' was a new magistracy, created in 1375, when Florence was at war with the Pope.

1. 139. Carmelites: one of the four orders of mendicant friars. They took their name from Mount Carmel, claiming Elijah as their founder, and the wife of Obadiah as the first abbess of their order.

Camaldolese: members of the religious order founded by St. Romuald at Camalodi, near Florence, in 1012.

PAGE 32. 1. 189. Giotto (c. 1266-1336), one of the most famous of the early Italian painters, noted for his purity and sweetness of religious feeling. Tradition says that he was a shepherd-boy who was found by Cimabue drawing pictures as he watched his sheep. His wonderful bell-tower is referred to in Old Pictures in Florence.

PAGE 33. 1. 235. Brother Angelico (1387-1455): a Dominican monk noted for the saintliness of his life and the beauty and simplicity of his paintings, who was to the art of the Renaissance very much what George Herbert was to the poetry of the seventeenth century. He thought it wrong to study anatomy, and his figures are often woefully out of drawing; but their colouring is extraordinarily pure and beautiful, and the religious fervour which inspires all that he does gives them a peculiar charm of their own. The cells of the convent of San Marco in Florence are adorned with frescoes of his painting.

1. 236. Brother Lorenzo (c. 1370-1425), called 'Il Monaco' (the monk), was a member of the convent of the Camaldolese monks of 'the Angeli' in Florence. His paintings, though religious in spirit, are stiff and cold.

PAGE 35. 1. 276. his name is Guidi. Tomaso Guidi (1401-28), called 'Masaccio', was a painter far in advance of his time. Numerous frescoes on the walls of the chapel of the Carmine are from his hand.

PAGE 38. 1. 377. Iste perfecit opus. The picture referred to was painted by Lippi in 1441 as an altar-piece for the nuns of St. Ambrogio. It represents the Coronation of the Virgin, amidst a band of saints and angels. One of the attendant monks is the artist himself, and an angel close by holds a scroll towards him, on which is written Iste perfecit opus (He accomplished the work). The picture is now in the Accademia of Florence.

PAGE 39. A Toccata of Galuppi's. A toccata is a piece of music devised in the first place to show off the skill of the performer, and in the second, the capabilities of the instrument. It was often improvised, and was full of rapid scale passages and sudden chords.

Baldassare Galuppi (1706-85), a noted musician of his day, who wrote both church music and opera. Metastasio speaks of him as a very good writer for stringed instruments, but 'a very bad workman for poets' (Oxford History of Music, vol. iv, p. 245). Browning seems to have chosen his name at random, and the choice is an instance of his curious, superficial knowledge of the by-ways of music.

Stanza 2. St. Mark's: the great cathedral of Venice.

where the Doges used to wed the sea with rings: on the feast of the Ascension the Doge, or ruler, of Venice went in state and cast a ring into the Adriatic as a symbol of the union between Venice and the sea.

Stanza 3. Shylock's bridge: the Rialto.

PAGE 40. stanza 6. clavichord, the forerunner of the modern square piano, a keyed instrument of very delicate tone.

stanza 7. those suspensions, those solutions: suspension is the process of arresting one note in a chord while the others move on, 'the part which is stayed in this manner commonly produces dissonance, which is relieved by its then passing on to the position it would naturally have occupied sooner had the motion of the parts been simultaneous' [Grove's Dictionary]: solution is the passing from a chord on which it is impossible to stay, to that to which it leads,

e. g.  is a suspension and its resolution.

PAGE 41. stanza 8. the dominant is the fifth note of the scale of any key counting upwards. It marks the key, and forms 'the point of rest in the imperfect cadence or half close, and the point of departure to the tonic in the perfect cadence or full close' [Grove's Dictionary].

PAGE 43. By the Fire-side: cf. Introduction, p. xv, and note, p. 328.

PAGE 50. stanza 37. chrysolite: a precious stone which varies in colour from pale yellow to dark green. One of the stones mentioned in Revelation xxi. 20.

PAGE 55. Any Wife to any Husband. Cf. Introduction p. xv.

PAGE 57. l. 11. Titian's Venus: Tiziano Vecelli, called Titian (c. 1477-1576), one of the most famous of Italian painters, noted for the richness of his colouring and his delight in sensuous beauty. He has painted more than one famous Venus.

PAGE 60. l. 17. snake-stone: certain stones were supposed to have semi-magical properties which made them able to cure snake-bites. These stones were rare, and were naturally much valued.

PAGE 61. l. 28. Some say Vespasian cometh, some, his son: Vespasian, Emperor of Rome from 70 to 79 A. D. Both he and his son Titus were famous generals, and it was Titus who besieged and captured Jerusalem (A. D. 70).

l. 42. viscid, clammy.

cholera, a bilious ailment.

l. 43. In tertians: a tertian fever recurs every second day.

l. 44. falling-sickness: an illness in which the patient is seized with a fit and falls to the ground—a popular name for epilepsy.

l. 50. sublimate, something which has been reduced to vapour by heat and then condensed again; in this case it is a particular medicine which has been thus prepared.

PAGE 62. l. 55. gum-tragacanth: (goat-thorn: astragalus tragacanthus) a thorny shrub which exudes resinous gum.

Its medicinal properties were well known to the ancients, and are mentioned by Celsus and Pliny.

l. 57. the porphyry, i. e. the marble of which the mortar was composed.

PAGE 63. l. 89. conceit, fancy.

l. 109. Sanguine, active, energetic. Doctors recognized four kinds of temperament, choleric, lymphatic, nervous, and sanguine.

l. 110. habit, condition.

PAGE 65. l. 177. Greek fire, one of the most dreaded weapons employed by the soldiers of the East. It was a kind of liquid fire which adhered to whatever it touched. Greek fire proper was not invented until the siege of Constantinople (A. D. 673-9)—long after the supposed date of this poem—but liquid fire in some form was known to the Assyrians.

PAGE 68. l. 282. nitrous, containing nitre or saltpetre, a chemical compound much used in medicine.

PAGE 70. Mesmerism: Mrs. Browning was much interested in spiritualism and mesmerism, and in later years fell for a time under the influence of the notorious medium, David Home. From the outset, Browning himself regarded these questions with suspicion; his shrewd common sense saw the ease with which imposture could be practised—as he showed later, in his portrait of Mr. Sludge the Medium—and his innate reverence for all things spiritual made him shrink from the thought of meddling with matters too high for human knowledge. The last two stanzas of this poem show how strong this reverence was, and how deeply he felt the responsibility of such an attempt to dominate the soul of another. While fully alive to the power of influence, Browning has the greatest respect for individuality. Any Wife to any Husband turns on the impossibility of forcing any one on to a higher level: Mesmerism emphasizes the danger of endeavouring to subjugate some one else's personality.

PAGE 72. l. 5. calotypist, photographer. The calotype process was invented about 1840; it is not now in use.

PAGE 73. l. 10. tractile, obedient, capable of being led in any direction.

PAGE 80. Instans Tyrannus. Cf. Introduction, p. xix. The keynote of Browning's religion is his belief in the direct intercourse between God and the soul, and the mysterious forces which man consequently has at command. Here is a man so mean that he has not even a friend, but let him once catch at God's skirts and pray, and the tyrant is powerless against him. Again and again Browning comes back to this thought of the individual; it permeates Christmas Eve, it confronts us in Cleon and in Karshish; it is the secret of the poet's unwavering faith that

God's in His Heaven;
All's right with the world.¹

PAGE 81. l. 5. spilth, literally that spilled from the flagon, i. e. liquor.

l. 28. gravamen, burden. Lat. gravare, to weigh down.

PAGE 87. Childe Roland: Childe is an old term for knight—cf. Horn Child, Childe Harold.

It is not often that Browning gives us a purely descriptive poem, and even in this the growing horror and disgust of Childe Roland himself are what impress us most—it is dramatic description. But while human interest in some form or other is almost always the centre of any poem of Browning's, his power of vivid description is unsurpassed. He has the gift of selection, of choosing detail which bears directly on the main theme; the ragged thistle-stalks and torn docks in stanza 12, the 'stiff blind horse'—said to have inspired the poem—the 'sudden little river . . . As unexpected as a serpent,' stand out with almost terrifying distinctness. The details themselves are simple and natural enough, there is none of the theatrical effect which often mars Byron's finest passages,

¹ Pippa Passes.

but through them all quivers a sense of human passion. The forest walk in By the Fire-side begins quietly enough. The mountain-path strewn with thorny chestnut balls and edged with rose-flesh mushrooms and crimson creeper, leads to a tiny chapel. The whole scene stands before our eyes; we hear the small bird that sings all day, we see the brown hawks with wide wings 'Strained to a bell'; but even in this purely descriptive part of the poem there is a tensivity of feeling which marks it off from any similar description of Wordsworth's.¹ It is not 'emotion recollected in tranquillity', but emotion lived through once more, and we feel no surprise when

. . . the silence grows
To that degree, you half believe
It must get rid of what it knows,
Its bosom does so heave.

Tennyson and Byron too often regard Nature as a setting for their own despair. The beautiful descriptions of In Memoriam and Childe Harold, exquisite as they are, have a touch of morbidity; and the lesser poets who have striven to catch their note call to mind the tourist who is photographed with Niagara as a background. Browning is never guilty of this form of poetic fallacy, simply because he is never self-conscious. He feels intensely, and his feeling colours what he sees, but he does not stop to consider himself and his emotion. He never attains the great serenity of Wordsworth or Milton, he never leaves us face to face with Nature, but he carries us with him in his rapture of joy or pain or adoration. The description of the lunar rainbow in Christmas Eve breathes the same spirit which inspires Vaughan's,

I saw Eternity the other night.

Browning's use of simile in description is worthy of notice. He has something of Spenser's fondness for giving a complete picture by way of simile or illustration, or of drawing some moral parallel, but whereas in Spenser this checks the action and helps to make it detached and remote, in Browning illustration and parallel are so closely associated with the original theme that they serve to heighten the feeling. The last line of stanza 21 of Childe Roland, and the parenthesis in stanza 25, are excellent examples of his method. He is particularly successful in describing the Italy that he loved, in giving clear-cut outlines and vivid colours, but Childe Roland shows that he is also capable of painting a far colder and sterner landscape.

¹ e. g. Prelude, l. 271, &c.

PAGE 89. l. 21. calcine, burn.

PAGE 90. l. 8. colloped, made tender by beating.

PAGE 92. l. 7. cirque, circle.

l. 17. Tophet, hell.

PAGE 94. l. 23. slug-horn: a corruption of slogan, a war-cry. A slug-horn is a horn blown as a challenge to those whom it summons.

PAGE 95. Respectability. Here, as in the Statue and the Bust, Browning shows his impatience of mere conventionality as such. It is not that he is in sympathy with those who set all law at defiance, but he runs a-tilt at the idea that it is the name that matters, not the thing. His own life showed that he could overstep the bounds of commonplace propriety when necessary, without losing his natural love of order. Respectability is a cry of impatience over the minutiae of conventional behaviour; the Flight of the Duchess is an illustration of the deadening power of formalism carried to extremes.

l. 15. And feel the Boulevard, &c., i. e. watch the lights of the Paris boulevard.

l. 21. the Institute: L'Institut National on the Quai Voltaire is the meeting-place of the various 'academies' of France, i. e. the learned bodies which encourage art, science, and literature.

l. 22. Guizot (1787-1874), a famous French historian and statesman.

Montalembert (1810-70), a noted French statesman, author, and orator.

l. 23. lampions, small lamps.

PAGE 97. l. 10. basilisk, a fabulous monster which possessed the power of killing with a glance.

PAGE 99. The Statue and the Bust. Cf. Introduction, p. x.

PAGE 100. l. 39. By Cosimo and his cursed son, cf. p. 322. The Medici destroyed the republic of Florence.

PAGE 101. l. 57. catafalck, a stage, usually erected in the nave of a church, on which a coffin rests. Here it is used for the funeral procession.

l. 72. Ave-bell: a bell rung at morning, midday, and evening, as a call to prayer. The name comes from the opening words of the prayer: Ave Maria—Hail Mary.

PAGE 102. l. 94. Arno, the river on which Florence stands.

PAGE 105. l. 169. Robbia's craft: Luca della Robbia (1399-1482), a famous sculptor and modeller, specially noted for the production of figures in glazed or enamelled terra-cotta. The statue and the bust are both to be seen in the Piazza dell' Annunziata in Florence. The bust stands at a window of the Palazzo Riccardi-Mannelli, and the bronze statue of the duke in the centre of the square.

PAGE 106. l. 187. cornice, an ornamental moulding which projects from the part which it finishes.

l. 202. John of Douay: Gian Bologna (1524-1608), born at Douai, but educated in Florence; a famous sculptor.

PAGE 108. l. 250. De te fabula; the whole phrase runs mutato nomine de te fabula narratur, change the name and the story applies to you.

PAGE 110. Life in a Love. Cf. Introduction, p. xi.

PAGE 111. How it strikes a Contemporary. The chief interest in this poem lies in its revelation of Browning's conception of the function of a poet. Many poets and critics have attempted to define poetry and to discuss its purpose. To one the poet is a prophet, to another a feigner or maker of fables, to a third a man 'endowed with more lively sensibility, more enthusiasm and tenderness, who has a greater knowledge of human nature and a more comprehensive soul than are supposed to be common among mankind': to Browning he is the man who sees:

He took such cognisance of men and things,
If any beat a horse, you felt he saw;
If any cursed a woman, he took note;
Yet stared at nobody—

the true judge and keeper of order,

Doing the King's work all the dim day long;

the man with something of Lazarus's gift of seeing things in their right proportion. And such a man, though he may be left to poverty, though he may suffer apparent neglect, is yet recognized, however dimly, as the real 'Corregidor'.

The town's true master if the town but knew,

having a secret authority which makes men fear his judgments. Cf. Memorabilia, p. 335, and Popularity, p. 347.

PAGE 111. l. 3. Valladolid: the chief town of the province of that name in Spain. It was conquered by the Moors, but recaptured from them in the tenth century.

PAGE 114. l. 90. the Corregidor: the chief magistrate of a Spanish town.

l. 115. the Prado: the fashionable promenade of Madrid.

PAGE 117. l. 21. They scratch his name on the Abbey-stones, i. e. give him a tomb in Westminster Abbey.

PAGE 121. l. 11. Brescia: capital of the province of Brescia in Northern Italy. Browning was greatly interested in the Italian patriots who followed Garibaldi, and more than one of his poems refer to the wars of 1848-59.

PAGE 122. Master Hugues of Saxe-Gotha: an imaginary German organist, created by Browning for the occasion.

PAGE 123. stanza 7. helve, handle.

stanza 8. claviers: keyboards. Germ. klavier, piano.

PAGE 124. stanza 10. sciolists: a sciolist is one who has only superficial knowledge of a subject.

shent: rebuked. OE. scendan, to put to shame.

stanza 14. discept, contend, disagree. Lat. disceptare.

PAGE 125. stanza 16. crepitant: lit. crackling; a noise resembling a series of minute explosions.

strepitant, boisterous, noisy.

O Danaides, O Sieve: Danaus, in Greek mythology, was the King of Argos and the father of fifty daughters, the Danaides. These daughters were sought in marriage by their fifty cousins, sons of Aegyptus. On the wedding-night all but one of the Danaides murdered their husbands in revenge for an old wrong done by Aegyptus to their father, and as a punishment they were compelled in the under-world for ever to pour water into a sieve. They are invoked as symbolic of a never-ending dispute which leads to nothing.

PAGE 125. stanza 17. the casuist Escobar's: a casuist is a person who applies general rules of religion or morality to particular cases. The term is often used to imply quibbling or hair-splitting. Escobar y Mendoza (1589-1669) was a famous Jesuit and casuist. His theory, that purity of intention atones for evil action, was bitterly attacked by Pascal.

stanza 18. Est fuga, volvitur rota. 'It flies; the wheel turns round.' A play upon the musical term 'fugue'.

stanza 19. riposting: a riposte is a quick, short thrust in fencing, given after parrying a lunge from the opponent. It is usually given without moving from the spot, before the adversary has time to recover his guard.

PAGE 126. stanza 20. tickens: ticking, a strong material made of linen or cotton.

PAGE 127. stanza 28. meâ pœnd, 'at my risk.'

Gorgon: the monster slain by Perseus. Every one who met the Gorgon's gaze was turned to stone.

mode Palestrina: Palestrina was a famous musician of the sixteenth century.

PAGE 128. l. 6. Pugin: a well-known architect who designed and modelled a large part of the decorations and sculpture for the Houses of Parliament (1836-7). He became a Roman Catholic and most of his plans were for Catholic churches.

PAGE 129. l. 34. Corpus Christi Day: the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, which is observed by all Catholics as a feast in honour of the Blessed Sacrament.

l. 45. Che ch'é: a common Italian exclamation.

PAGE 130. l. 54. Count D'Orsay: the last of the famous dandies, of the early nineteenth century. He was an intimate friend of Louis Napoleon, and was noted for his handsome person, brilliancy, and wit.

PAGE 131. l. 108. Balzac (1799-1858): a famous French realistic novelist.

PAGE 132. l. 114. Parma's pride, the Jerome: Correggio's great picture of St. Jerome. 'Parma's pride' because Correggio was born at Parma.

l. 115. Correggio: Antonio Allegri, commonly called Correggio, an Italian painter of the sixteenth century, noted for the sensuous beauty of his figures, and his wonderful management of light and shade. He is said to have studied at Modena, but this is uncertain.

PAGE 134. l. 184. Euripides (480-406 B.C.), one of the most famous of Greek poets and dramatists, said to have produced ninety-two dramas. Among the most famous of his tragedies are the Medea, the Alcestis, the Hippolytus, and the Troades.

PAGE 138. l. 316. or rather Hildebrand's: Hildebrand (c. 1020-85), as Gregory VII, became one of the greatest and most famous of all the Popes, and did much to organize the Church and establish its supremacy.

PAGE 140. l. 381. Verdi (1813-1901), a popular composer of Italian opera.

PAGE 141. l. 386. Rossini (1792-1868), the greatest of Italian operatic composers. His best-known operas are the Barber of Seville, William Tell, and Semiramis.

l. 411. Schelling (1775-1854), a famous German philosopher.

PAGE 143. l. 475. Austerlitz: a small town in Moravia, at which Napoleon defeated the combined forces of Russia and Austria (1805).

PAGE 145. l. 516. Giulio Romano (Giulio dei Giannuzzi) (1492-1546): a pupil of Raphael's, painter and architect. He belongs to the period when Italian art was in its decadence, but his work shows a certain grandeur of conception.

Dowland, an English composer of the sixteenth century. In 1597 he published 'The First Booke of Songes or Ayres of foure parts with Tableture for the Lute', a work which afterwards became extremely popular.

l. 519. Pandulph of fair Milan cardinal, the quotation is from King John, III. i. 138.

PAGE 147. l. 577. Strauss, chief of the Tübingen school, and author of the famous Leben Jesu (Life of Jesus), was a German critic who applied to the New Testament the same method of investigation which had already been applied to Greek and Roman traditions, and rejected everything of a miraculous nature.

PAGE 151. l. 703. brother Newman, Cardinal Newman.

l. 704. the Immaculate Conception, the doctrine that the Virgin Mary was free from all taint of original sin, which in 1854 was declared to be an article of faith in the Roman Church.

l. 715. King Bomba's lazzaroni, &c. King Bomba was an opprobrious title bestowed upon Ferdinand II of Naples (1810-59), in consequence of his cruel bombardment of the city. Lazzaroni = ragamuffins.

l. 716. Antonelli, a famous Cardinal of the day.

PAGE 152. l. 728. The Naples liquefaction: St. Januarius was a Christian martyr of the fourth century. His body is preserved at Naples, where there are also phials said to contain his blood. On three festivals in each year—as well as on occasions of any great public danger or calamity—these phials are carried in solemn procession to the high altar of the Cathedral; prayer is offered, and the dry blood then becomes liquid and is shown to the people for veneration. Enormous crowds assemble to witness the miracle, and if there is any delay the people frequently urge St. Januarius to make haste and not to keep them waiting.

l. 744. Fichte (1797–1879), a German metaphysical philosopher who wrote works on speculative theology.

PAGE 158. l. 914. fictile, made of pottery.

l. 915. Anacreon, a Greek poet of the sixth century B. C., famous for his drinking-songs.

PAGE 160. l. 972. in partibus Episcopus, nec non: a bishop in partibus means a bishop who derives his title from some old see which has fallen away from the Catholic faith, e. g. the Bishop of Emmaus.

PAGE 162. Memorabilia. Browning more than once recurs to the inability of the world to recognize a poet when they see him. To him, the mere fact of having met Shelley is enough to dignify and distinguish a man, as the mere fact of picking up an eagle's feather makes memorable the place where you found it; but the commonplace man of the world cannot realize the difference between Shelley and any other chance acquaintance, and Browning's wonder and rapture seem to him far-fetched and ludicrous.

PAGE 167. Andrea del Sarto (1487–1531). Browning chooses Fra Lippo Lippi to represent the realistic side of Renaissance art; Andrea del Sarto to represent its passion for sensuous beauty. Andrea d'Agnolo (nicknamed del Sarto—the tailor) was called by his contemporaries 'the faultless painter'. His technique was perfect, and as a colourist he introduced new and beautiful effects, his silver-grey harmonies being partiicularly lovely and characteristic. But in his paintings, even more than in Lippo Lippi's, we are conscious of a certain incongruity between subject and title. There is no depth of feeling or devotion in his sacred pictures, his Madonnas are so many beautiful society women—they do not even represent the more tender side of motherhood, they are studies of the fair, false wife who betrayed him. His story was a tragic one. Francis I of France being struck by the beauty of his work, invited him to Paris and loaded him with favours. But Lucrezia wearied of the French court, and persuaded her husband to ask leave of absence for a while, that he might visit his native land. Permission was readily granted, and the king entrusted him with a large sum of money with which to buy works of art. Once back in Florence, Andrea forgot all claims of gratitude and honour, and squandered not only his own money, but the king's. Ashamed to return and face his friend and patron, he stayed on year after year, until at last he was reduced to great poverty. His wife left him, and finally he died of the plague, alone and unfriended. The idea which underlies the poem—the inability of mere sensuous beauty to satisfy the artistic sense—is worked out more fully in Old Pictures in Florence, stanzas 15-19.

PAGE 167. l. 15. Fiesole, a village on the hills north-east of Florence.

PAGE 170. l. 93. Morello: Monte Morello, a mountain near Florence.

l. 104. the Urbinate: Raffaello Santi, commonly called Raphael, was born at Urbino in 1483 and died in 1502. He is specially famous as a painter of sacred pictures, perhaps the best-known of all his works being the so-called Sistine Madonna at Dresden. He was of a remarkably sweet and lovable nature, 'indeed, judged by the lax standard of those times, he might be called almost immaculate' (J. A. Symonds, Renaissance in Italy, p. 240).

l. 105. George Vasari (1511-74), an Italian architect and painter, famous as a biographer and critic of artists.

PAGE 171. l. 129. Angelo: Michaelangelo Buonarroti, commonly called Michaelangelo (1475-1564), painter, sculptor, architect, poet, and engineer. Among his most famous works are the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican, the great statue of David at Rome, and the wonderful tomb in the Medici Chapel at Florence, with its four gigantic recumbent figures of Night, Morning, Dawn, and Twilight.

PAGE 172. l. 149. Fontainebleau: famous for its château and the beautiful forest that surrounds it. A favourite pleasure-resort of the kings of France.

PAGE 175. l. 262. Leonard: Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519) was as universal a genius as Michaelangelo. Famous as painter, sculptor, author, and musician, he also invented machinery and devised new engines of war, and new methods of draining marshes. He drew up the plans for Milan Cathedral, and at the same time his minute and careful studies of flowers and plants have botanical as well as artistic value. Among his most famous works are the wonderful fresco of the Last Supper in the refectory of the Convent of Santa Maria delle Grazie, at Milan; the portrait of Mona Lisa, in the Louvre; and the Madonna among Rocks, in the National Gallery.

PAGE 177. l. 8. misfeasance, wrong.

PAGE 185. Old Pictures in Florence. In this poem Browning is expressing in terms of art a favourite thought, which in the Grammarians' Funeral and Abt Vogler he expresses in terms of religion:

That low man seeks a little thing to do,

Sees it and does it:

This high man, with a great thing to pursue

Dies ere he knows it.

.

That, has the world here—should he need the next,

Let the world mind him!

This, throws himself on God, and unperplexed

Seeking shall find Him.

It is the eternal contrast between purpose and achievement, or, in artistic language, between romantic and classical. Greek art, as Browning takes it here, represents perfection of form, the complete expression of a finite thought—

Simple beauty and nought else,—

an ideal above attainment, but not above comprehension.

Growth came when, looking your last on them all,
You turned your eyes inwardly one fine day
And cried with a start—What if we so small
Are greater, ay, greater the while than they !
Are they perfect of lineament, perfect of stature ?
In both of such lower types are we
Precisely because of our wider nature ;
For time, theirs—ours for eternity.

Fresco and picture may fade and die, but those who wrought them, those mighty souls whose reach exceeded their grasp, have gained the perfect vision.

Now that they see God face to face
And have all attained to be poets, I hope.

Thus the faultiness of execution, which is the necessary outcome of human limitations, is of comparatively small moment:

Things learned on earth, we shall practise in heaven—
the point lies in the learning. The early painters and sculptors make a special appeal to Browning, because they strove after an ideal which was far beyond their reach. The poem ends, characteristically, with a note of hope. Art is not dead, but it can flourish only in a land of ideals. When Italy shakes off the Austrian yoke and Freedom is once more restored to Florence, some great soul may be found fit to complete Giotto's Tower,—

Pure Art's birth being still the republic's.

The poet looks forward to the day when Mazzini's motto, 'God and the people,' shall be triumphant, believing that in that new birth the older Renaissance will be rightly understood.

Stanza 2. the startling bell-tower Giotto raised: one of the most beautiful buildings in Florence is 'Giotto's Tower'— the campanile (bell-tower) of the Cathedral. It is built of exquisitely coloured marbles, and the carving and tracery are extraordinarily delicate and fine.

PAGE 187. stanza 8. Dello (1603-58), a painter of historical subjects.

Stanza 9. Stefano (1301-50): Stefano Fiorentino, also called Stefano de Ponte Vecchio, and Lo Scrimmia (the ape). The only work of his that has escaped destruction is a picture of the Virgin and Child, at Pisa.

Stanza 10. its transit: later, altered to sic transit.

PAGE 188. stanza 12. And bringing your own shortcomings there: later altered to Earth here, rebuked by Olympus there Stanza 13. Theseus: the Athenian hero who, with the help of Ariadne, killed the Minotaur, and afterwards became King of Athens. A famous statue, representing him as seated, was carved by Phidias on the west pediment of the Parthenon, and is now among the Elgin Marbles in the British Museum. 'Hapless Theseus sits and shall sit for ever,' Virgil, Aeneid, vi. 617 (Mackail's translation).

Son of Priam: Hector, the leader of the Trojans: frequently represented in Greek friezes.

Apollo, the sun-god, was the son of Jupiter and Latona. Juno, moved by jealousy, sent the serpent Python to torment Latona, and Apollo's first action was to destroy this monster. He was noted for his grace and beauty, and one of the most famous Greek statues is that of the Apollo Belvedere in Rome.

Niobe, daughter of Tantalus and wife of Amphion, King of Thebes, boasted that her children were more beautiful than Apollo and his sister Artemis. In revenge, Apollo slew them. The famous group representing Niobe vainly trying to protect her children from the arrows of the sun-god, was carved either by Scopas or Praxiteles (see Pliny, Nat. Hist., xxxvi. 28), and is now in the Uffizzi Gallery at Florence.

Racers' frieze, carved by Phidias on the north side of the Parthenon; now in the British Museum.

Alexander, the second name of Paris, son of Priam, who was killed by Philoctetes at the end of the Trojan War.

PAGE 189. stanza 14. the worsted's duty: later altered to a mortal's duty.

God's own plan: later altered to God's clear plan.

PAGE 190. stanza 17. was just (was it not?) 'O': Vasari says that the Pope once sent a messenger to Giotto, asking for a specimen of his skill as an artist. Instead of the picture which the messenger expected to carry back with him, Giotto merely drew, with one sweep of his brush, a perfect circle, and gave him that.

Stanza 19. Replied, &c. Later, To become now self-acquainters.

Stanza 20. full honour and glory: later altered to their guerdon and glory.

quiddit, Lat. quidditas, a scholastic term meaning a captious argument, or subtlety. See Hamlet, v. i. 94: 'Where be his quiddits now?'

allocution, formal address, speech.

our degree: later altered to, your degree.

PAGE 191. stanza 21. congeries, collections of various things brought together.

Stanza 23. Niccolo the Pisan (c. 1206-78): Niccola Pisano, architect and sculptor, the real founder of Italian art. He first showed the modern world how to combine reverence for antiquity with fidelity to nature, and thus breathed new life into sculpture. His work shows that union of Hellenism and Christianity which was to prove the dominating factor in Renaissance art.

Cimabue (c. 1240-c. 1302), one of the first painters to study from a living model. His great picture of the Madonna, still preserved in the Church of Santa Maria Novella at Florence, marked the dawn of a new era in painting. It was carried to its place, crowned with roses, and preceded by trumpeters; all Florence hailing it with delight. Cimabue's saints and angels have still something of the stiffness of the earlier Byzantine and Romanesque figures, but they show an attempt to represent emotion, to be more than mere symbols; the painter is no longer content with traditional treatment and conception, though he is still hampered by them.

Ghiberti (1378-1455), architect and sculptor. He designed and executed the reliefs on two of the great bronze gates of the Baptistry at Florence.

Ghirlandajo (1449-c. 1494): Domenico Bigordi, called Ghirlandajo, a skilful but unimaginative painter, particularly noted for his use of fresco; the master of Michael Angelo.

PAGE 192. stanza 25. Such doom, &c., later altered to, Such doom, how a captive might be out-ferreted.

Stanza 26. Sandro (1447-1510): Alessandro Filipepi, called Sandro Botticelli, pupil of Fra Lippo Lippi. His work shows to a marked degree the intermingling of ancient and modern thought—Spring, for example, being in sympathy with the spirit both of Greece and of the Middle Ages—he is at once mystic and classical. The grace and lightness of his figures, and the beauty of his drapery are specially noticeable. In later life he came under the influence of Savonarola, and is said to have abandoned painting after the great preacher's death.

Lippino (1457-1504), the natural son of Fra Lippo Lippi, noted for his religious paintings. Several of his pictures have been wrongly attributed to other artists.

Taddeo Gaddi (c. 1300-66), the godson of Giotto. Many of his frescoes have disappeared, but some of his work is still to be seen in the Church of Santa Croce at Florence, and at Pisa, and several of his altar-pieces remain.

intonaco, rough cast.

Lorenzo Monaco. Cf. p. 323.

Stanza 27. Pollajolo (1429-98), goldsmith and sculptor, noted for the almost savage energy of his figures.

Alesso Baldovinetti (1427-99), one of the most prominent masters of the early Florentine Renaissance, noted for his extensive backgrounds and careful treatment of nature.

PAGE 193. stanza 28. Margheritone of Arezzo (1216-93), painter, sculptor, and architect.

barrel, cap.

Stanza 28. you bald, &c., later 'old' is inserted before 'saturnine'.

Stanza 29. Zeno, a Greek philosopher who flourished about 500 B. C.

Carlino, sculptor and architect of the late thirteenth and early fourteenth centuries.

Stanza 30. Buried: later altered to Was buried.

Stanza 31. San Spirito: a famous Florentine basilica, containing a large number of pictures by famous Italian masters, including one by Lippo Lippi.

Ognissanti: the Church of San Salvatore d'Ognissanti, which contains works by Giotto, Ghirlandajo, and others.

detur amanti: let it be given to him who loves it.

PAGE 194. stanza 31. Persian Sofi: a sofi, or sufi, is a Mohammedan mystic.

Stanza 32. Radetzky: commander of the Austrian forces in Northern Italy. In 1848, at the age of 82, he was driven out of Milan, but ultimately he succeeded in re-entering the city, and in compelling Venice to surrender. He ruled the Lombard and Venetian territories till 1857.

Stanza 33. We'll shoot, &c.; later altered to This time, we'll shoot better game and bag 'em hot.

No display: later altered to No mere display.

Witan-agemot, gathering of wise men; the name given to the council of the nation in pre-Conquest days.

'Casa Guidi,' quod videas ante: Casa Guidi was the name of Browning's villa in Florence; which see above—the reference is to stanza 1.

To ponder: later altered to Shall ponder.

Loraine: in 1737 Tuscany was given to Francis of Loraine, the husband of Maria Theresa, Empress of Austria. After various vicissitudes it once more came back to the house of Loraine after the French occupation of 1815.

Orgagna: a painter and sculptor of the sixteenth century; the pupil of Andrea del Sarto.

Stanza 34. Say fit things; later altered to Utter fit things.

Set truth, &c. ; later altered to Feel truth at blood-heat and falsehood at zero rate.

PAGE 195. stanza 35. spare of an 'issimo': the Italian suffix which marks the superlative.

ending our half-told tale of Cambuscan: Cambuscan is the hero of Chaucer's unfinished Squire's Tale. Browning is referring to the lines in Il Penseroso:

Or call up him that left half-told
The story of Cambuscan bold.

altitissimo: in the later editions this was altered to alt to altissimo, high to highest. Altitissimo is a word coined for the occasion.

beccaccia, woodcock.

Duomo, cathedral.

braccia, literally, arms, i. e. cubits.

Stanza 36. God and the People: Mazzini's motto.

Foreseeing the day: later altered to At least to foresee that glory of Giotto.

PAGE 196. In a Balcony. Cf. Introduction, p. xx.

PAGE 201. l. 130. Rubens, Peter Paul (1577-1640), one of the greatest Flemish painters, famous for the richness and warmth of his colouring.

PAGE 211. l. 412. baladine, a dancer.

PAGE 231. Saul. Cf. Introduction, p. xix.

Saul, Karshish, and Cleon all centre round the same thought, a thought expressed in Abt Vogler's cry that it is impossible to

Doubt that thy power can fill the heart that thy power expands.

Cleon, beating against the wall of human limitations, and Saul, agonizing 'drear and stark, blind and dumb', need the same message. David pours out before the king all the lavish profusion of nature, all the glory of undying fame, but though Saul stirs, he does not fully awaken:

Then the truth came upon me . .

.

Would I suffer for him that I love? So wilt Thou--so wilt Thou.

.
O Saul it shall be
A Face like my face that receives thee: a Man like to me, Thou shalt love and be loved by, for ever! a Hand like this hand shall throw open the gates of new life to thee! See the Christ stand!

Once again Browning insists on that intimate personal relationship which he feels can alone solve the problems of life.

PAGE 234. stanza 6. jerboa, a little furred animal something like a mouse, with legs like a miniature kangaroo, and a very long tail. It lives in a burrow in the sand, and if frightened it leaps away at an extraordinarily rapid pace.

PAGE 244. stanza 14. Hebron: Mount Hebron, south-west of Jerusalem.

Kidron: the brook Kidron, a deep depression east of Jerusalem, which is dry not only in summer, but often in winter, though a storm speedily turns it into a torrent.

PAGE 253. l. 19. his Bourbon arm: Ferdinand II of Naples—'King Bomba'—was descended from the Spanish branch of the Bourbon family. Cf. note on p. 151, l. 715.

PAGE 257. Protus, an entirely imaginary portrait of an entirely imaginary emperor, characteristic of Browning in its power of summing up a wealth of suggestion in a few lines. The prosaic possibilities following the poetic babyhood are in keeping with the peculiar dry common sense which underlies Browning's work. No poet is more pitilessly true to the probabilities of life,¹ or tumbles us more abruptly from the pathetic or the sublime to the grotesque. Wordsworth was accused of striding into the drawing-room, flinging a piece of mud on the carpet, and crying, 'There is a better man than any of you;' Browning, with all his passion, all his love of beauty and colour, all his fervent idealism, is as uncompromising a realist as the poet of Betty Foy or Harry

¹ Cf. Introduction, p. ix.

Gill. Nor is it only in the daring which combines in one poem the dainty tenderness of the baby face, with violets there,

Violets instead of laurel in the hair,
As those were all the little locks could bear.

and the commonplaceness of the man

last of use
About the hunting-stables, that this poem is characteristic. Its view of empire is what we should expect of the friend of Garibaldi. There is no glamour about the throne, but its position affords opportunity for particular dramatic effect, and the dramatist takes advantage of the fact. The portrait of John the Smith is not without a suggestiveness of its own.

PAGE 257. l. 4. loric, corselet, breastplate.

l. 10. Byzant, Byzantium, i.e. Constantinople the capital of the Eastern Empire.

PAGE 262. Holy Cross Day. In this poem, as in The Privilege of Burial, Browning lays bare the senseless impiety of religious persecution. Possibly the fact that he himself was brought up a Nonconformist in an age of religious tests and disabilities may have quickened his sympathies with the oppressed. The width of his own toleration is shown in Christmas Eve. Cf. Introduction, p. 15.

Stanza 9. the Corso, one of the chief streets of Rome.

PAGE 265. stanza 19. the Ghetto: a part of the city set aside for the Jews, and to which they were strictly confined. Jews in the Middle Ages were compelled to wear a special dress to distinguish them, and were treated with every kind of injustice and indignity.

PAGE 266. Fano: a little town on the Adriatic coast.

PAGE 267. stanza 6. Guercino, Giovanni Francesco Barbieri, called Guercino (squint-eyed), an Italian painter of the seventeenth century.

Alfred, dear friend: Alfred Domett, the same friend who in another poem is addressed as 'Waring'.

PAGE 268. stanza 8. Wairoa: a river in the North Island of New Zealand.

PAGE 269. Cleon. Here Browning approaches the thought contained in the Grammarian's Funeral and Abt Vogler from the other side. Instead of the perfect confidence of the man who believes that this life is but the prologue to something fuller and grander, we see the restless yearning of the philosopher, painter, and poet, who finds life 'inadequate to joy', and conscious of capacities beyond the limitations of the body, dares at times imagine to his need

Some future state revealed to us by Zeus,
Unlimited in capability
For joy, as this is in desire for joy,

but yet dares only hint at it.

With a touch of dramatic irony, Browning makes his imaginary philosopher contemporary with 'one called Paulus'. Unknown to himself, he longs for Christianity, but to this cultured Greek, Christus and Paulus alike are barbarian Jews:—

Thou wrongest our philosophy, O king,
In stooping to inquire of such an one.

And so he refuses the key to the mystery which perplexes him.

l. 4. in his Tyranny: tyrant originally meant no more than a despotic ruler.

PAGE 271. l. 51. phare, lighthouse.

l. 52. Pœcile, a porch adorned with paintings of historical and religious subjects.

PAGE 273. l. 140. Terpander: the father of Greek music. He flourished between 700 and 650 B. C. Before his time the Greek lyre had only four strings; he added another three.

l. 141. Phidias and his friend: Phidias was the most famous of all the great Greek sculptors. He was the friend of Pericles, and flourished at the time when Greek art was in its perfection. The Parthenon—the great temple of Athena, which crowns the Acropolis at Athens—was designed by him, and many of the sculptures which adorned it were the work of his own hands. Among other things, he carved the famous statue of Athena herself—a figure of ivory and gold, forty feet high—which guarded Athens. Contemporary with him was Praxiteles, sculptor of the great Hermes at Olympia.

PAGE 279. l. 6. Sappho: the one famous poetess of antiquity, author of many love lyrics. The greater number of her works have been lost, though recently a fragment of hers was discovered in Egypt. She lived in the seventh century B. C.

l. 7. Æschylus (525–456 B. C.) is said to have produced seventy tragedies. Only seven remain—The Persians, The Seven Against Thebes, The Suppliants, Prometheus, Agamemnon, The Choephori, and The Eumenides, the three last forming a trilogy.

PAGE 283. Popularity. To Browning, as to Carlyle, the poet is the interpreter. In this parable of the sea-shell he would have us see that the poetic gift consists not in the power to create some new thing, but in making men realize what is already there, in showing the marvellous Tyrian blue concealed in what the commonplace man takes for 'Mere conches! not fit for warp or woof!' It is always easy to see a thing when once it has been pointed out: Hobbs and Nobbs, Nokes and Stokes, Brown, Smith, and Robinson can imitate the poet in more or less unintelligent ways, but if the poet had not opened their eyes they would have seen nothing but a shell-fish to the end of time, and they are genuine plagiarists for having taken his 'dye of dyes', they have no idea how to use it. Where Keats sees a miracle of wonder and beauty, they see an extract 'priced and saleable at last'; but while the poet is left unregarded and unknown, these little men attain a rapid and cheap popularity, and to them falls the material reward.

PAGE 284. l. 14. Astarte: the Greek and Roman form of the name Ashtoreth, the chief goddess of the Phoenicians. The Greek goddess Aphrodite was derived from her.

PAGE 285. l. 24. murex: a genus of sea-snail with a very beautiful spikey shell. The famous purple dye of Tyre—that sold by Lydia, Acts xvi. 14—was obtained by crushing the shells of several species of murex.

PAGE 286. The Heretic's Tragedy. Cf. Introduction, p. ix. The Knights Templars were a military order founded in the twelfth century to protect pilgrims going to Jerusalem. By degrees they gained such enormous wealth and power, that the jealousy of the French kings was aroused. The Templars were accused of practising the most horrible crimes in secret, and numbers of them were tortured to death. The order was abolished in 1312. On March 18, 1314, Jacques du Bourg-Molay, late grand master, was burnt alive in Paris. In this, as in the poems dealing with the treatment of the Jews, Browning is showing the extraordinary callousness engendered by religious persecution. There is no fierce passion, eager to destroy the enemies of the Lord, nothing of the Old Testament spirit of horror and fury at the sight of an Achan; the whole thing is done with a placid orderliness which is far more horrible than any outburst of rage. The Latin names at the beginning are the titles of popular songs, to be used—as they often were—by the Church in her service. Hock-tide: Hock Tuesday was the second Tuesday after Easter. Originally it was a festival held to commemorate the defeat of the Danes, and it was kept as a general holiday. Rosa Mundi, Rose of the World. Seu, fulcite me floribus, 'Support me with flowers.' Cantuque Virgilius, a Virgil in song. Gavius eram, 'I was glad' (Ps. cxvii). Jessides, the Son of Jesse.

plagal cadence: plain chaunt melodies had at first only four modes (or scales), which were called the 'Authentic Modes'. Later, four other modes were added, called 'Plagal Modes'. Plagal-cadence is the form in which the chord of the tonic is preceded by that of the sub-dominant, i.e. this is a technical direction to the organist.

PAGE 287. stanza 2. the Emperor Aldabrod, an imaginary potentate created by Browning.

Sultan Saladin, a later sultan than Richard I's great enemy.

Pope Clement V, the pope who suppressed the order of Knights Templars.

Stanza 4. bavins, faggots of small wood used for kindling a fire.

PAGE 288. l. 17. Salvi reverentii, reverence being maintained; a form of apology for using such words as those applied to John.

PAGE 289. stanza 8. When Paul once reasoned of righteousness: Acts xxvi. 28.

PAGE 297. ll. 86, 88. Calculus, an internal disease; Tussis, a cough; instances of Browning's habit of giving a quaint tincture of learning to certain poems by using technical phraseology.

l. 95. hydroptic, thirsty.

PAGE 298. l. 129. he settled Hoti's business, &c. Hoti (that) and Oun (therefore) are Greek particles. The Grammarian systematized the rules governing their correct use.

l. 131. the enclitic De: an enclitic particle is connected with the preceding word; it may be used to intensify the force of the demonstrative, e.g. ᾄδε, this man.

PAGES 299, 300. One Way of Love and Another Way of Love. Compare with these two, Love in a Life and Life in a Love.

PAGE 302. l. 6. prolusion, prelude.

PAGE 303. l. 22. Bahme: Jacob Böhme, a German religious mystic of the seventeenth century.

l. 37. him of Halberstadt: Johannes Gleim, a German minor poet of the early nineteenth century.

PAGE 304. l. 11. dalmatic, an ecclesiastical vestment, with loose, hanging sleeves. At one time it was worn by persons of high rank as a mark of dignity.

PAGE 305. One Word More: cf. Introduction, p. xiv. E. B. B. Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

PAGE 306. stanza 3. Her, San Sisto names, i. e. the Sistine Madonna.

Foligno: this picture, representing the Virgin reposing on clouds, was originally painted for the high altar of the chapel of Ara Coeli. Later, it was removed to Foligno, and it is now in the Vatican.

Her, that visits Florence in a vision: this picture is now in the Pitti Palace.

Her, that's left with lilies in the Louvre: La Belle Jardinière.

Stanza 4. Guido Reni (1575-1642), a famous Italian painter who spent the last years of his life at Bologna.

Stanza 5. Dante's love for Beatrice Portinari is told by him in the Vita Nuova. When first he saw her she was a child of eight, and he never knew her at all intimately, but throughout his life she remained his ideal of womanhood, and it was she who guided him through the Paradise of his vision. In the Inferno he describes the sufferings endured by all those whom he considered the enemies of good, and it is this which makes Browning speak of him as hating wickedness; he had no mercy on the evil.

PAGE 307. Stanza 7. Bice, a contracted form of Beatrice.

PAGE 308. stanza 10. Proves, perchance, his mortal in the minute, i. e. shows his human weakness at that very moment.

PAGE 309. stanza 12. Jethro's daughter, Zipporah, whom Moses married.

PAGE 310. stanza 16. Samminiato, a conspicuous church on a hill to the south-east of Florence.

PAGE 311. stanza 17. Zoroaster, founder or reformer of the ancient Parsee religion of Persia. To the Parsees, light is the symbol of God; hence their reverence for sun, moon, planets, and, failing these, fire. Zoroaster himself is said to have spent much time in studying the stars.

Galileo (1564-1642), the great Italian astronomer who first discovered the fact that the earth moves round the sun.

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN
AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS, OXFORD
BY VIVIAN RIDLER
PRINTER TO THE UNIVERSITY

